BRITISH EMPIRE PROCLAIMS ALL DOMINIONS AUTONOMOUS

Principle, Long Accepted but Never Officially Declared, Accords Each the Right to Make Its Own Treaties.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The British Empire today entered a new epoch, with the mother country and the dominions officially recorded as equal and autonomous units. No member of the British commonwealth of nations is subordinate to any other. England and London remain the center of the empire by tradition, sentiment and common allegiance to the crown, but each self-governing member of the empire is master of its own destiny.

This principle has been admitted hitherto, but never was formally outlined until today, when the Committee of Premiers, who have been deliberating in secret in Downing street for a month, made their report on inter-imperial relations.

By this action, the demands of the dominions, which Premier Hertzog of South Africa so strongly voiced on his arrival in London last month, have been fully realized.

Wording of the Report.

The exact words of the report, as adopted by the conference, are:

"The position and mutual relations of the group of self-governing communities composed of Great Britain and the dominions, may be readily defined. They are autonomous communities within the British Empire, equal in status and in no way subordinate one to the other in any aspect of their domestic or external affairs though united by a common allegiance to the crown and freely associated as members of the British commonwealth of nations."

The report briefly reviewing recent history, says the tendency of the dominions toward equality of status is both right and inevitable.

Geographical and other conditions make this impossible of attainment by way of a federation. The only alternative is by way of autonomy, "and long this road it has been steadily sought. Every self-governing member of the empire is now master of its destiny. In fact, if not always in form, it is subject to no compulsion whatever."

As One in Ideals.

The report continues: "But no account, however, accurate, of negative relations in which Great Britain and the dominions stand to each other can do more than express a portion of the truth. The British Empire is not founded upon negations. It depends essentially, if not formally, on positive ideals. Free institutions are its life blood, free co-operation its instrument, and peace, security and progress among its objectives."

The report opens with a discussion of the relations between the various parts of the empire and makes the following points:

It proposes to change the title of the King, eliminating the term "United Kingdom." This is prompted by the fact that Ireland has become a dominion and is no longer part of the kingdom.

It declares that a Governor-General should be the representative of the crown only, not of the British Government.

It recommends the appointment of a special committee to consider the competence of the dominion parliaments to give their legislation extra-territorial effect on other points arising from dominion legislation, with a subcommittee to deal with merchant shipping legislation.

Treaty-Making Powers.

With regard to relations with foreign countries, the report seeks to give full application to the resolution on the negotiation of treaties which was adopted at the last conference.

It recommends that in future treaties the British Ministers shall sign for Great Britain only instead of for the empire, with each dominion signing for itself, Canada signing immediately after Great Britain.

It recognizes that in foreign relations neither Great Britain or the dominions could be committed to acceptance of active obligations without the definite assent of their own governments.

The change in the King's title will be the third in 50 years.

Legislation now will be introduced in Parliament changing the wording to conform more accurately with Ireland's new status. King George's new title will read: "George V, by Grace of God, of Great Britain, Ireland and the British Dominions Beyond the Seas King, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India."

BAD ACTORS MUST STAY HOME

Japan Refuses Passports to Mediocre Entertainers.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Nov. 20.—There may have been too many "bad" actors" among the Japanese who have been going abroad as entertainers during the last several years, say Government officials, and hereafter passports will be given only to real "talent." Mediocre entertainers tend to give Japan a bad reputation in Europe and America, according to the Foreign office.

Recently more than 30 Japanese actors were refused passports.

LEOPOLD SAYS HE WILL BE MUTE WITNESS

Asserts He Will Merely Give Name at Trial of Six Convicts.

By the Associated Press.

JOLIET, Ill., Nov. 20.—Nathan F. Leopold Jr., sentenced with Richard Loeb to life imprisonment two years ago for the murder of 14-year-old Bobby Franks was brought to the courthouse here today to testify in the trial of six fellow-convicts charged with murdering Peter M. N. Klein, Deputy Warden, in a prison break, but warned attorneys he would be a mute witness.

"When I am on the witness stand I will merely give my name and address and say nothing more," Leopold said to Francis Loughran of defense counsel.

"I warn you not to question me too intensively as you will only get me in contempt of court."

"What do you care?" Loughran replied. "You are not going any place anyway."

That Leopold's ideas of his future coincided with Loughran's was indicated in the young prisoner's interview with Mrs. Mary Belle Spencer, Chicago attorney for two Mexicans, who were among those who escaped from the penitentiary only to be recaptured and charged with murder.

"I have to make the best of it—I'll be there the rest of my life, you know," he said to Mrs. Spencer.

Leopold, a notably neat dresser, when he was on trial, was garbed in a brown prison-made "discharge suit," such as the penitentiary provides for prisoners who have served their sentences.

Despite his reluctance to testify, it was indicated Leopold would be called Monday morning.

The State rested its case this afternoon, and in its opening statement the defense said clemency for the men on trial would be asked because they are of immature minds.

JOSEPH M'KENNA, EX-SUPREME COURT JUSTICE, 83, DIES

End Comes at Home in Washington After Several Months of Failing Health.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL IN M'KINLEY CABINET

Went to Highest Tribunal in 1898, Retired in 1925 —Wrote Opinions in Important Cases.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21, (Sunday)—Joseph McKenna, retired justice of the Supreme Court, died early today at his home here.

After several weeks of gradually failing health, which took a sudden turn last night, the end came at 1:40 a. m. His son and three daughters were at his bedside.

Beaten paths led Joseph McKenna to the United States Supreme Court, where he became by length of service senior Associate Justice. Like some of his colleagues and predecessors, he had served upon a lower Federal bench, and like others he had occupied the office of Attorney-General of the United States, but his elevation to a place on the nation's highest judicial body was generally attributed to a friendship formed in Congress.

President McKinley, with whom he had served in the House of Representatives, called him from a United States Circuit Court to his Cabinet, and nine months later, in 1898, when his administration as a law officer of the government had not been a complete success, placed him upon the bench of the Supreme Court to succeed another Westerner, Justice Stephen K. Field of California.

Demeanor Austere and Distant.

While regarded by his friends as possessing an engaging personality, and held by them in the highest esteem, the general demeanor of Justice McKenna was austere, severe and distant. Even while occupying the political office of Representative in Congress he maintained an atmosphere of reserve and restraint, and when he ascended the bench his judicial robes magnified the impression of exclusiveness which his natural characteristics of reticence and retirement had created.

On the Supreme Court bench he was temperamental at times during the argument of counsel, showing what some lawyers considered impatience and harshness in propounding inquiries and in commenting upon cases under consideration, but attorneys practicing before the Court soon learned that these mannerisms were not a true index to the man himself. When brought into unofficial contact with him off the bench, they found under the veneer a most kindly consideration, joined with that degree of courteous and painstaking conventionality commonly associated with the old school of colonial aristocrats. He at all times unstintingly devoted himself to the business before the Court, and frequently ignored his own personal convenience to give patient attention to those who sought him.

Had Colleagues' Confidence.

His colleagues imposed the utmost confidence in his ability as a justice. He was frequently selected to prepare the opinion of the court in important cases, among them being the United Shoe Machinery Litigation under the Sherman law; various cases relating to the inheritance tax, and those designated as "freedom of speech" controversies arising from war legislation. His independent reasoning frequently was shown by dissenting opinions.

Born in Philadelphia, Aug. 10, 1843, of Irish parentage, Joseph McKenna was but 12 years old when his family crossed the continent and made Benicia, Calif., their home. There he attended public school and was graduated in law from the Benicia Collegiate Institute. He was elected district attorney of Solano county in 1866.

After two years in the lower house of the California legislature, he served in the Forty-ninth and three succeeding congresses.

Resigning from Congress at the request of President Harrison to become United States Circuit Judge, he had served five years upon the circuit which included his home state of California, when he laid aside the ermine to re-enter political life when his close personal friend, President McKinley invited him into the Cabinet.

Justice McKenna married in 1865, Amanda F. Borneman of San Francisco, Cal.

Plates on Which Forged Denver Bonds Were Printed Here

EXPLAIN PRINTING BOGUS CITY BONDS IN $600,000 PLOT

Officers of St. Louis Lithographing Concern Deny Guilty Knowledge of Denver Conspiracy.

When the Heinicke-Fiegel Lithographing Co., 115 Pine street, in business since 1889, received an order last summer for the printing of 600 Denver (Colo.) waterworks bonds, with a face value of $1,000 each, the officers of the company had no idea they were being duped by a man who was later to forge signatures and seals to the bonds and sell $240,000 of them to brokerage firms before being detected.

Realization that they had been made innocent parties to a colossal counterfeiting plot came yesterday when two St. Louis detectives raided the Pine street plant, confiscating six lithographic stones and three zinc plates, used to print the bonds, and the correspondence which had passed between the company and the counterfeiter.

Charles C. Land, 71-year-old president of the firm, and Edwin M. Heinicke, 34-year-old chief clerk, accompanied the detectives to headquarters and there told Chief of Detectives Kaiser just how a $319.50 order had involved them in a $600,000 conspiracy.

Learn How They Were Duped.

They learned that "A. C. Alt & Co.," with which they have done business, was not known in Denver, but was merely another alias for Earl A. Pivan, 28, the counterfeiter, an advertising man in the mornings who disguised himself with gray wig and mustache for the afternoons to become "C. A. Coe" of the brokerage firm of C. A. Coe & Co.

Arrested in Denver Friday, Pivan made a confession, which led to the seizure of the printing equipment and correspondence here. Pivon promised to produce the $240,000 derived from his counterfeiting. Of the unsold certificates, $207,000 worth were recovered by police, and Pivan said he had burned the rest.

Last May there arrived at the Heinicke-Fiegel plant a letter signed by "A. C. Alt" inquiring as to the cost of printing 600 bonds each to bear 45 interest coupons. The letterhead read: "A. C. Alt & Co., Printers, Stationers and Engravers, Box 2634, Denver, Colo."

The Heinicke-Fiegel then wrote to Alt, asking him to send a sample bond. Alt replied, inclosing a genuine Denver waterworks bond, asking that exact copies be made, except for the hand-written signatures and seals of city and county officers. The writer specified that the bonds must be printed on Dresden Parchment or Old Hampshire Bond paper, 24-pound weight, and must be "strictly first-class quality equal to the bond inclosed."

Company "Not Yet Rated."

"We are just organizing and are not yet rated," he continued, "but we can arrange to pay part when order is placed and part when completed."

To this the Heinicke-Fiegel company answered that 600 copies would be printed for $319.50—half to be paid in advance, a quarter when proofs were furnished and the other quarter when the bonds were delivered.

This was acceptable, and the order was entered as of July 19.

TUNNEY TAKES JAB AT BERNARD SHAW'S BOOK ABOUT BOXER

Says "Cashel Byron" Is Poorly Done; Won't Play In It as Written.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Gene Tunney, world heavyweight champion pugilist, took a poke at George Bernard Shaw, playwright, for whose novel, "Cashel Byron's Profession," Jesse L. Lasky has offered $75,000 for a movie vehicle for Tunney.

"The character of Cashel Byron is badly drawn," said Tunney, "and the story is silly. I had not read the book until there was some talk of my making the picture, but when I did I was very much disappointed in it."

Tunney added that he would not lend himself to filming of the book as it is written.

"I regard Shaw as the possessor of one of the greatest minds among living men—possibly the greatest—and 'Cashel Byron's Profession' must be viewed only as a product of his immature years," he said.

"Shaw understands neither the temperament nor the psychology of the professional boxer, and the result is that Byron is made to appear as no more than a blundering vulgarian. That a girl reared in culture and refinement should fall in love with a man whose only appeal was a magnificent body, is absurd."

Women Want to Expel Life-Saving Member for "Undignified Conduct."

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 20.—A picture of one of their members in a bathing suit, printed in the Richmond Times-Dispatch, so agitated the convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy here today that a committee was appointed to investigate whether a delegate could be expelled for "undignified conduct."

The photograph showed Mrs. Samuel Burleigh Milton of Washington surrounded by silver cups which she had won in life saving contests and wearing a medal and bar for saving life on the high seas.

Mrs. Norman V. Randolph, former president general of the society, demanded that the convention go on record as condemning publication of the picture.

A formal statement issued by Mrs. A. S. J. Williams, chairman of publicity, disclaimed responsibility for the photograph.

10 STRIKERS GIVEN TERMS IN JAIL, 19 OTHERS ARE FINED

Organizer and Members of Foundry Workers' Union Held Guilty of Contempt at Belleville.

Twenty-nine persons—five women and 23 men, belonging to the new Foundry Employes' Union No. 7, at Belleville, and an American Federation of Labor organizer who formed this local body—were sentenced to jail or fined by Circuit Judge Crow yesterday for violating an antipicketing injunction. They promptly filed notice of appeal.

Edward Carbine, the organizer, who lives in Belleville, was held by Judge Crow to have been the leader in the violation. In the employers' request to the court, asking to have the defendants cited for contempt, it was alleged that Carbine caused publication in a Belleville newspaper of the statement that the injunction would be ignored by the strikers.

120 Days for Organizer.

Carbine was given the heaviest sentence—120 days in jail and a fine of $200. Henry Dawson, business agent of the local union, was fined $200. Edward Grandcolas and Tony Hemmer were sentenced to 90 days in jail. The following were sentenced to 60 days in jail and fined $100 each: James Paxton, William Keim, Frank Seibert, Lester Mahan, Bryan Becker, Morris Rade and Frank Riesenberger.

The women were Miss Frances Schultz and Miss Martha Schultz, sisters, fined $100 each; Miss Lucinda Keim, $100, and her sister, Miss Esther Keim, $50, and Miss Irene McEwan, $50.

Appeal bonds were set at from $200 to $1000 each and five days

JURY-FIXING ATTEMPTS SUSPECTED IN OIL TRIAL

Albert B. Fall and E. L. Doheny Face Court in Washington Tomorrow for Elk Hills Lease.

TALESMEN REPORT MYSTERIOUS CALLS

Sixty-eight Witnesses Subpenaed by Government to Prove $100,000 "Black Satchel" Loan Was Bribe.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Albert B. Fall and E. L. Doheny at last are coming to trial for their acts in connection with the leasing of the Elk Hills Naval Oil Reserve. The trial, in which they are charged with criminally conspiring to defraud the Government, will open Monday morning in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

It is five years since Fall, as Secretary of the Interior, secretly leased the great California naval reserve to his multimillionaire friend, Doheny, the oil producer. It is two and a half years since Senator Thomas J. Walsh, (Dem.) of Montana exposed the transaction, and unearthed the story of the little black bag and Doheny's $100,000 "loan" to Fall.

Looking Up the Talesmen.

Indications of a fresh scandal in the case appeared today, when several men who have been summoned for prospective jury duty complained to District Attorney Peyton Gordon that mysterious efforts had been made to ascertain their financial standing, their religious, family and lodge connections, and to gather other personal data about them.

Gordon at once sent for Owen Roberts and former Senator Atlee Pomerene, special Government prosecutors, told them of the circumstances, and announced after a conference that a thorough investigation of the inquiries would be made.

"If we find any evidence that any of the talesmen have been approached in a manner prohibited by law, and with a view of obstructing justice, those making the approach will be prosecuted," he said.

Pomerene emphatically announced that the inquiries had not come from the Government's side. He said nobody had been instructed to make any inquiries about prospective jurors. He exhibited considerable indignation over the circumstances reported by the talesmen, and said they looked very much like an effort to tamper with the jury.

Asked About Ku Klux Klan.

Arthur H. Mitchell, who has several times served as foreman of juries selected from his panel, was the first to make complaint to Gordon. He said his wife received a telephone call Monday afternoon from a man who said he was compiling a social register.

He asked her husband's politics, to what church he belonged, with what fraternal organization he was affiliated, whether he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan, and where his parents had lived. She answered the questions, and told her husband about it later.

Mitchell, upon learning that the man had not given his name or given any name or address for the company which he said he represented, suspected that the inquiries were connected with his presence on the jury panel, and went to Gordon's office. Further investigation failed to reveal any information about the compilation of a social register.

Call Up Another Man's Mother.

The day after the telephone call on Mrs. Mitchell, a man telephoned Mrs. Bessie Scher, mother of Sol Scher, another member of the panel. Mrs. Scher speaks little English, and after asking her several questions which she failed to comprehend, the man said:

"This is the court. Your son is summoned as a juror, and I want you to tell me the truth about him." He then asked her how much money her son had in the bank, whether he owned any real estate, and whether his business had been profitable. Frightened, Mrs. Scher answered as best she could.

The wife of W. A. Smith, a third talesman, received a telephone call Wednesday from a man who said

FRAUDS ALLEGED IN THE ELECTION AT KANSAS CITY

Rumors of Democratic Fund of $250,000 to $750,000 Current, H. R. Walmsley Asserts.

WANTS INQUIRY BY SENATE COMMITTEE

Reed Subpenaes Former Legislator to Appear Before Him With His Evidence Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Charges of fraud and corruption in the recent general elections in Jackson County, Missouri, the home of Senator James A. Reed, Democrat, will be placed before the Senate Campaign Fund Investigating Committee when members arrive in the capital for the short session of Congress. Senator Reed is chairman of the committee.

H. R. Walmsley, former Republican member of the Missouri Legislature and a resident of Kansas City, presented the charges in a letter received today by Senator Norris, Republican, Nebraska. Senator Norris, who is not a member of the committee, transmitted the letter to Senator McNary, Republican, Oregon, the ranking committee member now in the capital. Senator McNary said the letter would be presented to the committee after Senator Reed returns from Kansas City.

"Common gossip," the letter said in part, "is that the Kansas City Railways Co. gave the Democratic campaign fund, for use on election day in Kansas City, a sum variously estimated at between $250,000 and $750,000."

In the Tenth Precinct of the First Ward, the letter said, 413 ballots, the total cast, were identically marked, 363 for the Democratic candidates and 50 for the Republican.

The letter also asserted that "the Democratic organization in Kansas City is owned, directed, supervised and controlled by one Thomas Pendergast."

Reed Subpenaes Walmsley to Appear Before Him Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 20.—Senator James A. Reed tonight called upon H. R. Walmsley of Kansas City, former State legislator, to appear before him Monday to present evidence relating to rumors of the expenditure of a huge sum of money by the local Democratic organization in the Nov. 2 election.

A letter was directed to Walmsley's residence by Senator Rood who said he had received a telegram from Senator McNary quoting various charges Walmsley had made in a letter to Senator Norris.

Senator Reed requested Walmsley to appear at his office here at 10 a. m. Monday. He advised Walmsley that the letter could be regarded as a formal subpena.

Walmsley, who in his communication to Senator Norris, declared there was gossip that the Kansas City Street Railways Co. had contributed between $250,000 and $750,000 to the Democratic campaign fund here in return for a 12 year extension of the company's franchise, said tonight that he would appear as directed but that he had no direct evidence.

Walmsley declared he had made no charges, but had asked a disinterested investigation because of "common gossip" as to conditions in the election here.

"I know of no direct evidence I can give," he said, "but fraud was apparent on the face of the returns and common gossip was that money was used.

"A one man Democratic committee to investigate frauds of which the Democratic party was the beneficiary is not likely to be a disinterested investigation. I do not believe Senator Reed knew anything about it, but still I do not see how he could be disinterested."

Charges of Illegal Primary Expenditure in Maine.

By the Associated Press.

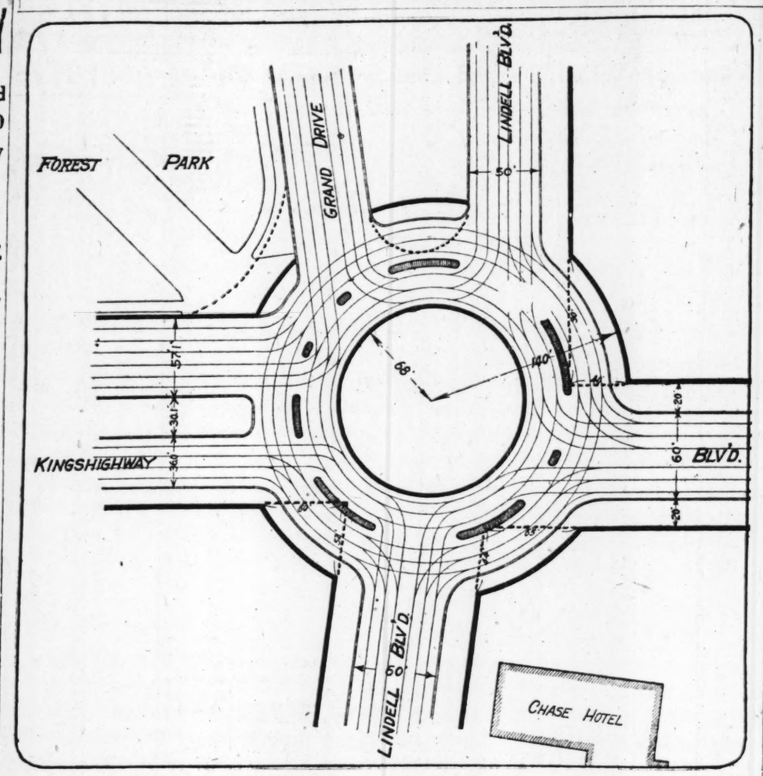
AUGUSTA, Me., Nov. 20.—Charges of illegal expenditure of money in the primary campaign were filed today against Arthur R. Gould, of Presque Isle, Me., successful candidate for the Republication nomination for United States Senator. The charges were brought in a petition signed by the Rev. A. F. Leigh of Randolph.

Although Gould could not be reached tonight, a close associate here said the candidate would be able to prove that he did not exceed the $1500 legal limit of such expenditures. The candidate already has filed a statement declaring that his expenditures were $1324.

The special election to choose a successor to United States Senator Bert M. Fernald, who died recently, will be held on Nov. 29, and since the ballots already have been printed, stickers would have to be resorted to should the charges be sustained and Gould disqualified.

The law prescribes that the Republican State Committee may fill the vacancy and there is nothing in the statute to prevent the committee from naming Gould.

New Plan for Traffic Circle At Lindell and Kingshighway



Revised Scheme for Relief of Congestion Is Announced by Brooks—Property Owners Appear Favorable.

A REVISED plan for a traffic circle, to be called Lindell Circus, as a relief for the congestion at Kingshighway and Lindell boulevard, has been devised by Director of Streets and Sewers Brooks and his assistants. Their drawing is presented herewith.

If possible, Director Brooks will have an amended petition filed in the now pending but quiescent condemnation suit for the project in Circuit Court. Otherwise, a new suit must be filed and more time will be required. Damage to three privately owned corners is estimated by the director at $100,000, one-third of the amount under the original plan covered by the suit, which called for a circus 340 feet in diameter.

Owners of the corners have told Director Brooks that the new plan, with a 280-foot circus, would not be nearly so damaging to their property. Commissioners had reported in the condemnation suit that the city ought to pay full cost of the project under the first plan, as they could not see that surrounding property would be benefitted.

The new plan would take a 44x65-foot corner from the Hotel Chase lot, a 52x60-foot corner from the vacant lot at the southeast, owned by Hugh Campbell, of 1508 Locust street, and a 40x90-foot corner from the yard of the home of the late Mrs. Florence Campbell Van Heel, at the northwest. It also would take a tip of Forest Park property, where the Blair monument now stands, but would call for extension of the park in front of the pavilion at the southwest corner.

It would create a plaza 136 feet in diameter in the middle of the circus, where city officials suggest a fountain or monument might be provided by public-spirited citizens. Eight raised strips of concrete—traffic dividers—would be located at strategic places in the circus drive. All traffic would move to the right around the plaza in half a dozen lines, permitting considerable flexibility, as any line could turn into any of the six traffic arteries there, in almost every instance. The plan as drafted would seem to make Kingshighway a one-way street to the north on the east side of the parked strip south of Lindell boulevard.

Park Commissioner Pape believes similar circles should be created at the other three corners of Forest Park.

JOHN H. DIECKMAN, BROKER, DIES AT HOME

Former President of Stock Exchange Was 77 and Its Oldest Member.

John H. Dieckman, 77 years old, owner of the investment house of Wernse & Dieckman, in the Security Building, died last night, at His home, 4537 West Pine boulevard. He had been ill about three years suffering with hardening of the arteries.

Mr. Dieckman was the oldest member of the St. Louis Stock Exchange, of which he was president about 15 years ago. Surviving him are his widow, Mrs. Elizabeth Dieckman, one son, George E. Dieckman, who is vice president of the Zoological Board of Control, and a daughter, Mrs. Charles A. Niemeyer, of 4564 West Pine boulevard.

Before his last illness, Mr. Dieckman acquired the reputation among business men of being "one of the few surviving pedestrians." He avoided automobiles and was seen almost daily in Forest Park engaged in a four or five-mile walk. He frequently walked to his office and devoted many of his Sundays to walking in the county.

GEN. GARIBALDI CO-RESPONDENT IN NEW YORK DIVORCE SUIT

Woman He Married Got Divorce in Mexico Which Ex-Husband Refuses to Recognize.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20. — Gen. Giuseppe Garibaldi, now in Europe to aid his brother Ricciotti, whom the Paris police accuse in the Catalan plot, was named co-respondent in a divorce suit filed here today by Stevenson Pierce Taylor. The general is charged with misconduct with the woman to whom he is now married.

Taylor alleges that Mrs. Taylor divorced him in Yucatan, Mex., then married Garibaldi in Philadelphia Jan. 27. He refuses to recognize the Mexican decree and seeks a New York decree. The charges of misconduct cover the period since the marriage of the Garibaldi's.

Mrs. Garibaldi said at her home in Stamford, Conn., "I thmink the action perfectly ridiculous."

LIQUOR SEIZED IN RAID ON FULLERTON BUILDING

Federal prohibition enforcement officers and city detectives discovered a quantity of whisky in a storeroom of the Fullerton Building, Seventh and Pine streets, yesterday afternoon. A Federal warrant was served on one of the building janitors. He, however, denied ownership of the liquor and said it was the property of one of the building's tenants.

Thirteen cases of whisky, bearing the names of old brands, 25 quarts labeled with another prohibition title, and 46 quarts pretending to be nothing other than moonshine, were found by the agents and detectives.

Knocks Barber's Itch Often in 48 Hours

Men who are troubled with barber's itch, rash, pimples or poison ivy, should try this new treatment, which is said to be effective often in 48 hours: Night and morning bathe the face in warm water, and apply Whyte-Fox Liquid compound, following with applications of Whyte-Fox Cream. This treatment has astounded experts by correcting not only the commonly known forms of skin troubles, but also many that are unnamed or misnamed. Whyte-Fox is now put up in convenient form for home use, and may be had at good drug stores at small cost, under a money-back guarantee. Treatments also are given at most good barber shops.

The bonds were printed and expressed to the Denver box, and payment was received.

Something evidently went wrong in Denver, for the St. Louis company was advised by the express company that the package of bonds had not been called for. The company then wrote to the Denver customer, and the bonds were called for.

That ended the transaction so far as Heinicke and Land were concerned until the detectives called early yesterday and advised them the bonds they printed were counterfeits, and $240,000 of them had been sold to brokers after Pivan had forged signatures and seals to them.

Presumed "Alt" Had Contract.

Chief of Detectives Kaiser asked the two officers of the company why, when they received the order for municipal waterworks bonds they did not take the precaution of communicating with the municipal authorities. They replied they had printed many bonds previously for companies which had obtained municipal contracts, and in this case they presumed "Alt" had a contract with the city and county of Denver. Moreover, "Alt" had written them that the bonds were needed to replace part of an old issue, accidentally destroyed. They said it was a custom for printing firms to fill mail orders without checking on the authenticity of the printed matter.

Indicating their desire to cooperate with police, they surrendered the correspondence in the case. In one letter to them, "Alt" said he had made arrangements with the Monotype Typesetting and Foundry Co., to supply the necessary type for the bonds to the Heinicke-Fiegel Co., which does not set type. The type was supplied.

Doesn't Recall This Job.

Lee Winston, president of the Monotype Typesetting and Foundry Co., 922 Pine street, said his company handles such business for the Heinicke-Fiegel Co., but he could not recall this particular job. His office was closed yesterday afternoon, but he said if the authorities wanted the correspondence regarding the job, he would be glad to produce it Monday.

After spending six hours at headquarters, Land and Heinicke were released on $10,000 bonds. Denver police asked that the men, the correspondence and the plates and stones be held, pending further investigation by the Postoffice Inspectors here to determine if Pivan used the mails to defraud.

Henry Stevens Denies Any Part in Hall-Mills Murder

Stevens at a fishing pier at Lavalette.

Reaching the night of the murder Stevens testified that his wife was in New York at the time and he spent the morning "down town," and in the afternoon drove a short distance to visit a friend. He sat down to an evening meal prepared by the family cook about 6 o'clock, then went to the beach to fish. He weighed a 6-pound bluefish for a fellow fisherman, visited the house to put away some fish and subsequently returned to the beach for his tackle. William H. Egar accompanied him on the second trip to the house, he said, for a glass of ginger ale and brief conversation, after which his guest left and he retired, about 11 p. m.

After Stevens had specifically denied having had anything to do with the killing of Mrs. Mills, the prosecution began cross-examination.

Simpson's first questions were about the parentage of Willie Stevens.

"Is Willie Stevens your brother?" "Yes."

"A full brother?" "Yes."

"Do you know that his birth is not recorded at Aiken S. C., where yours and your sister's are?" "I did not know that."

Willie Stevens' Parentage Gone Into

"You say he is your full brother, are you sure his mother was not a mulatto?" "I am."

"Explain the difference in his facial characteristics from yours." "I can not."

Simpson then asked why Stevens had postponed a boat trip scheduled for the week-end on which the bodies were found. This postponement, Simpson said, had been made on account of "family difficulties" before the witness knew of the killings. Stevens said he did not know why he postponed it.

Simpson emphasized the fact that the witness had not gone to Somerville when he received the news of his sister's arrest and 40-hour confinement in jail, although he was in Philadelphia at the time. He also questioned Stevens as to what the prosecutor termed his failure to come to see his brother in jail until he, himself, was arrested. The reply to these questions was that he could not have done any material good.

Two Hours for 50-Mile Drive.

Simpson also asked the witness in detail as to the time required to drive by automobile from Lavalette to New Brunswick. Stevens said that the time required was about two hours and a quarter, and that he had never made it in less than two hours, the prosecutor asked if he had not told a man that he could drive it in an hour and one-half by a "back road." This Stevens denied, saying that there was a road other than the one usually used which was shorter, but that such time could not be made on it.

"Stand up, Pete," called Simpson.

A man in the audience arose.

"Didn't you tell this man that you could drive it in one hour and a half?" "I did not."

Stevens said that Edwin Carpender met him at the New Brunswick Railroad station after he had learned of the Hall killing, and that they had supper before they went to the Hall home. Asked why he had not gone immediately to his sister's home, instead of filling his stomach, Stevens replied that Edwin Carpender wanted to tell him what happened before they went there. Stevens said that he thought he had seen a state trooper at Lavallette but was sure it was not Dickman whom, he testified, he first saw in court during the trial.

The prosecutor pointed to a wax model of a human head and asked if one could shoot Mrs. Mills through the head three times in the dark and with only her voice as a guide in aiming the gun. Stevens said any ordinary marksman might do it. Replying to a question, Stevens said he could not indicate on the neck of the model the kind of a cut he would make in taking the gills out of a bluefish.

Specifically Denies Killing.

Stevens denied that he had gone to the scene of the slaying with his sister, or that he had grappled with Mr. Hall and in the struggle his gun had gone off. He also denied that he had torn out the tongue and the larynx from Mrs. Mills' throat.

Simpson took up Steven's diary and asked about certain blank dates. The witness said that he had entered an interlineation under the date of Sept. 14, three days afterward, to remember a date he had seen a friend. Under the date of Sept. 19 there was an entry in Greek letters which Stevens said he had written to show that the planet Mercury would be visible that day as he wanted to see it. Asked why he had written nothing about the funeral of Mr. Hall on that day, Stevens said he didn't include such items in his diary.

Corroborative Evidence.

Enoch T. Vancamp, serving his third term as Mayor of Lavallette, said he saw Henry Stevens at Lavallette weighing a bluefish about 3 p. m. Thursday, Sept. 14. The State compared his testimony with that in his affidavit made in 1922, when he said he "thought" it was Sept. 14 that he saw Stevens weighing the fish.

T. S. Mellinger, connected with a Philadelphia department store, told of seeing Stevens fishing on the beach about 9 o'clock, again near his home at 10 o'clock and again the next day, on the beach, about 5 a. m.

Robert E. Stoneback, of Philadelphia, a dealer in commercial paper, said he reached Lavallette on the evening of Sept. 14, 1922, and saw Stevens fishing on the beach about 8:30 o'clock.

William H. Egar, a Washington, D. C. real estate dealer, said he saw Henry Stevens on the beach at Lavallette about 9 p. m., Sept. 14, 1922, and later went with him to his home where they smoked and drank ginger ale.

Mrs. Egar, the only woman witness of the day, succeeded in getting into the record over the objection of attorneys, and the court, a statement that Henry Stevens told her he was going to catch a big bluefish for her to bake.

TAKE SHELTONS TO SEPARATE JAILS; DENY FEAR OF PLOT

Federal Officers Move Earl and Carl to Peoria and Bernie To Cell In Bloomington.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 20.—The Shelton brothers, who had been held here on a Federal indictment charging the $15,000 robbery of a mail messenger at Collinsville on Jan. 27, 1925, were separated today, Earl and Carl being taken to the county jail at Peoria and Bernie being lodged in jail at Bloomington.

Federal officers who accomplished the removal of the prisoners declined to give a reason for the separation and denied it was for the purpose of thwarting a possible attempt at a jailbreak. The Sheltons are held in default of $60,000 bonds each.

ASK BILLY SUNDAY TO HOLD ST. LOUIS REVIVAL IN 1927

Laymen Undertake Task of Bringing Evangelist to City and Seek 1000 Members at $5 Each.

COMMITTEE TALKS OVER OCTOBER DATE

Ministers, Some of Whom Are Interested, Invited to Join, but Opposition of Some Is Recalled.

Billy Sunday, who announced last April that he was praying for St. Louis to win a baseball pennant, may come here in 1927 to preach on the power of prayer, and to work for the regeneration of St. Louis through one of his revival campaigns.

A laymen's organization, known as the St. Louis Laymen's Association for Evangelism, has undertaken the task of bringing Sunday here, and has ascertained the terms on which he will come. A plan to add 1000 members to the organization, each paying $5, is the basis of the intended evangelistic campaign. Sunday requires that local expenses be guaranteed before he undertakes a campaign.

Some Ministers Interested.

Some ministers are interested in the movement, but they are not taking the lead, as two previous attempts to bring Sunday here were frustrated through the opposition of certain pastors. Ministers have been invited to enroll as associate members of the laymen's organization, without payment of the fee required of active members.

The movement was stimulated by the recent meetings held by Paul Trotter, veteran Chicago evangelist, at Central Presbyterian Church, Delmar boulevard and Kingsbury avenue. Trotter was the successor of Billy Sunday when Sunday, then a big-league baseball player and famous for his speed as a base-runner, made his first efforts at preaching.

Next October Is Mentioned.

Charles A. Bull, evangelistic manager, is in charge of the laymen's movement. He said last night that the negotiations with Sunday and Trotter proceeded to a point where Sunday's coming was certain. At a committee meeting at Central Presbyterian Church Friday night, next October was mentioned as being the time for the opening of the expected campaign. Sunday usually speaks in a temporary tabernacle, built according to his own specifications, rather than in such halls as the Coliseum. The latest revival of city-wide proportions here was the one conducted by Gipsy Smith in the Coliseum early in 1909, except for the largely attended meetings of Aimee Semple McPherson, also in the Coliseum, for a week in 1921.

Sunday, who is 63 years old, has shown remarkable drawing power in his few appearances in St. Louis' in recent years. When he spoke in Moolah Temple on a rainy night last spring, the hall was filled more than an hour before the time set for opening.

MRS. FRANCES SPINK RIESMEYER TO MARRY CYRUS MERRELL

Mrs. Frances Spink Riesmeyer and Cyrus Merrell are to be married tomorrow in New York, it was learned last night from their friends. The wedding, which comes as a surprise to the acquaintances and relatives of Mrs. Riesmeyer and Mr. Merrell, will be at the Little Church Around the Corner.

Mrs. Riesmeyer is the daughter of Mrs. C. C. Spink, widow of the founder of the Sporting News. The bride is the widow of Edward H. Riesmeyer, who, in 1923, ended his life by shooting.

Mr. Merrell is sales manager and second vice president of the Merrell Drug Co., and is the nephew of George R. Merrell, president of the concern. He is the son of Mrs. Ashbel N. Merrell of East Orange, N. J.

Assaults on Strikebreakers.

The men sentenced to jail were said to have been participants in assaults on nonstrikers and strikebreakers. The other men and the women were convicted of picketing and molesting workers, in violation of the injunction.

Employes of the Belleville Enameling & Stamping Co. and the Belleville Enamel Range Co. formed a local union four months ago, and about 125 of them went on strike when the companies refused to recognize the organization. Picketing was begun and on Oct. 4 the companies, in Judge Crow's court, obtained the injunction against this and any interference by workers. The contempt citations were requested on Oct. 29 and the protracted hearing of evidence, which the defendants denied all acts, followed.

OLDEST SOCIAL WORKER AT 40TH PRAISE DAY

Mrs. Owens, 88, and Mrs. H. H. Wagner, 93, Attend Boyle Center Anniversary.

Wintry winds and icy pavements ... failed to deter Mrs. Sue Owens, St. ... Louis' oldest social worker, and ... Mrs. H. H. Wagoner, her associate ... through 45 years of religious work ... among the poor, from observing the ... fortieth annual praise and prayer ... day at Boyle Memorial Center, 1920 ... Franklin avenue, Friday.

Mrs. Owens, whose efforts re... sulted in the founding of Boyle ... Memorial Center, began week... mothers' meetings Jan. 14, 1881 ... which have been held continuously ... since. The first meeting, held in ... the Ashley building, Broadway and ... O'Fallon street, was attended by ... 10 women, all of whom are now ... dead except Mrs. Owens, who didn't ... miss a meeting until 1924, when ... she was forced to spend six months ... in a hospital because of a frac... tured hip suffered in a fall.

Annual Prayer Day Inaugurated

Mrs. Owens conducted the week... ly meetings in the Ashley building ... for five years and then decided her ... growing organization required a ... building of its own. She inaugu... rated the annual day of praise and ... prayer Nov. 19, 1886, the purpose ... being to seek spiritual assistance ... in the acquirement of a building ... for the work. Even after the Boyle ... Memorial Center was established in ... permanent quarters at 816 North ... Eleventh street, the annual day o... praise and prayer was continued.

"Our building was sold recently ... and we were forced to find these ... quarters temporarily, so we are ... again praying for a home in earn... est," Mrs. Owens explained yester... day.

Discussing her half century of ... social work, Mrs. Owens said: "My ... missionary work has always been ... among the poorer clases, but I ... never grow tired of them. My re... ward is the knowledge that I have ... seen broken down men and women ... come to the front and make good ... Christians, and my life has been ... brighter for it."

Asked her age Mrs. Owens re... sponded, "My goodness, I thought ... a woman never told her age. How... ever, if you insist I am 88 years ... old."

Never Missed Prayer Day.

Although the injury two years ... ago kept the elderly social worker ... from the weekly meetings for a ... period, she never has missed at... tending the annual day of prayer. ... She was the first speaker at last ... Friday's meeting, which continued ... from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. and which ... was attended by several hundred ... persons, mostly women. Mrs. Owens ... resides at 8213 Page boulevard, St. ... Louis County.

Mrs. Wagoner, who is 93 years ... old, and resides at 4197 Lindell ... boulevard, is also a charter mem... ber of Boyle Memorial Center and, ... like Mrs. Owens, never has missed ... attendance at the annual day of ... prayer and praise. Associated for ... many years with the two remain... ing charter members are Mrs. Mary ... Patton, 66, of 5624 Helen avenue, ... St. Louis County, and Mrs. Theo... dore Biggs, 56, of 4456A Pennsyl... vania avenue. Mrs. Patton is a... pianist and supplied the music for ... the meeting Friday, while Mrs. ... Biggs, in her role as song leader, ... conducted the vocal part of the ... services.

It is the hope of Mrs. Owens and ... Mrs. Wagoner that before the for... ty-first annual day of prayer is cel... ebrated, there will be funds to start ... a Boyle Memorial Church in the ... vicinity of the present quarters. In ... recent years, the work has been ... carried on under the supervision ... of the Presbyterian Board of Con... trol.

Church Sermon to Be Broadcast.

CONSUELO 'SOLD BY FOUR HUNDRED' HER COUSIN SAYS

Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr. Writes on Annulment of Marriage of Duke and Duchess of Marlborough.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—The former Consuelo Vanderbilt was "sold by the Four Hundred" to the Duke of Marlborough, although she was in love with an American. Cornelius Vanderbilt Jr., her cousin, says in a copyrighted article to appear in the New York American tomorrow. He adds that such "sales" are not uncommon among the socially elect.

"There are other families in America," he says, "eager for any title, living or no longer in existence."

Recent action of the Tribuna Rota of the Roman Catholic Church in annulling the marriage of the Duke and Duchess, who were divorced and married to others after two children had been born, caused an international stir in church and society circles. The only explanation of the church action was that Consuelo had been forced into the marriage and therefore the tie could not be recognized by the church. The Duchess' mother, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, has declined to discuss the question of duress.

Marriage Forced Cousin Says.

"It is no family secret now," says young Vanderbilt in his article, "to tell that Consuelo, when she was forced to marry Marlborough, was in love with an American, a handsome young man, then at Yale, who later made a name for himself greater than that which he had inherited, and greater than that which she was forced to marry.

"If Consuelo had her own way, and had not been constantly under the strong will of her family, her life would not be shattered as it is today."

"Since childhood she had had her romance; and had her family had more wisdom and less ambition, Consuelo might have gone a long way toward harmonizing public opinion toward society as the wife of a prominent jurist, as well as living the life that would have brought her all that love and happiness can give.

'Sold by the Four Hundred.'

"But Consuelo was sold by the hierarchy, better known as the 'four hundred,' of which her parents were dominant factors. Her marriage was 'made' in hard cash, by British and American attorneys, each of whom received large fees."

Saying that for "the little social prestige her parents reaped" from the union they made three decades ago, their daughter suffered humiliation and sorrow, he concludes that family interference seldom accomplishes anything except unhappiness. But he holds little hope that other parents will benefit by the Vanderbilt experience.

"There may be some parents," he says, "who have seen what has befallen Consuelo Vanderbilt who will give up their search of nobility; yet even that is doubtful."

Others Bargaining, He Says.

"Were I to tell you of a number of American families," he says "who spend many precious hours of their lives planning princely marriages between their children and noblemen of the old world, the reader might have a better conception of the manner in which things in American society are often done.

"There is one family in New York City which for the past 10 years has exerted its every effort to form an alliance with the British crown. If the Parliament of Great Britain were to 'set aside' a certain ceremony required, precedent to such a marriage, it is possible that a New York girl, not so distantly related to the writer, would become a future Queen of England."

Vettori Wins Ovation In Metropolitan Debut

St. Louis Singer, Once a Chorus Girl at Delmar Garden, Acclaimed as Santuzza in "Cavalleria Rusticana."

By RICHARD L. STOKES.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—For the second time in less than a year a Missouri girl tonight reached the goal dreamed of by thousands of young singers—that of a debut at the Metropolitan Opera House. Last February Miss Marion Talley of Kansas City made her bow from the enchanted proscenium in the midst of an unexampled riot of excitement by newspaper acclaim.

Miss Elda Vettori of St. Louis tonight put her make-up and costume in a cardboard box, tucked it under her arm, rode down alone on the subway from the Eighties to Forty-second street, walked to the opera house and made her appearance as Santuzza in "Cavalleria Rusticana."

Miss Talley was attended by a delegation of hundreds from her own city, who made the welkin ring in her honor. If there was a St. Louisan present at Miss Vettori's debut, he was conspicuous by his silence. It is frequently said here that the Kansas City Chamber of Commerce wrecked Miss Talley's career.

Vettori Wins on Her Merit.

Miss Vettori had the satisfaction of knowing that the frequent interruptions of applause and her dozen curtain calls were won on her own merits, for she went to her success with only the most modest advance notices.

After the opening chorus was finished, the orchestra changed its blithe tone for the dark hues announcing the betrayed Sicilian girl, and Miss Vettori, her raven hair shining and her costume making a blaze of color, appeared at the back of the stage. She was greeted with a tumult of hand-clapping, but showed her training by taking not the least notice of the welcome. This was unusual, for it is still the custom at the Metropolitan in Italian opera for Gigli or Ponselle or Lauri Volpi to step out of their roles at the least provocation and salute their admirers.

Miss Vettori maintained this austere attitude, despite numerous temptations, until the end of the first scene.

Vivid, Colorful, Dramatic.

As an actress, she was as St. Louis has often seen her in this role—vivid, colorful and dramatic. As a singer she was at first inevitably nervous, but from the beginning of her big aria, "Voi lo Sapete," she was in complete command of her resources. There were many comments not only upon her handsome appearance, but upon her fiery acting. This was in liveliest contrast to the usual wooden performance in Italian grand opera.

Her voice was most beautiful in the soft middle register, and was tinged always with a keen sense of text—another unusual phenomenon. Miss Vettori had many recalls at the end of the first scene, and at the conclusion of the opera was summoned a dozen times before the curtain. It was a romantic climax for a career of earnest and tireless labor which she began only a few years ago as a chorus girl at Delmar Garden, in St. Louis, and in the course of which she has supported herself at times as a milliner and some time as a factory worker.

Standees Four Deep.

The opera house was packed to capacity, with standees four deep—which is rare on Saturday nights. Half an hour before the opening, the line at the ticket office extended out of the Broadway lobby and wound around Thirty-ninth street to Seventh avenue.

In the cast with Miss Vettori were: Ina Bourskaya, Armand Tokatyan, Millo Picco and Henriette Wakefield. Maestro Vincenzo Bellezza, the new Italian conductor at the Metropolitan, directed.

BOY DRAGGED UNDER TRAIN NOT BADLY HURT

Rether Avery, 8, Escapes Apparently With Abrasions of the Right Shoulder.

Dragged 75 feet along the Missouri-Pacific right-of-way by the trucks of the rearmost car in a rapidly moving passenger train, under which his sled had carried him, 8-year-old Rether Avery was picked up at the Water street crossing yesterday afternoon, apparently not seriously injured.

An X-ray photograph taken a few minutes later at City Hospital failed to disclose a fracture of the skull and physicians said that, while there was still a possibility of a slight fracture, the boy's condition was not serious. His only other injuries were abrasions of the right shoulder.

Rether, who is the son of Roy Avery, of 7918 Pennsylvania avenue, was coasting down the Water street hill at 5:40 o'clock when Missouri-Pacific Train No. 32, inbound, passed along Tesson avenue.

Somehow, the boy's sled got out of control. Later he told his mother that another boy pushed him. In any event the sled slid down across Tesson avenue and carried the lad directly between the trucks of the last car.

He disappeared from sight for a moment and as the train continued on its way he reappeared from beneath the rear end of the last car. A passerby, who picked him up, found him dazed but not unconscious.

CHURCH BARS BACKBITING

Members Must Avoid Gossip, Anger and Drinking By Jan. 1 to Remain.

By the Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Tex., Nov. 20.—An ultimatum demanding that the 5022 members of the First Baptist Church here repledge themselves to avoid "tattling, back-biting, unrighteous anger and intoxicating drinks," or consider themselves out of the church has been issued by the church membership.

A resolution passed by the church asking for these pledges states that only those signing up "before Jan. 1, 1927, constitute the membership of this church."

OFFICIAL IS HELD ON A CHARGE OF KILLING STEPSON

Harry Parker, Assistant Fire Chief of Trenton, Mo., Is Accused by Widow of Jack Freeman.

SHE SAYS SHE SAW HIM RUNNING AWAY

Kept Silent Two Weeks in in Fear for Life—Prisoner Declares He Was Home at Time of Murder.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TRENTON, Mo., Nov. 20.—Harry Parker, assistant fire chief of Trenton, is in jail here charged with the first-degree murder of his stepson, Jack Freeman. His hearing is set for Wednesday.

Parker was arrested yesterday on a story told by the widow of the [illegible]

She said she had lived in constant [illegible] before shooting, and that she is living in a private room at the jail, declaring she is afraid to go out alone or return to the home where Freeman was slain in the early morning of Nov. 5.

In a statement made to Prosecuting Attorney Layson, Sheriff McKinnon and Ed Eads, St. Joseph detective, Mrs. Freeman said she saw Parker run around a corner of the house a moment after she heard the shots which killed her husband. Parker did not know then that he had been seen at the scene, and he has not yet been told of Mrs. Freeman's story.

Mrs. Freeman said relations between Freeman and Parker had been strained on account of disputes over property which they owned jointly. She also said Parker had made love to her for years, but she added that she did not believe that her husband knew anything about it.

Investigation has disclosed that Freeman and Parker quarreled in the Freeman's restaurant less than two hours before the killing.

Parker has told the authorities that he went straight home after the row in the restaurant and has contended that he did not leave his house until called to the home of Freeman after the murder.

An Appeal for the Community Fund

TO THE People of St. Louis:

St. Louis has been undergoing the great test of human goodness during the past week. Out of its plenty—St. Louis will do over the billion and a half dollar business this year—her citizens have been asked to give $1,850,000 to aid people of all races and creeds who depend on the 50 charities and philanthropies in the Community Fund for service.

For the third time in as many years the campaign is now on the eve of its close $100,000 short of its goal, figuring every possible source of anticipated subscriptions. But the goal is not dollars—it is human souls and a retrieving of St. Louis' reputation as the city that cares.

This is a last minute appeal to those St. Louisans who are proud of the city we call "home," home for some, but the streets for others if the fund fails.

Failure means St. Louis will be known among the sisterhood of cities as again failing to meet the call of the needy.

It means, and more vitally so, in human quotas, that 86 little children; 607 needy families comprising 3035 men, women and children; 1533 sick persons; and 2437 young people in need of training and guidance; our neighbors in need of help will be short the thanks that go with Thanksgiving, that the "good will toward men" that goes with Christmas will be only on the greeting cards and not in the heart.

Before "failure" and "fails" have been written on another Community Fund campaign at Monday night's meeting, won't every St. Louisan check with his or her conscience and realize that even for a big city the things that count most are the things we can't count: that we can count in thousands—a mere $100,000—but we can't reckon in dollars the sorrow, the suffering, the desolation that this inability of St. Louis to deliver will bring upon the heads of innocent babies, needy children and dependent old folks. Our shortcoming, if such it is to remain, must be written in tears and in pain, a breach of that social responsibility, imposed by a higher law, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself."

The answer is to be found in the response of those who have not given, or, in giving, have failed to give their share. As the workers sweep the city today in an almost frantic effort to forestall failure will not St. Louisans open their hearts and their purses to this cause beyond compare—the welfare of your unfortunate fellow St. Louisans?

Yours for success in the name of the needy,

L. W. CHILDRESS,
General Chairman.

COMMUNITY FUND LACKS $559,727 OF QUOTA SOUGHT

Canvassers Will Go Outside Allotted Territories Today and Tomorrow for Contributions.

$1,290,273 HAS BEEN PLEDGED THUS FAR

$18 Given by Waiters Hearing Pessimistic Discussion of Situation at Hotel Luncheon.

Workers for the Community Fund, at their daily luncheon at Hotel Statler yesterday, talked earnestly, and some of them in a rather discouraged tone, about the difficulty being encountered in obtaining the needed subscription to complete the $1,850,000 fund, for the support of 50 relief and service agencies, by tomorrow night. Some of them expressed the fear that the campaign would fail.

The Negro waiters who served the luncheon, and who had heard the more encouraging reports made on previous days, talked the matter over and took up a collection. A few minutes later one of them handed one of the workers $18, as the unsolicited donation of the waiters.

The audited figure of total pledges and cash received by Saturday noon was $1,290,273. This falls short by $559,727 of the amount needed for the work planned for the year 1927.

May Fall $100,000 Short.

Substantial results are expected from the canvass of today and tomorrow, but optimistic estimates yesterday did not come nearer than $100,000 to the needed total.

"Failure for the Comunity Fund campaign would be far worse than failure of any other public effort," Walter B. Weisenburger, campaign chairman, said in addressing the workers.

"It is such a pitiful failure," the chairman continued, "failure to give to ease the pain of a child suffering on a sick bed; failure to buy food to feed a widow and her children; failure to provide a warm room and warm clothing for an old man whose useful days are past; failure to give young boys and girls the chance they need to become happy and useful citizens; failure to extend a hand to those in need; and failure to measure up to the standard of humanity."

Miss Mary K. Browne, professional tennis player, told of her visit to the St. Louis Zoo, and said she wondered whether St. Louis took as great care of its poor as it did of its animals. Miss Browne autographed several tennis balls, to be given to the winning teams at the close of the drive.

Workers to Canvass Anywhere.

In a last effort to meet the serious situation, the city was opened wide for all workers to get subscriptions from every citizen who does not wear an "I gave my share" button. Those who have already given, but who are able to give more, will be appealed to for an increase in amount. Everyone who has not been asked for a subscription is urged to mail or bring the pledge to campaign headquarters in room 1540 at the Statler. Anyone who has more to give is urged to do likewise.

The Rev. John W. MacIvor, head of the Committee on Church Cooperation, has sent out letters to clergy, requesting them to make an appeal for the fund in sermons today, and asking that pledge cards be passed out in their congregations.

Frank C. Rand, president of the International Shoe Co., speaking to the workers at luncheon, said: "I cannot understand the heart or soul or mind of the man or woman who refuses to contribute to the Community Fund. I cannot but believe that there is a better future ahead for St. Louis—for we cannot long afford to fall to measure up to the standards of other large cities of the United States in a cause which is so full of the human element, and so necessary to our self-respect."

Announcement of a contribution of $200 from the St. Louis Browns, a personal gift of $500 from P. D. C. Ball, president of the baseball club, and $250 from the Federal Cold Storage Co. of which Ball is also president, was received with applause.

Weather a Handicap.

The weather conditions, unusual for this pre-Thanksgiving period, have obstructed the efforts of the canvassers, many of whom had a wide territory to cover and have been unable to make the progress which could have been made in ordinarily good weather.

The industrial and mercantile divisions of the campaign have not yet reported. Their reports, covering employes of factories and large business establishments, will make a material addition to the figures now in hand, but the campaign leaders believe it will not be sufficient to reach the goal without the utmost efforts in other directions.

PROHIBITION FLIES IN FACE OF NATURE, CHICAGOAN WARNS

Ethical Society Leader Quotes St. Paul on Meat and Drink Counsel.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—Prohibition is flying in the face of the law of nature, Horace J. Bridges, leader of the Chicago Ethical Society, says. Besides being at the head of that society, Bridges is head of Booth House, one of the principal social settlement centers here.

Bridges declares in a letter, written for publication, that the people's power to change their fundamental laws is limited—that there is an authority higher than the people, one which cannot rightly be ignored even by a majority of a million to one. Roman jurists called it Lex Naturae, the natural law, and this higher authority, however, named or defined, is the sole source and the sole guarantee of those "inalienable rights," referred to in the declaration of independence, he asserts.

"A hideous error" is what Bridges calls belief that a majority, solely by the magic of numbers can turn wrong into right by enacting it into a statute or a constitutional act. He added that the rights of man are limited only by such regulations as are necessary to prevent encroachment upon others and that personally he agrees with "a man named Paul," who said, "Let no man judge you in meat or in drink."

NICARAGUA FOIL OF U. S. TO GET CALLES OUT, SENATORS SAY

One Declares Kellogg and Oil Men Want Mexican President More Subservient to Wishes.

PREPARING TO SEVER RELATIONS, THEY ADD

Talk of "Bolshevist Hegemony" Menacing Panama Canal Called Ridiculous.

BY CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—We have with us again the "Mexican situation," and as usual it is hard to get at the true inwardness of it because of the penchant of our State Department for secrecy.

The Department, like the "spokesman" at the White House, is in the habit of inspiring statements for which it need not accept the responsibility. If Senator Borah, Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Senator Norris and others of a liberal turn of mind could have their way, the Department would bring our foreign relations out into the open.

The present "situation" grows out of the recognition by this government of the new conservative president of Nicaragua, Adolfo Diaz. The State Department had steadily refused to recognize his predecessor, Chamorra, though, according to the Senate liberals, there was no reason why it should not have done so. Diaz, on taking office, charged that the Mexican Government was aiding a liberal revolutionary party in his country, and asked the United States to aid him in keeping the peace.

Forthwith, alarming statements began to be published. They told of "The specter of a Mexican-fostered Bolshevist hegemony intervening between the United States and the Panama Canal."

This specter was said to have cast a new blight on Mexican-American relations. The statement bore the earmarks of having been based on information given out by the State Department, but it was not directly attributed to the Department.

Incidentally, the portion of the article which quoted Secretary Kellogg did not altogether bear out the construction which had been anonymously placed on the request of the Nicaraguan president for aid. The Secretary said: "The Department has been informed that President Diaz intends to make overtures of peace and general amnesty to his political opponents, and that he will offer the liberal party participation in the new Government, including certain cabinet posts." The Secretary indicated that this peace plan had his entire approval.

Break With Mexico Foreseen.

So it appeared the "specter of Bolshevist hegemony" was not such an horrendous thing after all. One could not believe that Mr. Kellogg would indorse the admission of Bolshevists into the Nicaraguan Cabinet.

In the opinion of some of the Senate Liberals, the State Department, through inspired stories, is trying to prepare the mind of this country for a break with Mexico.

"Secretary Kellogg and the oil men," said one of these Senators, who declines to permit the use of his name, "have come to the conclusion that President Calles of Mexico means to carry out the letter and the spirit of the Mexican Constitution of 1917, and that the Mexican people are standing by him. The only way for them to impose their will on Mexico is to get Calles out and put some less obdurate President in his place. They are paving the way for a severance of relations with Mexico.

"All this talk about Mexico trying to bolshevize Nicaragua is ridiculous. Why should it try to bolshevize Nicaragua when it has not a Bolshevist Government itself?"

Senator Norris said that he was much more curious to know to what extent the United States Government had intervened in Nicaragua than to what extent the Mexican Government had intervened.

"We are not responsible," he said, "for what Mexico does, but we are responsible for what we do. If the truth could be discovered, I suspect that we should find that we have given about as active aid to one side in Nicaragua as Mexico has given to the other. I intend to try to bring about a thorough inquiry into the whole question of our relations with the Latin American countries. There has been too much secrecy about it.

"We have declared for open diplomacy, and it is high time we began to practice it. I am opposed to the State Department's policy of putting out statements designed to undermine a neighboring Government and refusing to accept the responsibility for them. When I say this I am referring to the story in which it was asserted that Mexico is trying to bolshevize Nicaragua.

"The great State Department of a great nation should be above engaging in such a practice."

Thus far, there has been no official interchange between the United States and Mexico on the Nicaraguan affair. The incident appears to be at rest pending a decision of the Nicaraguan liberals on the offer of President Diaz to give them a share in the Government. Matters would be brought to a head if United States warships should attempt to overhaul Mexican filibustering expeditions carrying arms to the rebels.

Mexican's View of Situation.

"You have no more right," said a Mexican diplomatist here, "to seize a Mexican vessel carrying arms to Nicaragua than a Mexican gunboat would have to raid the rum fleet outside of New York."

There appears to be no doubt that the Nicaraguan liberals have been privately aided from Mexico, but the Mexican Government unofficially has said that it has had no part in the filibustering. It takes the position that if Mexican citizens are shipping arms into Nicaragua, they are doing no more than American citizens have done in virtually every revolution that has occurred south of the Rio Grande.

Since the United States admits no military purpose in Nicaragua, the Mexicans contend that it has no right in international usage to stop Mexican vessels engaged in commerce with that country.

The suggestion has been made that if President Calles does not take steps to prevent the shipment of arms to Nicaragua, the United States might retaliate by lifting the embargo on the shipment of arms from this country into Mexico. Such action on the part of this Government would be a signal that the United States had withdrawn its support from Calles and would seriously embarrass if not bring about the downfall of his regime.

At the White House, it was said that Mr. Coolidge's view of the situation is simply that President Diaz has requested the good offices of the United States in maintaining peace, and that Mr. Kellogg is going to co-operate with him. American policy at this time, it was stated, does not go beyond readiness to assist in the Nicaraguan peace program.

Secretary Kellogg said today there was nothing new in the Mexican situation. Questioned about a report that Admiral Latimer, in command of the American warships in Nicaraguan waters, had called the rebels into a conference and urged them to make their peace with the existing regime, the Secretary said that he had received no report to this effect from the Admiral. He said that he had no present intention of asking that more American marines or more battleships be sent to Nicaragua.

The announcement was made at the Department that all the recent correspondence between Mexico and the United States probably would be made public next Wednesday. This is understood to deal in large part with the long standing controversy over the Mexican oil and land laws.

School Children Escape Fire.

By the Associated Press.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Nov. 20.—Thirty-one school children and their teacher climbed from a window to safety when a fire at the entrance of a rural school four miles south of Maryville, Mo., late yesterday, blocked their passage. The damage was small. The blaze started from a bonfire near the building.

Boy Accidentally Kills Brother.

By the Associated Press.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Nov. 20.—James Kresak, 15 years old, son of a farmer near Wilber, Neb., was accidentally killed by his brother, Frank, 16, late yesterday in the woods near their home. The boys were squirrel hunting and Frank did not see James, who stepped from behind a tree and received the charge in his neck.

The Business Expands

In 1889 the House of Kieselhorst was located at 1000 Olive street. ONE FLOOR.

Under the management of E. A. Kieselhorst it rapidly outgrew these quarters, and in 1897 the business was moved to 914 Olive street. TWO FLOORS. In 1905 the change was made to the present location 1007 Olive street. FIVE FLOORS. Here with much larger facilities it actively entered upon the career of intensive service which has placed it in the front rank of piano institutions in America.

Thousands have depended on the House of Kieselhorst for 47 years for reliable pianos, phonographs and radios, and its recommendations are eagerly accepted.

Harvard Takes Drubbing By Yale Calmly Enough Play-by-Play on Radio

St. Louis Alumni of the Crimson and the Blue Foregather at University Club to Hear McNamee on KSD.

Harvard men in the University Club dining room were silent and resigned. After all, it does feel better to be beaten by Yale than any other school. Yale sounded quite gentle over the radio yesterday afternoon. The Yale backfield men were reported to be huddling in a sorrowful and lingering way, as if to let Harvard know: "This hurts us as much as it does you."

Several times it seemed as if Yale might let the Red team win. For one brief moment Harvard actually was ahead, 7 to 6, but both the spell and Harvard passed badly.

A Harvard back punted squarely between the arms of Sturhahn of the Yale guard and he fell on the blocked ball for Yale's only touchdown. Another Harvard back, Guarnaccia, tried to drop-kick from the 30-yard line, forgetting that drop-kicks that far back are a sacred Harvard relic which Brickley left, not to be touched. He didn't touch it.

Play by Play Over Radio.

Most of the grads in the club dining room, who listened to Graham McNamee broadcast a play-by-play account of the game from the Yale Bowl at New Haven over KSD, the Post-Dispatch station, seemed to be pulling for Harvard. Others sat respectfully at luncheon tables with sober faces, and one said: "Don't cheer, boys; the poor fellows are fumbling." There were few Yale cheers. Even Yale alumni restrained themselves.

feeling, no doubt, the honor Harvard had bestowed in permitting its team to be beaten, numbers and all, by Yale.

Even McNamee, the announcer seemed to share the general feeling of his audience. He spoke soothingly through the first quarter while the teams were floundering around, missing field goals, blocking each other's punts and failing to make first downs.

"You know, even if both these teams have been beaten," he said, "they're playing each other now and that makes a game of it. It's the beginning of the second quarter, remember, and Harvard's ball on her own 19-yard line. Second down and 7 to go. I like the Harvard coach, Horween. He's all right. Here comes Putman in for Stafford at quarter. Putnam is a classy quarterback. Next year he'll be a Harvard star...I hope to tell you....Harvard is going to punt out of danger....Coady punts to Yale's 45-yard line...no...somebody is offside. They're bringing the ball back...Harvard huddles and goes into kick formation....(A tumult from the crowd)....

Sturhahn Makes Touchdown.

"His kick was blocked...the line broke and a man fell on it....over ...a touchdown....A TOUCHDOWN ....Sturhahn the great guard on Yale went through and blocked the kick then fell on it over the line....er—the score is now (very mildly) 6 to 0 in favor of Yale."

Then the teams began a slow, stupid exchange of punts, with Harvard losing ground until the half brought respite.

During the intermission Harvard and Yale men communed together at the tables or in the hall outside. They did not talk football. There were discussions of the Danzig Corridor, pragmatism, the Nordic theorem and the nebular hypothesis—just the common little mundane subjects which Harvard and Yale men use for small talk.

Start of Third Quarter.

The first quarter started, and after Harvard had lost the ball on an intercepted pass and Sturkhahn had failed to kick a field goal for Yale it was again Harvard's ball . . ." Miller drives at center for a yard. Another center thrust gains two more. It is second down and eight to go. They are both offside. A delayed fake pass through center failed to go and Harvard kicks to her own 36-yard line. Yale is penalized 15 yards for holding. The play goes, and it is Harvard's ball on her 36-yard line. . . . Harvard kicks. . . A touchdown . . . a touchdown! . . . No . . . no . . . a Yale man fell on the ball behind the goal line, so it's touchback and Yale's ball on the 20-yard line . .

"Hoben is blocked at center . . . Hoben runs again and makes nine yards on a fake pass . . Wheeer . . . a fumble . . . Harvard recovers Yale's fumble on Yale's 36-yard line . . . Now is her chance . . . Now is the best opportunity she has had to score . . . Harvard fumbles on the first play . . . Recovers. Second down and 11 to go. Fo-rrrrward . . . pass and—and—HE'S OVER for a touchdown . . . Saltonstall the Harvard end took a pass from Chauncey on the 10-yard line . . . He was free and right opposite the goal posts. He galloped over . . . This is a football game . . . the annual classic in the Yale bowl at New Haven. (A new crescendo of sound)—Harvard just made her point after touchdown. The score is now 7 to 6 in favor of Harvard."

But the laws of football are immutable, one of these laws being that unless you can block a try at goal from the field you'd better let Yale get within the 30-yard line. Yale had been shooting at Harvard goal posts all afternoon until they looked familiar and her line several times had got close enough to be almost chummy.

"It is now Yale's ball on the 30-yard line—last part of the third quarter, score 7 to 6 in favor of Harvard . .. Hollabird is thrown for a loss around left end, second down and 12 to go . . . a pass . . . successful . . . Hollabird to Kline carries the ball to Harvard's 46-yard line . . . Yale plunges for no gain, second down and 10 to go . . . Kline passes . . . 10, 20, 30 . . . and the ball is now on Harvard's 22-yard line . . Wadsworth goes in . . . They're going to try for a field goal . . . there's the kick . . . and it's OVER. The score is now 9 to 7 in favor of Yale."

Bunnell in Spectacular Run.

Bunnell, the Yale quarterback, made a spectacular run in the third quarter, again carrying the ball to Harvard's territory and when Yale had got on the 28-yard line McNamee began to lament the situation:

"Oh, for one of the old timers now," he said, "the boys that could make 40-yard drop kicks! We don't see any more like that... they're scarce nowadays....Bunnell drops back....he's going to kick.... BEAUTIFUL....Why, he put it OVER. Some dropkick. Some dropkick. The score is now 12 to 7 in favor of Yale."

And there it remained.

WEAK HEART, NOT POISON, CAUSED DEATH OF BOY, 13

Canned Beans were not Responsible for Andrew Meeker's Illness, Autopsy Shows.

Acute dilation of the heart caused the death of Andrew J. Meeker, 13-year-old school boy of 2422 North Spring avenue, at Mullanphy Hospital last Monday, following a sudden illness which his family believed might have been caused by eating canned beans.

Parts of the contents of the boys' stomach, submitted to Dr. R. B. H. Gradwohl for chemical analysis, showed no evidences of poison. Dr. T. E. Carriere, who performed the autopsy, found the elements of meningitis, and an extremely weak heart condition.

Mrs. Mona Williams housekeeper for the Meeker family, had experienced pains in the stomach, following a meal she had prepared with the canned beans, and this led to the assumption that poison might have been present. The boy had been complaining of a cold for several days and had taken several quinine capsules prior to a convulsion, which the Coroner believes a weakened heart was unable to resist.

SUIT OVER INSURANCE OF STILL OPERATOR

Fraternal Order Pleads That Law Violation Invalidated Policy.

A copy of a Coroner's verdict finding that Walter Cavett, 39 years old, a chemist, "died at Barnes Hospital April 1, 1925, of shock and burns suffered in the explosion of a still while making 'hootch' at his residence, "1925 McCausland avenue," will be part of the evidence presented in Circuit Court tomorrow by attorneys for the Modern Woodmen of America, a fraternal organization, which is being sued for $2000 insurance by Cavett's widow.

Cavett was fatally injured at 11:30 a. m., April 1, 1925, when the still exploded, setting fire to the house. Firemen rescued Mrs. Cavett and her 16-months-old baby from the second floor and found the wrecked still and a quantity of alcohol and whisky in the basement.

When Mrs. Cavett, who has three other children, attempted to collect her husband's $2000 insurance from the Modern Woodmen, payment was refused on the ground that Cavett had been suspended from the order a month before his death for failure to pay the $3.10 premium and 35 cents dues for February, 1925. A check sent by Mrs. Cavett to her husband's local 'Camp' at Carlinville, Ill., covering both the insurance premium and dues up to the time of his death, was returned. Mrs. Cavett then filed suit here and went to live with relatives at Jacksonville, Ill.

John E. Turner, attorney for the Modern Woodmen, yesterday filed an amended petition, setting forth sections of the by-laws of the Order, which declare null and void the rights of members "occupied in the liquor business," or who die "in consequence of a violation or attempted violation of the law."

Turner declared the sections to be specific and expressed the opinion that they "will stand in any court." "Occupation in the liquor business" is defined under the by-laws as "any work or duty, either with or without compensation, in connection with the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquor." The amended petition alleges that Cavett was so engaged when injured and that his death resulted "in consequence of a violation of the law."

Cavett joined the Modern Woodmen at Carlinville May 21, 1924, and paid the insurance premiums and dues until March, 1925.

AN OPEN LETTER

TO THE OFFICERS, DIRECTORS AND EMPLOYES OF THE UNION ELECTRIC LIGHT AND POWER CO.

Greetings:—

On the eve of the opening of your magnificent new retail store and enlarged quarters please allow us to publicly congratulate you on this and other epochal achievements, which are too generally known to need reiteration here.

In voicing our admiration for your progress, we cannot help but feel that we express the good wishes of countless others among your citizen stockholders, who, however, have been in less intimate contact than we with the personalities which have collectively striven for the success you have attained.

You are standing on the threshold of a new era of progress. The guiding hand, which has steadily drawn you to this pinnacle, in the person of your Sales Manager, Mr. Charles E Michel, will undoubtedly lead you to undisputed first place in public utility merchandising.

Thanks to your efforts St. Louis even now is second to no city in the world in the widespread use of electricity for saving labor in the home. The fact that we have supplied you with these home labor savers for the ten most successful years of your career is the greatest pride we know.

Faithfully yours,

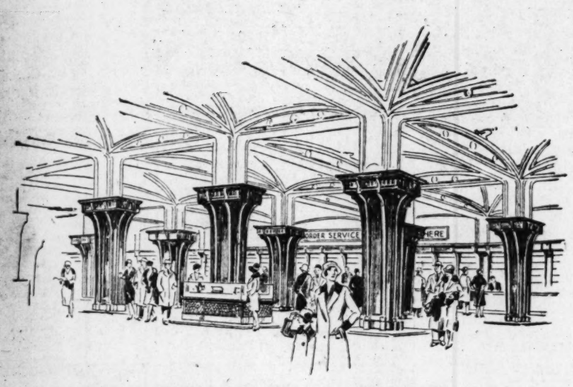
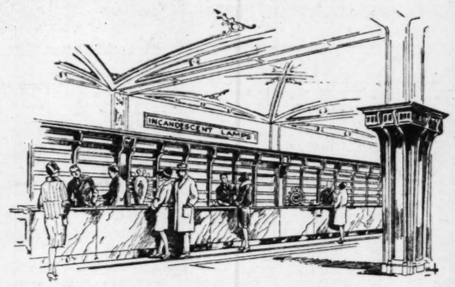
OPENING TOMORROW



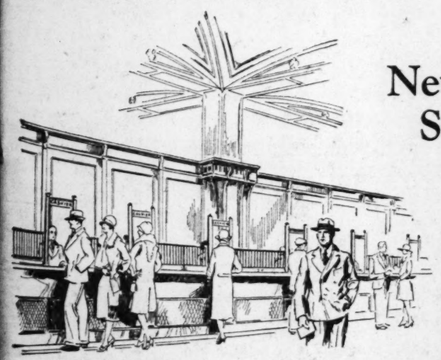
Our New Service Floor

We feel sure that the thousands of our customers who visit our main office daily will be delighted with the rearrangement of our first floor upon which we have grouped most of our services which we are anxious they shall enjoy fully. It is a bright, cheerful floor, most brilliantly illuminated spot in St. Louis—the last word in scientific lighting—shadowless light, no glare.



For Your Convenience

We have doubled the floor space of our building to make it easier for our customers to order electricity for their homes; easier to exchange incandescent lamps; easier to pay bills; easier and far more pleasant for them to transact business with us. Above all, we have made it easier for this company to render better public service and that is our constant effort—better public service.

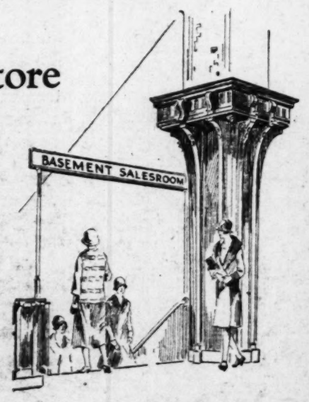


Never Before So Cheap

St. Louis homes use twice the amount of electricity they did 15 years ago yet the average residence bill in St. Louis has increased less than 30 per cent. The rate in St. Louis for the use of electric appliances in the home is the lowest among the large cities of the country. Electricity is the cheapest necessity in modern life. The average residence bill in St. Louis is only $1.80 a month. Use this great labor-saver in the home freely.

A New Basement Store

We will open shortly a new bargain store in our basement. There, from time to time, we will offer to our customers floor samples, rebuilt appliances, such as washing machines and other bargains at prices below those regularly charged. All of these bargains will carry Union Electric's full guarantee.



For Better Public Service

You are cordially invited to attend the Formal Opening of our new Service Floor.

Week beginning November 22nd
8 a.m. to 5:15 p.m.

Order Service Here

No contracts to sign for residence service; just a minute at our new service counter along the west wall of the service floor and electricity will be awaiting you in your new home. Or, if you wish, simply telephone MAin 3220 and your connection will be made promptly.

New Lamps for Old Free

We give new lamps free in exchange for old lamps of the sizes and types most useful in the home. The only restriction is that they must originally have been purchased from us and the glassware must be unbroken. Bring them to our new lamp counter or telephone for free delivery to the home.

Ask Questions Freely

Our new adjustment bureau is on the second floor. We have 230,000 customers; we render nearly 10,000 bills daily. Some errors, hence, are inevitable. But they will be corrected to your satisfaction in the adjustment bureau, and quickly.

Our New Appliance Section

A beautiful new section of the first floor where dependable, guaranteed appliances can be bought and paid for in easy payments with your light bill. Portable lamps, including "lamps from all the world" shown more attractively than ever before in St. Louis. Shop here for Christmas.

Information

Just inside the door on the new Service Floor, where you can learn quickly where to go to command the many services which we are eager to place at your disposal. It now will be unnecessary for our customers to go above the third floor. Our services have been brought together for greater public convenience.

MR. AND MRS. HAMMERLE AND FAMILY. (c)

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

CLICHE—Watch the sport pages for the information you desire about the University of Southern California football players.

MRS. J. S. W.—Dogwood usually grows to size of a young apple tree. The margin of woodlands is the natural place for dogwood to grow. The branches grow horizontally in a shelving formation. The blossoms are white and appear in May.

G. S.—Homemade blueing is prepared by mixing 1 ounce of Chinese blue with 1 quart of soft water. Powder blue and water in a large bottle and shake well and often for three days. After the sediment has settled after the last shaking filter and bottle the liquid. Use as you do the commercial blueing. For starch that will not stick to the irons make the starch in the usual way and add a tablespoonful of the following mixture: Mix 2 ounces each of spermaceti, gum arabic, and powdered borax, 1 ounce of glycerin, and 1 quart of warm water.

K. S. D.—We know of no particular form of depressive insanity that is called by the term you use. The word mania means an acute case of some type of insanity. A person afflicted with pyromania has an insane desire or impulse to destroy by fire. A person with a propensity to steal is called a kleptomaniac. Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson has been married twice, her first husband died. She has two children, a boy and a girl. Australia became known by that name when Charlemange called the margravate east of Bavaria by that name in the eighth century. The name is mentioned in history about the year 936. Bert Williams, the Negro comedian died March 5, 1922.

MRS. O.—To work out a budget plan for your income you should keep a record for several months of all expenditures made by any member of the family for any purpose with money that is considered the family income, in your case, the salary, as you intend paying off old debts with the extra money you receive. Then list your expenses by classifying them into food, rent, insurance, clothes, household upkeep, fuel, light, entertainment and miscellaneous. Expenses such as coal, insurance, clothes, and vacations should be divided into twelve parts so the cost will be evenly distributed. The proportion in which you divide your income to cover your expenses depends a great deal on the personal habits of your family. Some people prefer to dress well regardless of where they live or what they eat; others would rather eat well, and still other persons prefer to live in a comfortable house. It would be well to list all the expenses that must be paid such as rent, insurance, light, coal, and other necessary items and then figure the food allowance, leaving the clothes allowance to be whatever amount may be left over each month. Two adults and two children should be able to live comfortably but not extravagantly on $200 a month.

LEGAL INFORMATION

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

A. L.—The person who has possession of the will of the deceased man should file the will with the Probate Court as soon as possible.

CORRECT SERVICE.—The widow of a soldier of the World war is not pensioned when the soldier dies. The full amount of the adjusted pay certificate is paid when the soldier dies.

A. W. B.—You may name your wife as the only executor of your will even if you will all or part of your estate to her. Consult a lawyer to make sure that the will is legally drawn up if the estate is valuable.

BOOB.—Ten per cent of the salary of the father of a family can be garnished by a company that has loaned him for the amount of the loan that he still owes the company. Better consult a lawyer if the company sues you for the balance of the debt.

A. B.—Your case appears rather involved, so we advise you to consult a lawyer to get it straightened out properly. Only the persons signing as joint owners of property have any share in said property so the man's children cannot be considered as shareholders.

L. H. W.—Common law marriages are no longer legal in Missouri unless contracted before 1921. To legalize the living together of a man and woman as husband and wife since 1921 a regular marriage must be performed after a marriage license has been obtained.

L. H. O.—The highest legal rate of interest that can be charged on loans in Missouri is eight percent unless the loan is made by a regular pawn broker. You were charged a usurious rate if you have paid the company $70 to date for a $15 loan. Consult a lawyer and turn the case over to him for investigation.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

THANK YOU.—Repeat your question enclosing stamped addressed envelope for reply.

MRS. F. J. C.—Consult a physician and undergo an examination to determine the type of skin disease that you have. Proper treatment can only be given when a case has been properly diagnosed.

BILE VICTIM.—There are other preparations to take than calomel and if you will send stamped self-addressed envelope and repeat your question will send you the names.

J. H.—The skin affection on your leg is probably eczema and should be treated by the following ointment: Mix thoroughly and apply to the skin before retiring at night. 2 drachms nitrate of mercury ointment, ½ ounce ammoniated mercury ointment, ½ ounce glycerin, 2 drachms white vaseline. Thoroughly mix and apply.

READER.—Apply the following ointment to your skin to remedy the blackheads and enlarged pores: Mix 1 drachm precipitated sulphur and 1 ounce rose water ointment. Apply at night after thoroughly with warm water and castile soap and then rub the ointment into the skin. This treatment can be applied at night and the face washed carefully in the morning.

MISS TWENTY.—Poor dreulation of the blood is undoubtedly the cause of your cold feet. You should consult a physician and undergo a thorough examination to determine the cause of the poor circulation and correct the condition that is making you suffer so much. It is not safe for you to correct the trouble but you should not delay any longer.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review today, says:

"Support for the market in stocks nowadays does not spring from any signs of a pick-up in business but from continued ease in money and the absence of adverse industrial developments. On occasions the market is carried higher by a favorable combination of forces, but at other times, as in the week just ended, liquidation spreads and prices are driven down in the face of such constructive news as easy money, extra dividends, a rally in sugar and a speculative upturn in French francs. In such markets as the present money plays an important part, for stock trading is centered in the hands of a few, and wealthy investors are content to hold dividend paying stocks so long as they themselves see no trouble ahead and so long as they can borrow funds cheaply. Rightly or wrongly, the financial district has convinced itself that money not only will remain in supply for the weeks ahead, but that low rates may be maintained after the turn of the year.

Easy Money Advertised.

"In speculative quarters the benefits of easy money still are advertised more widely than its implications, and, it must be admitted, the downturn in business activity has not been so marked as might be supposed by the availability of funds. While we may be in the future course of industry, its foundation appears now to rest on solid ground and, notwithstanding its accelerated pace in the last two years, the usual dangers that develop in a prosperity era have not in this instance been allowed to enter. Except for the record holiday trade that is promised as a logical climax for a year of unprecedented earnings, nobody expects any further and immediate rise in the general business curve, but on the other hand, the recession in key industries that already is under way does not arouse grave concern. The movement is looked upon as natural and, in a sense, desirable.

Bond Yields Lowered.

"A big and strong bond market has expanded until it compares in volume with the best for 1926 to date and the trend of prices has lowered the yield on standard prices, notwithstanding the announcement of a huge flotation within the next few days by the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey. The extraordinary demand for these bonds, incidentally, even before any public offering has been made, testifies to the character of the market in securities of this class. Improvement in certain of the exchanges has, of course, enlivened the demand for foreign securities, in which, it may be added, a broad interest on the part of investors over the country is developing as the movement for stabilization in currencies abroad spreads. In international importance the rise of the franc this week to 3.64c, a new recent high, was the event of outstanding significance for at that level this exchange stands 87 per cent above its position of 1.95 only last July 20.

Cotton Estimate Pending.

"In the commodities markets cotton commands most attention at the moment, since the next Government estimate will be announced on Monday, and the average guess of 88 members of the New York Cotton Exchange is that the new figure will be 18,061,000 bales. A fortnight ago, it will be remembered, the average of 95 similar guesses was 17,172,000, which was phenomenally close to the actual forecast of 17,918,000. Even should the new figure represent an increase over the last, however, as is expected, it will present no new problem, for what concerns the South now is the financing and handling of an abnormal crop, but through the work of Eugene Meyers and the President's Cotton Committee, plans have been formulated.

Index Number Lower.

"Publication during the week of the Bureau of Labor Statistics index of wholesale commodity prices impressed upon the country the persistency of the downward price movement, but the decline continues to be as gradual as it is steady. From its level of a year ago the general index is down only 6 per cent, but, unfortunately, the largest losses have occurred in the group where the country could least afford any shrinkage in values, that is, in the agricultural group. Recent decline in cotton has contributed to the recession, but the fact remains that as against this time last year agricultural prices are down 10 per cent, or far more proportionately than nonagriculture commodities. This subject deserves study but as index of the future perhaps no set of figures will be watched so closely as those on building activities, for these, it is felt, reflect the rise and fall in the present prosperity wave fairly closely."

Shorts Cover Saturday.

"A concerted drive against traders who had sold stocks for a decline featured a fairly active short session on the stock market today. Hurried covering in many of the actvie leaders forced a rally after early irregularity. The feature of the day was the continued spurt of Baldwin Locomotive, which not only established a new peak for the year but sold at the highest level since the post-war boom. Advances of as much as ½ a point between sales stampeded 'trapped' 'shorts.' Mercantile reviews for the week were somewhat more optimistic, while the prospect for continued favorable credit conditions encouraged operations for the rise and stimulated activity in the bond markets, which continued to rule firm.

Action of Baldwin Factor.

"Speculators for the rise showed greater resistance to selling pressure after a setback in some of the motor shares and unsettled early trading. Support came to the rescue of the depressed shares, however, when heavy buying sent Baldwin to a new peak since 1919 above 146, last year's high record. Strength in Baldwin encouraged traders to renew operations for the rise in other favorites which had been sold for the decline, and brisk rallies ensued in U. S. Steel, General Motors, Mack Trucks and other issues. Independent strength was apparent in several specialties and in the public utility group. Tobacco shares again were in demand. Railroad shares received improved support, but the volume of business in this group remained small.

Commodities Quiet.

"Trading in the principal commodity markets was quiet, dealings in cotton being restricted by approach of the Government's fortnightly crop estimate due Monday. The trade has been prepared for a forecast of slightly more than 18,000,000 bales, and in anticipation of this figure May contracts held around the 13c level.

Further Upturn in Franc.

"Continued heavy buying of French francs in London resulting in a jump of 18 points before the opening of the New York market, provided the chief development of interest in foreign exchange trading. Rates on Paris were marked up here about 14 points before a recession took place. Sterling recorded a small advance, but lire continued to sag and Chinese exchange was again under pressure in sympathy with weakness in silver quotations.

ROAD BOND MARKET MARKS WEEK'S TRADE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—This has been a week of unusual interest in the investment market. In the first place there was a continued show of strength in all high grade securities, including new high records in some of the U. S. Treasury bonds. In the second place there has been a revival of buying in foreign dollar bonds, which carried prices for new high levels of the year at any rate.

But more significant perhaps than either of these two developments, was the decision recorded the announced intention of the Standard Oil of New Jersey to retire its preferred stock and substitute therefor an additional issue of common stock and a newly created 5 per cent debenture bond.

The week's improvement in foreign dollar bonds was impressive. Particularly is this the case in the French list, where prices went higher than at any previous time this year. Probably buying was encouraged by the remarkable upturn in the French franc and an evident return of capital to that country.

Another factor was the turning of investors willing to assume a certain amount of risk away from the domestic field, where opportunities are steadily becoming more limited, to foreign securities.

Much not only is the return higher but chances of market price appreciation are thought apparently brighter.

The feature of the general market during the week was its broadness. Seasoned issues of all descriptions were in demand and some of the underlying railroad issues were more active than in months past. It was primarily an investment market and not a speculative one.

Week-End Profit-Taking in Bond Market.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Week-end profit taking retarded the forward movement of bond prices in today's quiet trading. Declines were limited mainly to fractions, however, leaving the general list of quotations not far from the year's highest levels.

Investment interest turned to the purchase of early loan flotations for the cities of Yokohama and Osaka, which may be offered for sale next week, and to the trading chances that a few of the new standard Oil debentures may be left for public after preferred stockholders have exercised their preferential subscription rights for the $150,000,000 issue. Open bids for the bonds continued to exceed the offering price of 100¼.

With the reorganization machinery of the St. Paul Railway certain to be speeded up by the foreclosing sale of the property scheduled for next week, active buying for the road's bonds continued today, the carrier lines lagging behind, with small scale demand in the senior issues.

Heavy commitments of first mortgage 4½ per cent bonds priced around 99. The company is a subsidiary of Southeastern Power & Light Co.

Kennedy Mort. Financial Commissioner of Japan, has concluded negotiations for a $20,000,000 loan from J. P. Morgan & Co. to Yokahama for reconstruction purposes. The details will be announced by the banking firm Monday.

The Texas Power & Light Co. will offer Monday, through a syndicate headed by Harris, Forbes & Co., Coffin & Burr, Inc., and Lee Higginson & Co., $16,000,000 5 per cent and refunding 5 per cent 30-year bonds.

The Electric Public Service Co., through Stanley & Bissell Inc. and R. H. Wilson & Co., Inc., will offer Tuesday $1,000,000 of 15-year 6 per cent bonds.

Clearings, Money, Silver

The St. Louis Clearing House Association reported clearings for the week ended Nov. 20 $60,000,000, corresponding day last year, $21,000,000; this year, $6,819,400,000; corresponding period last year, $6,773,800,000. Increase for week, 18.19%; year, 0.67%. Debits to individual accounts, $27,000,000; corresponding week 1925, $26,000,000; debits to date, $4,951,600,000; corresponding date 1925, $4,951,600,000; combined debits were $45,200,000; total to date in individual and bank and bankers' accounts $12,931,100,000.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—Prices were improving on the bourse today. Three per cent rentes, 50 francs 30 centimes. Exchange on London, 129 francs 30 centimes. Dollar, 27 francs 30 centimes. The dollar was quoted at 26 francs 37 centimes.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Bar silver 25d per ounce; money 3¾ per cent; discount rates short and three months' bills 4 1-16@4 13/16 per cent.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Bar silver, 53¾c; Mexican dollars, 40¾c.

Weekly Metal Review.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Bookings of fabricated structural steel for the month of October proved to be much larger than expected. This was thought to have furnished the average consumer with sufficient supplies for the time being and particular new demand is looked for during the next few weeks. Mill operations promise some curtailment with the approach of the year.

Pig iron trade was small and orders were confined largely to immediate quantity shipment over the first quarter.

Copper producers continued to maintain quotations asking 13.87½ cents delivered in the Connecticut Valley. There was little improvement in inquiry. Trade reports indicated that most of the large consumers have covered their requirements for the year. Producers were not willing to shade much beyond February shipments, anticipating some turn for the better with the new year. European consumers continued to hold off.

Tin was steady and active here in face of a sharp break at London, as a result of the failure to end the coal strike. Most of the spot business was credited to operators with a good demand also ruling the futures.

Lead was in active demand, with the only drawback the unsettlement of the foreign markets. Producers were credited with allowing liberal orders while consumers were willing to place trade at the 8-cent level.

Zinc was not active. The bulk of the consumers were having their wants met through the contracts placed earlier this month.

Antimony was firm with an absence of selling pressure.

FRENCH FRANC RISES SHARPLY DURING WEEK

That There Is No Longer Any Flight of Capital From France Considered as Perhaps Most Important Factor in Upturn.

By Leased Wire from the New York Business Office of the Post-Dispatch.
NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted weekly foreign exchange says:

"The most important development in trading this week was the steady upward movement in French exchange, which could be reasonably attributed to the extended duration of the period of political tranquility and to the growing confidence in the part of the financial position as indicated by the large decrease in currency in the hands of the public. It had been suggested that the last week. It had been suggested that the buying of French exchange indicated a return of French capital to the country that had fled from it midsummer when the rate for the franc reached the low of 1.95, but perhaps the most important factor is that there is no longer any flight of capital from France which in itself, is a strengthening factor.

"The upward movements made good progress at the beginning of the week and the advance continued on each succeeding day the franc moving up 15 points on yesterday's trading and showing a gain of 40 points in all for the week, or nearly a half cent to the franc.

"The movement was directly influenced by strength in French exchange which was accompanied by sales of sterling and buying of francs with which the rate for sterling cables yielded from 4.85 3-16 to 4.84¾. Dealings in sterling were on a large scale measured in dollars than in francs in most cases made in half million blocks.

"Foreign exchange had its own special movement, crown checks on Oslo selling early in the week at 24.98, but they moved up to 25.04 before the close, after when they moved up from 25.00 to 25.76 over night and rose later to 25.94. This movement was, according to all reports one of governmental operations.

"Different conditions prevailed in South American exchanges, where there was a steady decline in Brazilian exchange, attributed to anticipated steps of putting into effect a new policy for stabilizing the currency. After selling at 13.56 early in the week, the rate for milreis dropped steadily, closing down to 12.35 yesterday.

"Silver exchanges showed a stronger tone and both Hongkong and Shanghai were established on a substantially higher level. The metal fluctuated widely at times but the changed condition was indicated by the sale of bar material, which sold at 51½ as recently as Oct. 19, was up to 53¾ on Thursday. It reached from 52¾ to 53¾ on Friday and was followed by that movement by a recession also in Chinese rates."

Continued heavy buying of French francs in London resulting in a jump of 18 points before the opening of the New York market, is the chief development of interest in foreign exchange trading Saturday. Rates on Paris were marked up here about 18 points in the early stock place. Sterling recorded a small advance, but live continued to wage and Chinese exchange was under pressure in sympathy with weakness in silver quotations.

New York Coffee.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—The market for coffee futures declined today under renewed liquidation and trade selling attributed to the continued weakness of Rio exchange. Prices broke to 14.89c for March which closed at 14.70c with the general market closing at net declines of 3 to 12 points. Sales were estimated at 21,000 bags. Closing quotations: December, 16.05c; January, 14.90c; March, 14.70c; May, 14.18c; July, 13.79c; September, 13.59c.

Spot coffee dull. Rio 7s, 16c; Santos 4s 20¼c to 21c. No fresh offers were reported in the cost and freight market. Rio exchange on London 3-32d lower; dollar buying rate 110 reis higher. Rio market buying rate 1100 reis higher. Santos 500 to 850 to 1200 reis higher. Santos 500 to 875 reis higher. Brazilian port receipts, 43,000; Jundiahy receipts, 30,000.

New York Sugar.

By the Associated Press.
NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—The raw sugar market was firm today but no sales were reported and prices were unchanged at 4.77c for Cuban duty paid. There was a good demand at this level, but holders were asking 4.83c.

Raw sugar futures were strong and active on continued heavy trade and commission house buying, promoted by the firmness in the spot market and reports that Europe was again inquiring for sugar in Cuba. Prices closed at the best point of the day and from 8 to 8 points net higher. Approximate sales 78,750 tons. December closed 3.95c; January 3.09c, March 3.08c, May 3.17c. July 3.25c.

The refined market was unchanged at 5.85c to 6.10c for fine granulated with a good inquiry.

ANDREWS WANTS PRIVATE MONOPOLY FOR ALL WHISKY

Urges Company, Under U. S. Regulation, to Provide Manufacture and Distribute Medicinal Liquor.

MELLON IS SAID TO INDORSE THE PLAN

Board of "Outstanding Citizens" Proposed as Directors; Present 15,000,000 Gallons Will Last 5 Years

Post-Dispatch Bureau
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20. — Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Lincoln C. Andrews, prohibition enforcement chief, made public today his plan to replenish the diminished medicinal liquor stocks, for which he requested emergency legislation by Congress at the short session this winter.

His proposal is to create a private "beneficent monopoly" which would purchase and own all medicinal liquors in the country, distribute them so as to prevent diversion or adulteration, and enter the distillery business to assure continuation of the supply. The monopoly would be conducted under strict governmental regulation.

Action is necessary, according to General Andrews, because existing medicinal liquor supplies have been reduced to 15,000,000 gallons, or about the requirements of the next five years, and whisky must age at least four years before it is fit for use as a medicine. He said new distilling must be undertaken before another Congress meets. His proposal was summarized as follows:

"This corporation would provide manufacture for replenishment and, under governmental regulation, distribute medicinal spirits direct to the retail druggist by American railways express. This corporation would buy, for immediate delivery in bottles, labeled, sealed and cased, all the private owned stocks and six or eight distillery warehouses suitably located for efficient distribution.

Price Fixed by Market Cost.

"The purchase price paid by the corporation, and the sales price to the purchaser at the drug store, would be based on prevailing prices during the six months immediately preceding Nov. 1, 1926.

"The method of financing the corporation is yet under discussion in an endeavor to accomplish the object without government financial support.

"The suggestion is that the Government will name the initial Board of Directors. It is proposed to select as directors outstanding citizens whose experience will assure proper management — wholesale druggists, bankers, physicians, life insurance executives, etc.

"The Government would audit the accounts of the corporation from time to time, and earnings would be limited to assure a reasonable cost to the public.

"The corporation would own all American brands of liquor, and their imitation can thus be made a serious crime, with heavy penalties. It would have all the present supply of spirits bottled in glass which prevents a further shrinkage and enables the Government always to know definitely how much whisky is actually on hand and that all on hand is actually pure."

Wets and Drys Dubious.

There is doubt that either the wets or drys in Congress will gravitate toward the proposal. Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League, withheld judgment until he saw the finished bill. Some members of both houses feel that when the manufacture of medicinal spirits is resumed, it should be on the basis of competitive bidding between distilleries. Senators Edge (Rep.) of New Jersey and Edwards (Dem.) of New Jersey, have called a caucus of wet Senators to meet as soon as Congress convenes. They will lay out their plan of campaign for the session.

Gen. Andrews cited numerous difficulties with the present system of competition in the legal liquor market. He charged that commission agents of liquor owners "drum up" trade, and not infrequently debauch physicians and druggists and act as bootleg representatives in arranging for the diversion of pure whisky to illegitimate traffic. The whisky is diluted, he said, and druggist accomplices sell to an innocent public an amount of fake whisky equal to what was withdrawn.

It was said in Washington tonight that Secretary Mellon, who joined President Coolidge in vetoing a proposal previously made that the Government take over the medicinal liquor supply of the country, has indorsed the Andrews plan.

Andrews estimated his plan would save the Government about $1,000,000 a year in administering and enforcing the prohibition law.

Glister B

VICTORY IS WON IN LAST FEW JUMPS

Sarazen and Other Bad Actors Mar Start of Rich Bowie Stake, but Best Horse Is Victor.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 20.—Glister, the four-year-old filly that raced for Messrs. Montford and B. B. Jones, accounted for the Gadsden D. Bryan Memorial handicap at Bowie this afternoon, when she was up in the final strides to snatch victory from Harry Payne Whitney's Backbone. It was a great race, this richest event of the Bowie meeting, and the finish a credit to Handicapper Joseph McLennan.

Three of the fifteen starters passed the winning mark heads apart and it was not until the very last stride that the race was decided.

Bad Actors Delay Start.

Starter Milton and his assistants had their trouble with the big field. There were several bad actors among the lot, Joy Smoke, Sarazen, Glister, Bulletin and J. Fred A. After a delay of 15 minutes, Milton caught them bunched and he sent them away to a splendid break.

J. Fred A. was off in front and Usher made the most of his advantage. Outfooting his field to the first turn and closely pursued by Glister, the pair raced head and head into the backstretch. Then Abe rushed Backbone up and tried issue with the leaders. At the half-mile pole Aranda sent the imported racer, Coplapo, up next the inside rail with a rush and at the turn out of the backstretch he was in front. Rounding the far turn, it looked as if Coplapo would win. Backbone, however, was hanging on but with bulldog courage and simply would not quit. In the meantime Glister was right on top of the pack and entering the home stretch, L. Lang took her out in the middle of the track, while Aranda still hugged the inside rail.

Twenty yards from the winning mark Backbone had a slight advantage, but Glister, who was in the good footing, got up and nailed him right at the end. Coplapo was fourth and tiring. He was in the deep going all the way and under the circumstances ran a remarkable race.

Purse Worth $21,300 to Winner.

The stake had a net value of $21,300 to the winner.

The Tip Top Handicap, a high weight affair for all ages patterned after the Australian handicaps, furnished a stirring contest in which the imported racer, Happy Argo, was winner by a nose from the favorite Mino.

MISSOURI GAINS 15 TO 0 VICTORY OVER KANSAS

Glister Beats Backbone in $21,000 Bryan Memorial

VICTORY IS WON IN LAST FEW JUMPS

Sarazen and Other Bad Actors Mar Start of Rich Bowie Stake, but Best Horse Is Victor.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 20.—Glister, the four-year-old filly that raced for Messrs. Montford and B. B. Jones, accounted for the Gadsden D. Bryan Memorial handicap at Bowie this afternoon, when she was up in the final strides to snatch victory from Harry Payne Whitney's Backbone. It was a great race, this richest event of the Bowie meeting, and the finish a credit to Handicapper Joseph McLennan.

Three of the fifteen starters passed the winning mark heads apart and it was not until the very last stride that the race was decided.

Bad Actors Delay Start.

Starter Milton and his assistants had their trouble with the big field. There were several bad actors among the lot, Joy Smoke, Sarazen, Glister, Bulletin and J. Fred A. After a delay of 15 minutes, Milton caught them bunched and he sent them away to a splendid break.

J. Fred A. was off in front and Usher made the most of his advantage. Outfooting his field to the first turn and closely pursued by Glister, the pair raced head and head into the backstretch. Then Glister rushed Backbone up and joined issue with the leaders. At the half-mile pole Arando sent the imported racer, Coplapo, up next to the inside rail with a rush and at the turn out of the backstretch he was in front. Rounding the far turn, it looked as if Coplapo would win. Backbone, however, was hanging on but with bulldog courage and simply would not quit. In the meantime Glister was right on top of the pack and entering the home stretch. L. Lang took her out to the middle of the track, while Arando still hugged the inside rail.

Twenty yards from the winning mark Backbone had a slight advantage, but Glister, who was in the good footing, got up and nailed him right at the end. Coplapo was fourth and tiring. He was in the deep going all the way and under the circumstances ran a remarkable race.

Like Worth $21,300 to Winner.

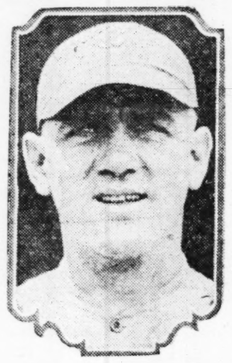
The stake had a net value of $21,300 to the winner.

The Tip Top Handicap, a high weight affair for all ages patterned after the Australian handicaps, furnished a stirring contest in which the imported racer, Happy Argo, was winner by a nose from the favorite Mino.

Steve O'Neill Signed as Brownie Catcher; Howley To Confer With Ball Here

President of St. Louis Americans Asks Manager to Come Before Nov. 29 and to Attend Minor League Meeting.

By J. Roy Stockton.



STEVE O'NEILL.

Steve O'Neil, veteran catcher, former member of the Cleveland Indians and last year with the Toronto Leafs, champions of the International League, has been signed for 1927 by the Browns, President Phil Ball of the St. Louis Americans announced last night.

O'Neill was in 136 games with the Toronto club last year and while he batted only .266 he did such brilliant work behind the bat that he was wanted by several major league clubs. Detroit offered him a contract and he also was offered the managerial reins at Toronto, but he turned down all other offers in favor of the one from St. Louis because he wanted to continue to work for Dan Howley, his manager at Toronto and the new leader of the Browns.

Howley, when interviewed at Toronto recently by a Post-Dispatch reporter, said he would make efforts to obtain O'Neill's services for the St. Louis club. He asked that no announcement be made until Owner Ball had a chance to negotiate with O'Neill.

"O'Neill did great work with the Toronto club," Howley said. "He took part in 136 games, was down to 170 pounds and he was a great help to the pitching staff. He was largely instrumental in developing the young pitchers who hurled the Leafs to a pennant and to a victory in five straight games over the Louisville Colonels."

O'Neill Not a Chicken.

O'Neill was born in Minooka, Pa., July 6, 1891, and broke into professional baseball with Elmira of the New York State League in 1910. He then went to the Philadelphia Americans, was sold to Worcester and was obtained by Cleveland in 1911, remaining with the Indians until he was traded to Boston in 1923. In 1925 he was with Reading and last year went to Toronto.

With the Leafs he scored 64 runs, made 115 hits in 433 times at bat, his safeties including 27 doubles, three triples and three home runs. He laid down 15 sacrifice hits and stole four bases.

The signing of O'Neill is the first step toward strengthening the Browns and the first move made since Howley was appointed manager. It is understood that Howley and Ball are negotiating for the services of one or two coaches, to assist the manager. O'Neill will be an assistant as well as a catcher.

Howley to Confer With Ball Here.

President Ball wired to Manager Howley last night asking him to come to St. Louis as soon as convenient to confer on plans to strengthen and rebuild the Browns.

"I asked Howley to try to come to St. Louis before Nov. 29," Ball said. "I also asked him to arrange to attend the minor league meeting at Asheville, N. C., Dec. 7, 8 and 9."

Except for the signing of Howley and O'Neill the two St. Louis clubs have been marking time since the world series. The world champion Cardinals have been waiting the return from Florida of President Sam Breadon and the Browns have been clearing the decks for the action which is expected as soon as Ball and Howley have their conference.

The Cardinals can afford to mark time. Business in a big way awaits the return of Breadon, but it has to do with financial and business arrangements between Breadon and Manager Hornsby and only the signing of Hornsby as manager is needed to make the future bright for the conquerors of the New York Yankees.

The Browns on the other hand face an extremely busy winter. Numerous trades probably will be made, there are many problems to be discussed and only about three weeks remain before the major league meetings.

"Many Things to Be Done."

Ball and Howley realize the necessity of rebuilding the Browns and it is probable that many new faces will be seen in the St. Louis American League uniforms when the squad assembles in the spring at its Tarpon Springs (Fla.) training camp.

"There are many things to be done," Bill Friel, business manager of the Browns, said "but we are forced to wait until Mr. Ball and Manager Howley have their conference. They are the ones to pass on any trades. Thus far nothing has been done toward rebuilding the team, except the signing of Howley and O'Neill.

Sisler Likely to Remain.

Former Manager George Sisler has declined to make any statement for publication as to his desire to remain in St. Louis or be traded, but Howley, when interviewed by a Post-Dispatch correspondent in Toronto, said he hoped that Sisler would decide that he wanted to remain with the Browns.

If the writer were a bookmaker laying odds on the proposition he would lay about 7-2 to 1 that Sisler would be the Browns' first baseman in 1927. The reasons for the odds are obvious. Sisler's home is here, he has played all his major league baseball in St. Louis uniform and he is one of the most popular players the city ever has had. That he failed as a manager is not held against him. Many great players have failed as managers. Masters at any trade are not always good teachers. Sisler continues to be a great ball player and it would be hard to replace him.

Moreover, Sisler has not asked to be traded. He has said that he wants Ball and Howley to decide whether he is to play here or be

MLLE. LENGLEN EASILY BEATS MISS BROWNE

About 2000 Persons See Champion Gain 6-3, 6-1 Victory in Pro Exhibition at Coliseum.

Suzanne Lenglen's visit to St. Louis last night under professional auspices at the Coliseum was successful in every way but financially.

Only about 2000 persons attended, which, considering the array of stars accompanying the women's champion of the tennis world, was not very good, even for the city which welcomed Ernie Nevers with 1400 and Gertrude Ederle with still fewer.

While the business manager was not turning any handsprings, the spectators thought the show was good and did not hesitate to applaud the performers frequently and with considerable critical appreciation of individual work.

In the main match of the evening Suzanne defeated Mary K. Browne, three times national champion, in straight sets, 6—3 and 6—1. Mary just succeeded in winning four games and the bonus of $100 which goes with that achievement.

Richards Beats Kinsey.

Vincent Richards and Howard Kinsey, in the first match on the program, furnished splendid entertainment for the spectators who were quick to show their appreciation. Apparently playing their strongest games, both men slashed and cut as if much depended upon it. Both sets went to deuce Richards winning both, 7-5, 7-5.

Richards' terrific serve was badly off and he was forced to fall back on his splendid backhand which stood him in good stead against Kinsey's cuts and placements.

Champion Jumpy at Start.

Mlle. Lenglen, confined to her bed with a sudden illness for most of the afternoon, obviously lacked pep when she took the floor arm in arm with her opponent. Suzanne's apparel consisted of the customary white knee length dress and white stockings and shoes and the old familiar bandeau of the news photographs was lavender to match her sleeveless jersey and scarf.

Miss Browne was attired all in white.

Suzanne was more than ordinarily jumpy at the outset and lost two straight games. Then, with the scent of battle in her nostrils, she threw off her outer sweater and became the Suzanne of the tournaments, volleying like a demon, driving Miss Browne all over the floor. Her serves took on more speed and her drives fairly sizzled over the tape.

From then on Mary could win only one game and lost the set 6-3.

The second set was just a workout for the French player and she took it easily, 6-1.

Crowd Swings to Suzanne.

Suzanne's path across the country is beset with trying obstacles, chief among which is her reputed operatic star's temperament. It was because of this, perhaps, that last night's crowd was a bit slow in accepting her, when Mary Browne ran through the first two games, scoring points on shots which Suzanne normally would have recovered in a flying leap, the spectators showered the Californian with applause almost to the exclusion of the French girl.

The attitude was quite unintentional and no doubt the visitor is becoming accustomed to it. After the first games had worn away and ocular curiosity had been satisfied, the onlookers soon found themselves bursting into storms of handclapping at the phenomenal "gets" of Suzanne and her smashing

Yale Gains 12-7 Victory Over Harvard; Bunnell Kicks 43-Yard Field Goal

Blocked Punt Enables Elis to Score Touchdown — Recovered Fumble Leads to Crimson Tally — 78,000 Persons Attend Final Big Three Game.

By the Associated Press.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 20—Thrusting two mighty feet out of the shadow of threatening defeat, a bruised and battered Yale bulldog kicked its way to victory over Harvard before a throng of 78,000 in the New Haven bowl today, 12 to 7.

Two spectacular field goals by Jerry Wadsworth and Captain Tibby Bunnell rescued the game for the Blue in the second half after a sensational 30 yard pass had unexpectedly put the Crimson out in front by a single point, 7 to 6. Leaping into the fray, a minute man from the sidelines, who had only one task and did it well, Wadsworth clinched Yale's triumph with a placement boot from the 23-yard line.

It remained for Bunnell, however, to contribute a spectacular climax to the struggle. His drop kick was one of the longest of the season, the ball soaring over the cross bar in the fourth period from the 43-yard line.

Sturhahn Scores Touchdown.

For a time during the gripping struggle of the ancient rivals it appeared that Yale, in spite of a more alert, and versatile attack, would fall short of victory, as it had so often done before in the last two years. Three times in the first three periods the Eli soldiers of the gridiron pushed to within scoring range, only to see the place kicks of the husky Sturhahn travel wide of the uprights. But where Sturhahn failed, two other sturdy warriors of the Blue succeeded, and under the clouts of their unerring toes, Yale draped the curtain of triumph over four successive defeats in a glorious finish.

Although the Cambridge team's stunning touchdown by Saltonstall in the third period raised Crimson hopes of a victory over Yale for the first time since 1922, Harvard mistakes were too frequent and glaring for their army of supporters to take too much encour-

AERIAL ATTACK PLAYS BIG PART IN TRIUMPH; CAPTAIN BACCHUS STARS

Tuttle Runs 10 Yards for First Score After Forward Pass, Stuber to Clark, Puts Tigers in Position to Tally Jayhawkers Outplayed Throughout Game.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 20.—Victory over Kansas, ancient and honored rival, 15 to 0, climaxed Missouri's greatest home-coming today. It was the crowning touch to a program that included dedication of handsome $300,000 stadium and a $250,000 memorial tower, and sent thousands of Tiger Old Grads home with another glorious tradition added to the old school's rich lore.

There was little doubt of the outcome from the start. The Tigers started with a rush that carried the ball into Kansas territory and kept it there through the first period. In the second, the Jayhawkers were a little stronger, keeping the battle in mid-field through most of that period.

Then after the 15-minute intermission, a fighting Tiger aggregation came out of the dugout and swept the Kansans deep into Jayhawk territory, there to star.

There was a desperate last period rally for the Jayhawkers. Fighting with their backs to the wall, they twice passed from deep down in the Kansas ballwck and twice the Tigers rose to the occasion intercepting passes, once to net a Tiger touchdown, and again to launch a new drive at the Kansas goal as the game ended.

Use Many Substitutes.

It was a complete lineup of substitutes which started this final march, for Gwinn Henry, who had used substitutes freely throughout the afternoon, took advantage of the 15-point margin to give 11 rookies a chance to play.

Once in the first quarter and again early in the second period the Tigers were within striking distance of the Kansas goal, only to feel the Jayhawker defense strengthened and each time Missouri tries at field goal failed.

Then came the sort of a Tiger drive, which gains in the first quarter had indicated, was in store. It was a drive which turned the scoring tide to Missouri.

Pass Leads to a Score.

Taking the ball on Missouri's 32-yard line, after an out-of-bounds kick by Zuber, Tuttle reeled off 15 yards and first down. Then came Bert Clark, whose fame is chiefly that of a pass receiver, but whose slippery dashes off tackle are no less confusing than his broken field dashes. He made it first down on the Kansas 42-yard line.

One across mid-field, the Tiger passed and, it was the famed Stuber-Clark combination that sent the former Principia Academy star to the Kansas 10-yard line. On the next down Tuttle, substitute full back, crashed center for the touchdown. Stuber's kick from placement was good. Time was growing short and Thornhill, Kansas passing ace, was inserted. He made good his first flip to Shannon, but three subsequent tosses were grounded and Zuber punted as the quarter ended.

The Tigers put Kansas in trouble immediately after the third quarter started. Clark reeled off a 19-yard gain through the line. Tuttle advanced to the 35-yard line, but there the Jayhawkers presented a stone wall, and Stuber punted, Hamilton signalling for a fair catch on his own 20-yard line.

Tigers Start New Drive.

Hauser's kick from his own goal line was blocked, but Starr recovered and Zuber, sent back into the lineup, got off the next boot to midfield, only to have Clark and O'Sullivan carry the ball back again inside the Kansas 20-yard line. Stuber tried another placement kick, but failed. The remainder of the quarter was spent in mid-field play, penalties and scrimmage losses cutting short several Tiger advances.

Keeping the Jayhawkers punting from their own goal line or thereabout, the Tigers finally broke through, Bacchus blocking Zuber's punt as he kicked from his own

The ball rolled back through the end zone with two Tigers after it. It looked like a touchdown, when Jimmie Tarr, Missouri end, recovered, but it went for a safety.

Bacchus Scores Touchdown.

Given a free kick from the 20-yard line, Zuber booted to Clark, who reeled off a nice return, and Stuber again put the Kansas in a difficult situation with a punt to Hamilton, who signaled for a fair catch on his own five-yard line. Again Zuber's toe performed, however, and, after an exchange of kicks, the Jayhawks started a desperate passing attack. Stuber intercepted Zuber's toss on the Kansas 25-yard line and raced to within five yards of the goal before he was downed. There was a dash at the line, and then Bacchus went over the goal line to take O'Sullivan's pass. Stuber's try for point was wide, and the Tiger reserves took charge. The kick-off and an intercepted Kansas pass was all that remained.

Although the Tigers outshone the Jayhawkers in every department, it was in the return of kicks that Missouri's power was supreme. While Hamilton was either letting the cold, slippery ball roll, or signalling for a fair catch, Clark, the Tiger safety man, was snaring Zuber's boots and reeling off one 20-yard return after another. Oosterbaan Recovers Fumble and Runs 55 Yards, to Save Game

Benny Friedman Boots Goal, Enabling the Wolverines to Gain Tie for Big Ten Title by One Point—Northwestern Beats Iowa.

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 20.—Michigan went into a tie with Northwestern for the 1926 Western Conference football championship when the Wolverines defeated Minnesota in the Memorial Stadium here today, 7 to 6.

The two famous Bennies of the Yost team brought victory to the men from Ann Arbor, Oosterbaan grabbing a Minnesota fumble and racing 55 yards for a touchdown in the fourth period and Friedman kicking goal.

It was a "hard luck" defeat for Minnesota. Throughout the game Dr. Spears' Gophers had sprinted and plunged through the Yostmen, clearly outplaying them, scoring a touchdown in the second period on straight football, only to lose the advantage late in the game on a fumble in Michigan's territory.

Gophers Show Greater Power.

At the outset the Gophers showed great strength, skirting ends and hitting the line for four first downs in the first period and 10 more in the second period, all by rushing. In the second period Herb Joesting, the Gopher thunderbolt, went through the Michigan line for a short plunge and the Minnesota touchdown. Peplaw's failure to kick goal prevented a final tie.

With Joesting and Peplaw leading the Gopher attack, Spears' men made rapid progress down the field in the first two periods although several times Michigan held when their territory was threatened and forced Minnesota to punt.

Joesting and Peplaw vied for honors in carrying the ball, the former totaling 118 yards in 28 attempts while Peplaw's total was 120 yards in 20 tries.

19 First Downs Against Two.

Michigan had little success in carrying the ball, its two first downs by rushing were made in the middle of the field and apparently held no menace, while the 19 first downs Minnesota gained always appeared to make the Gophers a serious threat.

Minnesota stopped Michigan's forward passing game, Yost's men completing only two passes for a total gain of 21 yards, but losses in rushing accounted for failure to make first downs on these pass gains.

After the first half, Michigan showed greater strength and the Gophers' first downs fell off.

When play started in the fourth period, a Gopher victory seemed assured. Peplaw, Nydahl and Joesting started hitting the Michigan line after an exchange of punts and had made a first down on Michigan's 41-yard line.

The Costly Fumble.

Then came the fatal fumble. It bounced away from the Gopher backfield. Oosterbaan, who had shot in from left end, snatched up the ball as it bounced and started racing down the field. Quickly the Vostman grasped the opportunity with heady blocking and finally only Peplaw was pressing the fleeing Michigan end.

Just five yards short of his own goal Peplaw flung himself at the runner, but he fell short and Oosterbaan went over untouched.

With the score tied at 6 to 6 the other Bennie dropped back, and, while the Gopher home-coming crowd of nearly 60,000 spectators shouted madly for a blocked kick, Capt. Friedman's toe responded where his forward passing arm had failed and he sent the ball soaring over the cross-bar.

Their spirits apparently affected by the unexpected reverse, the Gophers came back again fighting and Coach Spears sent in substitutes in a desperate effort to regain the advantage until virtually an entirely new Minnesota eleven was fighting for the Maroon and Gold.

But Michigan had tasted victory in the face of seemingly certain defeat and fought back the Gopher onslaughte with a new courage, even threatening a second score when Gilbert intercepted a forward pass and raced to the Gopher five-yard line, where he was downed as the game ended.

BENNY FRIEDMAN.
Who kicked the goal that represented the Wolverines' margin of victory over Minnesota.

Marines Will Outweigh the Bears About 14 Pounds a Man

Washington's Opponents for Thanksgiving Day Feature Have Fine Record This Season, Defeating Detroit U. by Better Score Than Did the Army.

The Quantico Marines, who visit here Thanksgiving day, to complete the gridiron schedule of the Washington U. football eleven are no easy assignment for the Bears. The Marine combination of heavy, experienced players is just swinging westward after an Eastern loop which netted them nine victories.

The strength of the Marine team has been demonstrated in a number of decisive defeats of strong university opponents. Detroit University was crushed with much greater severity than the Army eleven was able to administer at West Point two weeks earlier, while Lehigh, beaten 13 to 0, held the Princeton Tigers to the meager margin of a 7 to 6 score.

The Marines, averaging 186 pounds to the Bears 172 pounds, are especially bulky between tackles in the forward line where the five linesmen average more than 200 pounds each. The ends and backs are lighter, combining a speed with the eight of the forward wall which enables them to execute formations usually unattempted by a heavy eleven.

Collegians With Marines.

Among the particular group of stars which the Marines will bring to St. Louis are former lettermen of Eastern and Western universities, high school gridiron products and players turned out via the "sand-lot" method. Among the colleges which have contributed players are the University of Maryland, U. M. I., the University of North Dakota, and the University of South Dakota.

The first eleven, although bolstered by university stars, is composed in the main of football players developed via "sand-lot."

The Marines will bring to St. Louis some gridiron formations wholly new to the Middle West. Box and involved wedge formations which resemble the ancient and much-hailed Dartmouth system, have been used with great success on the triumphal march of the Marines through the East.

The line, although playing unbalanced in style similar to the Bears' own, have also some formations which are innovations in Conference territory. A spread eagle formation for offense drives, is among the tricks which the bulky Marine linemen have in store. While all of the line maneuvers are executed with the speed of a light combination, the actual weight of the forward wall is heavier than the heaviest Valley combination.

Advance Sale Big.

Athletic officials on the Pikeway indicated yesterday that a record crowd would witness the contest. The seat reservations have already given indications of a heavier attendance of St. Louis fans than at any previous contest. Dwight Davis, Washington alumnus, has not yet signified his intention of attending, Dr. Bill Edmunds, director, announced, but it is believed that he will accept the invitation which has been tendered him.

Committees from marine and naval groups in the city have conferred with Dr. Edmunds and plans have been arranged for a parade through the city Wednesday afternoon. The parade will contain four bands, the Marine Band, the Washington U. band and the fife and drum corps of the Quentin Roosevelt Post and the Stockham Post. These bands will also play on the football field before and during the game.

A dinner will be given the visiting marines Wednesday night by the Jackson Johnson Legion Post, following which the Marine Band will give a concert in the Washington Field House. The Stockham Post will also offer a vaudeville program at the concert.

Northwestern Beats Iowa for Clean Slate in Conference

By the Associated Press.

IOWA CITY, Ia., Nov. 20.—Northwestern's brilliant football team wrested a 13 to 6 victory today from Iowa and brought the Wildcats through the conference season unbeaten.

But the game which was accounted an easy finish for the Purple proved to be its hardest of the season, for Iowa, playing inspired football, threatened repeatedly to tie the score and dim Northwestern's glory. The Wildcats started out vigorously and scored in the first period when Lewis crossed the goal after a down field march by the Northwestern backs, Baker adding the extra point by a drop kick.

Iowa bared a passing attack to match the touchdown in the second period. After Kutsch had passed to Skelley for 12 yards to put the ball in midfield he tossed the ball to Rice, who ran 30 yards through a clear field for a marker. The Hawkeyes failed to tie the score, however, when Hogan, who replaced Kutsch, missed the drop-kick for point.

Northwestern added another touchdown a few minutes later when Gustafson skirted right end for 10 yards after a series of plunges and end runs by himself, Lewis and Baker.

Hawkeye Team Threatens.

That was the last of the scoring, but not the last of the excitement for in the second half, Iowa opened up a passing attack which was successful enough to jeopardize the Wildcat goal several times.

With Kutsch on the passing end, the Hawks tried the air game time and again, succeeding only enough to make failure the more bitter when a Northwestern back would intercept the ball.

Iowa played its best football of the season and found some satisfaction in its failure to win a conference game in its feat of holding to seven points a team which even Hawkeye followers expected to win by three touchdowns.

Makes 77-Yard Run.

Baker's generalship, Lewis' line plunging and passing and Gustafson's fleetness were the factors in the Wildcat victory, factors which Iowa could not match with only Kutsch to threaten. The cowboy bore the heaviest brunt of Iowa's attack, though Armil aided him by gains through the line.

The crowd was pulled to its feet on the first play of the game when Gustafson romped 77 yards around right end on the first play after the kick-off but the touchdown did not count because both teams were offside.

Nebraska Wins Over New York In Snow, 15-7

Stephens and Howell Star—Easterners Suffer First Defeat of Year.

By the Associated Press.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 20.—The Eastern invasion of a Western gridiron was unsuccessful here this afternoon when New York University, previously undefeated, went down before the onslaught of the University of Nebraska, Cornhuskers, 15 to 7.

Playing on a rough, frozen field blanketed with a steadily falling snow, the Huskers displayed their best brand of football, while the powerful violets took their first defeat in nine games.

The invaders broke away in the first quarter for the first score. Connors scooped up Howell's fumble and made a spectacular 58-yard run for a touchdown. Thereafter the ball remained in the violet's territory fully two-thirds of the time.

The Huskers made the first score in the second quarter. Presnell caught a punt on the New York 45-yard line and shook off four tackles in a 20-yard run. A 16-yard plunge by Stephens put the ball near enough the visitors' goal line to cause the 15,000 spectators to hold their breath when the quarterback fumbled and then recovered. Howell then plunged 10 yards for a touchdown. Bobby Stephens drop-kicked for the extra point.

Stephens Goes Over.

It fell to Stephens also to add six points to the Husker score in the fourth quarter. Nebraska worked into the invaders territory until the ball was on the New York two-yard line. Stephens went through the line for a touchdown.

The game was featured equally with line plunges and punts. "Blue" Howell, injured early in the season, relieved Presnell today by carrying the ball a large part of the time for Nebraska. Connors and Briante did the lugging for the Violets.

Many of the players wore gloves part of the game. There was little passing done until the Violets opened on a few in the last quarter in a final effort to rally from the losing end. None of these was completed, however. Nebraska tried one pass in the first quarter.

agement. Blocked kicks and intercepted passes kept the play for the most part in Harvard territory, Sturhahn going over for Yale's touchdown in the second period after Richards had stopped a punt by Coady and sent it rolling toward the Crimson goal line.

Capt. Bunnell Is Star.

Harvard was only twice within easy scoring range, taking advantage of its second opportunity to put over a touchdown after Guarnaccis had failed to capitalize the first on an attempted field goal.

Harvard never threatened in the final period, which was featured by Bunnell's long boot for Yale's final three points and the strong kicking of Noble. Dashing back 35 yards after catching a Harvard punt, the Yale quarterback paved the way for his field goal with the longest broken field run of the game.

bined with the neck-and-neck battle which Stuber gave Zuber, the Kansas punting star, it was a handicap that Kansas could not have overcome, even had they been equal to the Tigers in other departments. The Kansas line attack was negligible and likewise they could not gain with passes.

About 22,000 persons saw the game. It began to snow early in the first quarter, and the gentle flurries turned to a steady downfall before the end of the first half. The stands and fields were blanketed before the game ended.

Peters' Goal Kick Fails And Illinois Loses to Ohio State by 7-6 Count

Daugherity Makes Touchdown in Last 90 Seconds of Play—Eby Scores for Ohio—35,000 Spectators Shiver Through Game.

By the Associated Press.

CHAMPAIGN, Ills., Nov. 20.—Ohio State snatched a thrilling 7 to 6 victory from Illinois in the final game of the Western Conference season here today, but the 35,000 shivering spectators were given the thrill of their lives, when in the last 90 seconds of play Illinois came within an ace of tieing the score.

The failure of "Frosty" Peters, the "Montana Mercury," to boot the ball between the uprights after Russell "Pug" Daugherity, the Illinois fullback, had scored a touchdown on a pass in the closing seconds of the game, cost Illinois the loss of a tie.

Eby the Whole Show.

After a scoreless first half, in which the Illini were on the defense for the greater part of the time, Coach Wilce inserted his stylish running sophomore halfback, Byron Eby, into the Ohio lineup, relieving Grim. It was only after Eby's entrance into the game that Ohio started its march for a touchdown.

Eby carried the ball in almost four out of five plays, and his hard smashes off the tackles and his dashes around the ends kept the ball constantly in Illinois territory. Once he got away for 18 yards around left end, tearing to Illinois' 25-yard line before he stopped.

Illinois drew a penalty of 15 yards for unnecessary roughness and this setback put the ball on its 10-yard line. After Karow had made four yards on two dives through center, Eby, running behind a wall of interference, smashed off left tackle for three yards, taking the ball to Illinois' three-yard line. Then, on the next play, he shot around left end for a touchdown.

Clark's Kick Deciding Score.

Clark, the Ohio quarterback, who failed in the pinch against Michigan a week ago to score the extra point that would have tied the Wolverines, drop-kicked a perfect goal for the point that gave Ohio its winning margin.

Previously, in the second period, Uridil made a desperate effort to count for Ohio when he attempted a place-kick from the 44-yard line with Marty Karow holding the ball. The effort, however, was wide and at least 10 feet short of the mark.

With Eby and Karow starring in the attack, Ohio threatened to score a touchdown in the middle of the fourth period, but lost its opportunity after battering the ball to the three-yard line and failing to complete a pass for the fourth down.

In the attack Eby carried the ball in four straight plays, the last time taking it 8 yards to Illinois' 10-yard line. After Karow had picked up seven yards, going to Illinois' three-yard line, Eby failed in a thrust around right end. The play made it fourth down and three yards to go. Ohio was penalized five yards for unnecessarily delaying the game, and Eby, in desperation, attempted to pass to Alber behind the Illinois goal line, but Gallivan knocked it down, the ball going to Illinois.

Peters Shines On Passes.

Illinois, trailing 7 to 0 and with the game drawing closer to its finish every second, opened up with a desperate forward passing attack that was responsible for its touchdown. Peters, who was kept on the sidelines for the first three periods went into the battle at the start of the fourth period and played a stellar role in forward passing.

The first pass Lanum shot to Peters gained 49 yards. The toss was for 30 yards and Peters, catching the ball off his shoestrings, ran 19 yards more, tearing down the sidelines before he was forced out of bounds on Ohio's 25-yard line.

After Peters' thrilling dash, Stuessey passed to Daugherity for 12 yards, but his next heave to Lanum was grounded. Then Gallivan slipped off tackle for three yards, going to Ohio's 10-yard line. Stuessey heaved another pass into Daugherity's outstretched hands and the Illinois fullback shot to the edge of the field and tore across Ohio's goal for a touchdown with less than 90 seconds to play.

Peters made a valiant attempt to add the extra point with a drop-kick to tie the score, but the effort went wide of the goal post.

JONES AND GUNN WIN OVER "PRO" STARS IN GOLF EXHIBITION

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Nov. 20. — Bobby Jones, American and British open champion, and Watts Gunn, member of the 1926 Walker Cup team, defeated Johnny Farrell, noted professional, and Gene Sarazen, former American open champion, two up in a four ball exhibition match here today.

There were a number of birdies, Jones getting two on the deciding holes of the match, the seventeenth and eighteenth.

BRADLEY CAPTURES ITS 23D STRAIGHT GAME

By the Associated Press.

PEORIA, Ill., Nov. 20.—Bradley claimed its second straight Little Nineteen football championship here today by winning its 23rd straight victory at Eureka's expense, 31 to 0. Long passes, one of them thrown by DeCremer to Carlson for 45 yards, featured the Bradley attack. Elness, Bradley half, ran 70 yards on the first Bradley offensive play of the game.

Any favorable or near-favorable break in weather conditions will see the St. Louis Blues, professional football team, battling the West Frankfort, Ill., eleven, champions of the Illinois Hard Roads League, at Handlan's Park this afternoon.

While snow covered the field yesterday, Promoter Bud Yates declared that every effort would be made to go through with the contest today, because after several of the Blues' players had run about the gridiron, they declared it afforded good footing and that the grounds were not so bad as a soft, muddy field.

Additions of Sammy Floun, former Washington U. backfield star, and Henry Hurd, ex-St. Louis U. lineman, are figured to add strength to the Blues. With these exceptions and the shift of Henry Luepke from end to halfback, the local team will line up as in previous contests.

Schools Tired Of Stay-at-Home Athletic Rule

Meeting Tuesday Opening Gun in Campaign to Have Board Rescind Rule.

The first step toward a drastic change in the status of the St. Louis Public High Schools will be taken Tuesday night at a meeting of the representatives of the St. Louis district of the Missouri State High School Athletic Association at Clayton High School. Plans will be discussed for an elimination basket ball tournament to select a team to represent the local district in the State meet.

The public high schools have been hampered for a number of years by a restriction which forbids participation in an athletic event which is not within a radius of 25 miles. It is hoped that the meeting will be an opening wedge in the campaign to persuade the Board of Education, the governing body of the St. Louis Public Schools, to rescind the ruling.

It would be advisable for the St. Louis Public High Schools to know their status before entering such a tournament.

Another wrinkle in the meeting which probably will be ironed out is the situation at Central High School. Central was forced to vacate its old building and was moved to the Yeatman High School. The student body of Yeatman moved into the recently completed Beaumont High School and took along many of the old Central athletes. Unless the Board of Education provides a suitable gymnasium for the basket ball squad, it is probable that Central will not be represented by a basket ball team this winter.

At the meeting Tuesday night Carl Burris, secretary-treasurer of the State Association, will preside.

The members of the St. Louis district are: Beaumont, Cleveland, Central, Roosevelt, Soldan, Christian Brothers' College, Chaminade, John Burroughs, McBride, Country Day, Clayton, Webster, University City, Maplewood, Kirkwood, Wellston, Ferguson, Ritenour, St. Charles and Jennings.

Kansas City, St. Louis, Rolla and five other districts of the State compose the eight divisions. Tournaments will be held in each district during March.

drives, which gave Miss Browne a strenuous workout.

The champion works hard to win her audience and obviously gets a kick out of applause. Nervous and jumpy as a caged tiger, she paces up and down during the delays, her lips twitching so as to reveal her teeth and a jumpy smile appears jerkily at the edges of her mouth. Each time her opponent's racket strikes the ball, Suzanne hops slightly and bounds off in the direction the position of her rival's swing indicates.

The point score of the Lenglen-Browne set:

First set:

Lenglen.. 3 2 4 4 5 5 5 4 4—32 points, 6 games.

Browne ...5 4 2 0 3 3 3 2 1—23 points, 3 games.

Second set:

Lenglen 4 4 4 4 4 5 7—32 points, 6 games.

Browne 0 2 1 0 0 7 5—15 points, 1 game.

Suzanne Double Victor.

In the mixed doubles event Miss Lenglen was particularly spectacular, especially when her partner, Paul Feret, was serving, and she took her position at the net. Here the audience got a view of her lightning work at volleying. With astounding speed she drove back hot drives and reversed to a backhand in the flick of a whiplash as the ball whizzed back at her.

In this match also she was seen in the violent poses which have preceded her through the medium of the camera.

Suzanne and Feret won a deciding set in the mixed doubles, 9—7, but the erratic work of Howard Kinsey nullified some splendid work by Mary Browne. Kinsey appeared to be over-tennised. He was the only performer who worked in three of the four matches and was plainly tired.

The match was limited to one set due to the lateness of the hour and it was 11:30 before the house was emptied. There were but a few early leavers, most sticking to the last point.

Cork Floor Missing.

The composition cork floor, which was to have been used as a court, was frozen in Indianapolis and was rendered unfit for use. As in Chicago, a green canvas covering, marked off with the customary white lines, was stretched over the board floor. A somewhat faster court, about as hard as a clay court, was the result.

Vincent Richards and Howard Kinsey took the floor first and after a few preliminary practice shots started their match. The crowd liked their efforts from the start and each rally brought forth a round of spontaneous handclapping.

While most of the spectators were tennis players or enthusiasts a number of persons kept asking the ushers to identify the participants.

OKLAHOMA RUNS OVER ST. LOUIS U., WINNING, 47 TO 0

FOUR SOONER STARS PLAY LAST GAME

Jordan of Mathews' Team Removed After Injury—Billikens Attempt 29 Passes, Completing Six.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NORMAN, Ok., Nov. 20.—The Sooners ran rough shod over the invading St. Louis University Billikens here this afternoon, winning by a score of 47 to 0. It was the last home stand of the Sooners during the 1926 season and marked the passing of four Oklahoma regulars.

A cold wind which blew throughout the game cut down the crowd and only 2000 spectators watched the game, which shared the limelight with the annual Missouri Valley cross country race.

Taking the lead in the first four minutes of play, when Ray Lecrone smashed over from the one-yard line for a touchdown, the Sooners were never threatened. Oklahoma piled up 21 points in the first quarter, was held scoreless in the second period, scored six in the third quarter and made 20 in the final stanza.

Oklahoma accounted for 316 yards in scrimmage to 50 for St. Louis and effectively blocked the Billiken forward passing attack.

Mathew's men attempted 29 passes and completed six for 91 yards. Oklahoma attempted 10 and completed three for 46 yards.

Jordan Is Injured.

Jordan carried the burden of St. Louis' attack until he was removed because of injuries in the second quarter, and was replaced by Grimes. From then on the only effective work of the Billikens was done by Grimes. He did all the kicking for his team and was on the tossing end of all St. Louis' passes. He virtually played the whole game for St. Louis during the remainder of the contest.

Taylor, substitute halfback played during the entire contest for Oklahoma, and was outstanding in his work.

Coach Bennie Owen ran in his second string during the third quarter and in the last stanza Roy Lecrone, left end, was switched to half back, where he proved to be the best ground gainer on the team.

Roy Lecrone Carries Ball.

Roy Lecrone, on his first play to the backfield, broke through the line for a 28-yard gain, and after two smashes at the Billiken forward wall, broke through three yards for a touchdown.

Oklahoma received the initial kickoff, Roy Lecrone returning the ball 25 yards to the Sooner 40-yard line. Potts circled left end for 15 yards. Taylor added four and Potts broke through center for another five, then Taylor found a hole for 12 more.

The Sooners added a first down on three runs, and Potts circled the end for eight yards, but Oklahoma was penalized 15 yards for holding. Potts ran seven yards and passed to Arbuckle for 10 yards, placing the ball on the Billiken one-yard line, where Roy Lecrone, Sooner fullback, smashed over for the first counter. Arbuckle kicked goal.

After Arbuckle had punted over the goal line, a 15-yard penalty pushed St. Louis back and Jordan's punt went out of bounds on his 11-yard line. Roy Lecrone and Taylor made a first down and Taylor smashed through the remaining yard for a touchdown. Arbuckle place kicked the point.

Jordan took Arbuckle's punt on the St. Louis 20-yard line and his pass to Kennedy was good for 20 yards.

Billiken Attack Halted.

Feld added two yards over center and Jordan passed to Kern for eight yards. The Billiken attack was stopped here when Roy Lecrone intercepted Jordan's pass and returned to Oklahoma's 34-yard line. Arbuckle punted some 60 yards and the ball rolled dead on the Billiken three-yard line. Jordan's punt was high and was good for only nine yards. Taylor and Roy Lecrone carried the ball to the Billiken two-yard line and Potts took the ball over for the third touchdown, Arbuckle kicking the extra point.

At this point Coach Owen sent in most of his reserves and the second quarter was a see-saw affair. Late in the third quarter Feld fumbled on his own 40-yard line and Kiergan of Oklahoma recovered. Potts made a first down and then passed 30 yards to Dyer, who ran over the goal line for a touchdown. Mooney failed to drop-kick the extra point.

On the first play of the final period, Grimes attempted to pass from his own five-yard line, but he was rushed and the ball flew into the air and fell in the arms of Brown, Sooner right end, who was standing behind the goal line. Arbuckle kicked goal for the extra point.

Grimes' Pass Intercepted.

Muldrow intercepted Grimes' pass on the Sooner 48-yard line, and Potts circled left end for 21 yards. Taylor and Roy Lecrone added 21 yards on three plays, and Arbuckle scored the sixth touchdown, but failed to kick goal.

Roy Lecrone shifted from end to halfback, broke loose for a 28-yard run, and was downed on the Billiken four-yard line. After two smashes at the line, he gained two yards for the final touchdown and Arbuckle added the extra point. The Sooners took the ball on the Billiken 37-yard line, and Roy Lecrone on four plays advanced the ball to the Billiken two-yard line as the game ended.

STEVE O'NEILL SIGNS TO CATCH FOR BROWNS

traded and he has said that he wants the Browns to do well. If he objected to playing here he would not refrain from saying as much, and therefore his silence can be interpreted easily as a willingness or even a desire to remain in the city where he has been a star for so many years.

Although the Browns played dismally during the 1926 season, most of the regulars would be welcomed in other cities, as it was a team failure rather than the failure of individuals, and therefore if Howley and Ball care to make any trades they will find willing listeners to their propositions.

In the case of the Cardinals it is virtually certain that the same battle front that won a pennant and a world series will start the 1927 season.

Reinforcements for the outfield probably will be obtained, though Blades, Douthit and Southworth will form the fly-chasing trio, if Blades recovers from his leg injury. Hafey and Holm will be in reserve again. The infield, of course, will need no reinforcements with Bottomley, Hornsby, Thevenow and Bell likely to be stronger in 1927 than they were in winning the National League and world championship.

The only dark cloud on the horizon for the Cardinals is the fact that Hornsby has not been signed as manager for 1927. But the Cardinals need Hornsby and Breadon is a shewd business man and he will sign Hornsby and see that Hornsby is satisfied. The two men will get together and make concessions and everything will be arranged to their mutual satisfaction. It must be so.

Hornsby has won a pennant and a world championship. The Cardinals could not have won without his leadership. The city knows that, and the players all know it and say it. The pennant and world series victories were great personal triumphs for Rogers Hornsby and he must be the Cardinal manager again.

Ames Wins Over Kansas Aggies

Captain Coe Kicks Field Goal to Give Team 3-2 Victory.

By the Associated Press.

MANHATTAN, Kan., Nov. 20.—The Kansas Aggies came within four inches of what was to have been a thrilling last-minute victory over the Ames eleven today, only to have the Cyclone's line stiffen and prevent a score. The game, the last of the season for the Aggies, ended 3-2 in favor of Ames, a decided upset in the dope.

After the teams had battled through three periods without scoring, Coe, Ames captain, started things near the middle of the final quarter by booting a long field goal, giving his team a three point lead. A second later, he dashed 50 yards to the Wildcat goal, only to be called back because one of his team-mates was offside on the play.

Opening a desperate offensive onslaught, the Aggies drove to the goal line, only to be halted, and Ames resorted to the strategy of downing the ball behind the goal line for an Aggie safety carrying two points, rather than risk a fumble and a possible Wildcat touchdown.

The Ames squad departs tonight for Los Angeles, where next Saturday they meet the University of California, south branch.

MICHIGAN FIRST IN BIG TEN RANKING UNDER POINT SYSTEM

By the Associated Press.

URBANA, Ill., Nov. 20.—Michigan is again undisputed football champion of the Big Ten Conference, and will be awarded the Rissman Trophy, according to Professor F. G. Dickinson, of the University of Illinois, who announced today his final rating for the season. Northwestern is listed as second.

Under the Dickinson system, points are awarded according to the strength of the opponents. A victory over a first division team—one having more victories than defeats to its credit—counts 30 points; whereas, victory over a second division team counts but 20. Tie games are counted.

WRAY'S COLUMN

An Unholy Alliance.

THE Big League and the Joint major league meetings will be held in mid-December.

The announcement was made at first that all three meetings would take place in Chicago, which sounds friendly enough. Later it was stated that the National League would be more exclusive and meet in New York, necessitating a hurry-up jump to get to the joint meeting in Chicago.

Which seems to indicate a dislike of the neighborhood of the American League.

Votes With the "Enemy."

THERE is one exception the National League makes—the one in favor of the Chicago White Sox. The National League apparently considers the owner of this rival club as "one of us."

When a subject comes up for joint debate and the two leagues are at variance, the Chicago White Sox sides with the National League. On all questions which are dear to the heart of President Ban Johnson, the White Sox cast the ninth vote for the National League.

Such a situation is certainly abhorrent to fairness and to league security. As we understand it, the hostility was begotten by the personal enmity of Charles Comiskey to Ban Johnson. Whatever its cause, it destroys the rightful balance of the two organizations. The one White Sox vote betrays the other seven American League clubs and the league's president into the hands of the National League.

As matters now stand, in all matters requiring a joint vote there is only ONE league. Right or wrong the National League dictum must go.

The Russia of the Czars was a democracy compared to the existing baseball oligarchy.

Jack Will Try Again.

THE famous punch of Jack Dempsey will again be on display in the ring. Dempsey's letter to Tex Rickard yesterday makes it certain that he will attempt to heat back to title form, starting next March or April.

Whether the famous punch will be the devastating chin-breaker of old, or whether it will damage only the circumambient atmosphere a foot or so from its destination, will determine how far Jack's comeback will go.

Dempsey had strength and condition in his fight with Tunney. He had the physical goods; but the ability to deliver had gone visiting.

Of what good is a mankilling punch if you can't locate the man with it?

That was Dempsey on the night of Sept. 22. His co-ordination was terrible. When the opening was ready, Dempsey wasn't; when Dempsey was ready, the target had moved on.

Dempsey will have to fight himself out of this trance. The only way to become a sharpshooter is to practice shooting. And Dempsey surely needs a lot of practice.

And not against sparring partners.

Can't Be Done.

VINCENT RICHARDS, who took part in last night's professional tennis show at the Coliseum, believes that the "pro" has come to stay. He talks of a professional tennis league and of an "open" tournament as probalities for the near future.

Vincent is almost as great an optimist as he is a tennis player. But as a long distance forecaster he appears to be a blowout.

The "open" tournament is an impossibility, under existing tennis rules, which, unlike golf, prohibit the mingling of amateur and professional players in tournaments.

As for the league, what possible interest could a professional league develop comparable to our national championships and Davis Cup contests?

In this case, except in case of Mlle. Lenglen, the amateurs are superior players to the professionals. The league of pros would have about as good a chance as a bush league opposition against the majors.

Time to Change.

THE Amateur Athletic Union, the intercollegiate association and other organizations carry on their books a rule that seems almost as impossible as the no-substitute rule prevailing in European soccer.

The athletic rule is one which professionalizes in all sports an athlete who may have become professionalized in one. For example, Jim Thorpe, probably the greatest athlete of his day, if not of all time, was deprived of his Olympic track and field championship because he played professional baseball during the vacation months.

What possible connection can baseball have with track?

Nevertheless, Thorpe was a dyed-in-the-wool "pro" in everything, according to the A. A. U., because he had played a few weeks with some Class D baseball organization.

Golf Is Different.

GOLF is an exception. There are today several athletes, professionalized in baseball, who are permitted to enter amateur golf competitions. Pro and amateur golfers may play together without one contaminating the other.

Miss Mary Browne, for example, will doubtless be recognized as an amateur at golf, notwithstanding she professionalized at tennis.

Time to standardize on a safe and sane definition of professionalism, it appears.

Sounding Off.

IN the gymnasium of a Southern Illinois college is a sign which reads: "No swearing allowed, on or off the field."

The football team obeys faithfully.

It strictly observes the rule "no swearing aloud."

What Makes 'Em Wild.

THE wild turkey in the Ozarks must be getting wilder and wilder. At last accounts he was threatening to move into Arkansas unless his origin and dignity were respected.

The old fellow has for several seasons been gobbling his disdain at the upstarts of all colors and feathers that claim to belong to old aristocratic family of Meleagris Americana.

"Nothing but barnyard runaways," is the way the surviving bronze beauty refers to the present crop of "wild" ones.

But what made him really wild was when he learned of a hunter who annually leaves the train at Lebanon, Mo., and heads into the hills armed with an automatic shotgun and a box of paints, for his annual wild turkey hunt.

Each year he returns home with a bunch of "wild" birds properly marked and feathered, with blue head and all.

This fellow ALWAYS brings home the bacon and the seemingly wild turkeys.

But the facts are that when he wants to make his grand return to the city, he shoots down a half dozen barnyard boys and the paint pot and brush make them look "wild"—head and all.

And that's why the last surviving member of the Meleagris family is thinking of going over into Arkansas along with the last of the deer and black bear.

Stanford Eleven Wins Coast Title

Warner's Team Defeats California, 41 to 6—Outfit Is Still Unbeaten.

By the Associated Press.

BERKELEY, Cal., Nov. 20.—Stanford University downed the University of California eleven here today, 41 to 6, clinching the Pacific Coast Conference championship and remaining undefeated for the season.

Crushing the Golden Bears under a stunning offensive, Stanford rolled over a pair of touchdowns in the opening period, followed it with two more in the next quarter and ended a brilliant display of football in the final 15 minutes with as many more crossings over the line of its traditional rival.

California's single tally came in the second period after blocking a Cardinal punt.

Thrilling runs by Hyland and the steady line plunging of Bogue, another halfback, spelled disaster for a fighting California eleven which ended its conference season without a victory and five defeats.

HARVARD-PRINCETON TO HOLD PEACE PARLEY IN THE NEAR FUTURE

By the Associated Press.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 20.—Harvard and Princeton representatives will have a peace parley here in the near future in an attempt to settle their athletic difficulties and re-establish the "Big Three" if possible.

This was decided upon at a preliminary conference held here today with Leo Daly, president of the Harvard Student Council, and Joseph Prendergast, who holds a like position in the Princeton undergraduate body, attending.

The two college leaders accepted the invitation of the Yale Student Council to hold the peace conference in the offices of that organization, but the date of the meeting was not decided.

GEITZ BASKET FIVE DEFEATS HOLY CROSS

The Geitz basketball team won its third practice game by defeating the Holy Cross five, 27—20, last night at Holy Cross hall. Wilms of the Geitzes, with five field goals and one free throw, and Scott of Holy Cross, with six field goals and a free throw, were the high scorers.

The winners will play in the Tuesday night division of the Municipal Basketball Association.

Chicago Loses All Big 10 Games, First Time in 33 Years

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.

CHICAGO rose to its greatest offense game of the year this afternoon, but Wisconsin's first period lead pulled the Badgers through for a victory, 14 to 7. Chicago's gallant failure was the last effort of the season of nothing but Western Conference defeats at football, breaking a 33-year-old tradition of Stagg's elevens.

NEGRO BASKETBALL QUINTETS ORGANIZE AT PINE STREET "Y"

Last night nearly 75 young Negro men reported to Wilbur Woodson, physical director at the Pine Street "Y," for basketball practice in the gymnasium.

Woodson hopes to form a real league, to be known as the Industrial League or Young Men's League and has worked out a comprehensive schedule for the season of 1926 and '27.

The league will be composed of the following teams: Argus, Knights of the Red Triangle, Arrow Boys, Pullman, Scullin, Peerless, Athenians and the Ellards.

League games to begin Dec. 11. All match games will be played in the gymnasium of the Pine Street "Y."

INDIVIDUAL LEAGUE WILL START TODAY

The Tower Grove Individual Bowling League will roll the first games of its schedule this morning at 10 o'clock on the alleys of the Tower Grove Recreation. The individuals competing are all members of the Juniata League and include President Le Gear, Kness, Sunkel, Joe Hausknecht, Gene Winterose, Clarence Klein, Walter Kipf, Ted Sieberman and L. K. Arthur.

Cleveland Plays Soldan in Title Game, Thursday

Post-Season Battles Will Take Care of Yesterday's Postponements.

The postponement of the high school football double-header scheduled yesterday, which matched Central with Roosevelt and Beaumont with Soldan, served the purpose of adding flavor to the Thanksgiving day menu. A Cleveland victory over Soldan, Thursday, will definitely award the Yale Bowl to Fenenga's eleven for the third time since 1920.

Had Central defeated or even tied Roosevelt yesterday, Cleveland would have thereby clinched the championship and little significance would have been attached to the Turkey Day battle with Soldan.

Cleveland, owning three victories and no defeats, is now at least assured of a tie with Roosevelt; and to share honors the Rough Riders must defeat Central providing Soldan can upset the dope by winning from Cleveland.

Will Play Post-Season Games.

Waldo H. Drake, secretary of the league athletic Board, announced that yesterday's scheduled double-header would be played as single games on Wednesday, Dec 1, Central and Roosevelt meeting on Roosevelt Field and Beaumont tackling Soldan on the Beaumont gridiron. Starting time of both games will be 3 p. m.

Comparative scores indicate a Cleveland victory over Soldan, Thanksgiving day. Roosevelt defeated Cook's team 26 to 0 in the opening of the league season, and as Cleveland beat the Rough Riders 12 to 7 two weeks ago, Fenenga's team is figured some 32 points better than Soldan.

Two veterans will be missing from Cleveland's lineup, Joe Hahn, 190-pound tackle, and Captain George Coover, backfield man. Adequate reserve strength, however, should offset this disadvantage.

Central Favored to Win.

Central is expected to defeat Coach Lewis' Beaumont eleven in the second game of the Thanksgiving double-header, and from present indications Beaumont is destined to another season in the basement. The none too bright hopes at Beaumont were further dimmed when Capt. Neil developed blood poison from a foot injury, which spell the end of the North Side leader's gridiron activities this season. Rost will replace Neil at left end. Right tackle will be filled by either Anastasoff or Hartingalae halfback.

Rossen, halfback, is not likely to start for Central as his injuries have been healing slower than expected. Bohgringer is working at Rossen's position, but Gordron, recruited from the scrubs, is likely to share some of the burden. Plasfted suffered a twisted knee in the Cleveland game last week and so either Manes or Shott will start at right tackle.

New York Rangers Win.

By the Associated Press.

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 20.—Playing in championship fashion the New York Rangers inaugurated the National Hockey League season for local fans tonight by a decisive 5 to 1 victory over the Toronto St. Patricks.

WOOD LORE DEFEATS CANDY QUEEN A NECK IN BREEDERS' FUTURITY

STAKE WORTH OVER $17,000 TO THE VICTOR

Winner Outgames Filly in a Long Drive Through the Stretch — Track Frozen, but Time Is Fast.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 20. — Wood Lore, sturdy son of Camp Fire and Pixy, clinched a place with the leading 2-year-olds of the year when, under a fine ride by James Burke, he outgamed Candy Queen, star of the H. T. Archibald stable, in a long, spectacular stretch drive to win the seventh running of the Breeders' Futurity here, this afternoon. The Audley Farm Stable's Creek Indian was third and G. Collins' Thistle Gold fourth in the field of thirteen starters.

While Wood Lore and Candy Queen furnished as thrilling a contest as has been witnessed here this fall, the race was decidedly marred by the poor start Billy Hamilton sponsored; but it was an erratic field and one that milled around for ten minutes before Hamilton released the barrier. After Glow, Mary Jane, Mirafel and Coohoogan, all formidable ones on previous racing, were unable to get away with the others leaving nine to fight for the rich prize.

Torch Boy Sets Early Pace.

In the early stages Torch Boy was the leader but Burke urged Wood Lore to improve his position as he took the rapid running bay off the backstretch ground and he forged to the front when coming to the concluding turn with Candy Queen not far away as Torch Boy was showing signs of distress.

When the final bend was completed the winner and Candy Queen were a head apart and Burke and Pete Walls went hard to work on both. Wood Lore doggedly held to his advantage, although Candy Queen was within an inch or two of the lead on several occasions in the long drive. At the finish Wood Lore was a neck in front, with Cahdy Queen beating Creek Indian four lengths for second.

Winner Gained $17,899.

The race, which had its decision over the futurity course (170 feet short of six furlongs) carried a net winning value of $17,899, the largest in the history of the race. Wood Lore covered the ground in 1:11 and carried an impost of 122 pounds.

Schaefer Takes Lead in Classic

Bowls 1699 for 8 Games in Individual Tourney at Washington.

Ed Schaefer, by shooting eight consistent games with 192 low and 223 high for the total of 1699, took the lead in the Washington Classic at the Washington Alleys last night. Gus Kamman, of the Morgans, took second place with 1639, while Eddie Grubb, star of the Wooster Lamberts, was third with 1607. Grubb also had the honor of high single game for the first squad with 245.

Three squads of 16 men each will bowl today, the first squad shooting at 5, second at 7:15, and the last squad at 9:30 p. m. There are still openings for two men on the 5 squad and one on the 9:30 squad. Any bowler desiring to bowl on any of these two squads can arrange to do so by calling Central 5818.

Today's schedule and last night's scores follow:

Canadian Eleven Defeats Brooklyn

Ulster Club Wins at Soccer, 3-1, and Takes Strauss Cup.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—After a game uphill fight the Ulster United Football Club, champions of Canada, defeated the Brooklyn Wanderers at Ebbetts Field, Brooklyn, this afternoon, 3 goals to 1 and carried off the handsome cup donated by Nathan Strauss. The clubs met in October for the trophy, but the game resulted in a deadlock. About 3500 persons attended.

After two minutes Brooklyn netted the opening tally when Schonfeld jostled the Ulster goal custodian into the net after the latter had saved a hard shot from Haar. During the remainder of this period both clubs had many opportunities but failed to score.

After resuming, both clubs had their inning on the attack until 15 minutes had elapsed, when Galloway, former Boston player, scored for the Canadians after receiving a pass from Graham. The latter registered the second goal for the winners four minutes later after Galloway had aided him in working the sphere through the Brooklyn defense. Moir, after trapping a pass from Kelly, wended his way through the Wanderer defense and finished a fine piece of dribbling with a brilliant shot for the final goal.

The lineups:

BROOKLYN (1).	ULSTER (3).
S. Smith ..... Goal	R. Smith
Robertson ..... R. F. B.	Williams
Wilson ..... L. F. B.	Dinnie
McManus ..... R. H. B.	Grant
O'Brien ..... C. H. B.	Crelow
Morris ..... L. H. B.	Kelly
Haar ..... O. R.	Faulkner
Lyall ..... I. R.	McNeil
Schoenfeld ..... C. F.	Graham
Eisenhofel ..... I. L.	Galloway
Burness ..... O. L.	Moir

T. Cunningham, referee. Score at half time — Brooklyn 1, Ulster 0. Goals—Schoenfeld, Galloway, Graham and Moir.

ST. LOUISANS TO BID FOR VALLEY REGATTA

Whether St. Louis is to be awarded the Mississippi Valley Power Boat Association Regatta for 1927 will be decided today at a conference between representatives of the St. Louis Yacht Club and officials of the Valley Association.

President Henry Falk and Secretary A. J. Griffith of the Valley organization yesterday held an informal conference with Edwin C. Koenig and other members of St. Louis Yacht Club.

It was agreed to meet again today to further consider the proposition. A guarantee of $5000 must be posted by the local club.

Last year the event was held on the Ohio River near Louisville.

MILWAUKEE ELEVEN BEATS COUNTRY DAY BY 43 TO 0 SCORE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 20.—Using weight and brains to the best advantage, Milwaukee Country Day School gained a crushing victory over the lighter St. Louis Country Day eleven, 43 to 0.

By virtue of the victory, Milwaukee may well lay claim to the mythical Midwest prep school championship, having recorded victories over the leading schools in the region, including Stalbans of Chicago and Wayland Academy of Beaver Dam.

The lineup and summary:

MILWAUKEE.	ST. LOUIS.
Meyer ..... L. E.	Bond

Duquesne De De Wins Dog Derby

High Power Is Second With The Realization Third in Stake.

VINITA, Ok., Nov. 20.—Duquesne De De, a pointer owned by J. H. Elder of Pittsburg, Pa., handled by Ed Farrier, of Union Springs, Ala., won the Derby of the Southwestern bird dog trials decided here today. Second place went to the setter, High Power, owned by Harry J. Brooks, of Fort Scott, Kan., and third was awarded to the setter, The Realization, owned by G. Rose Thompson, of Monroe, Mich.

The stake had 36 starters. The work of the winners stood out.

Duquesne De De ran a magnificent race, and she checked in not only with a first class performance in speed and range, but her work on game was perfect. Her performance easily ranks with the three great Derby races that have been run over these grounds in recent years. Her heat was so brilliant in the first series that the judges did not call for her again, but awarded her the stake on the strength of it.

The second place winner also did well on game and The Realization third, came in at the last moment and won her place by a good find of a bevy of birds.

Undergrowth	96	3	4	7	6h	7	7	7	L. Craver	13.95

*Corrected weight.

My Valet moved up slowly in the early stages and, after coming to outside at stretch, finished fast and came away last furlong. Holly Boy, weakly ridden, raced behind leaders first half mile, was blocked in stretch and had to be taken in, worst going for fast finish through stretch. Meddling Seth forced early pace with loss of ground, began tiring in furlong out. George Kuffan quit.

$2 mutuels paid: My Valet straight $15.60, place $6.60; show $4.20; Holly Boy, place $4, show $3.20; Meddling Seth, show $4.20.

SECOND RACE—Purse $800, allowances, 2-year-old maidens, futurity course—Start good for all but Foxana, won driving; place same. Went to post at 1:57 p. m. At post 2 minutes. Winner, ch. f., 2, by Whisk Broom-Slum Glass. Owner, H. P. Whitney. Trainer, F. Hopkins. Time, :23 2-5, :48 4-5, 1:02, 1:11 3-5. Value to winner $650, second $119.50, third $63.

HORSE.	WT.	PP.	ST.	¼	½	⅝	Str.	Fin.	Jockey.	Equivalent Odds to $1

Cecile	112	2	3	5h	6	6	6	6	L. Dubois	9.80

Pyrex rushed into short lead, was taken over best going, slowly shook off Candy Fox through stretch and was racing easily at end. Candy Fox moved to lead steadily on turns, saved ground last bend, began to tire when reaching stretch. Taloha had some early speed, but could not keep up. Princess Elma had no mishaps. Foxana refused to leave with the field and went well when raced after the field.

$2 mutuels paid: Pyrex, straight $3, place $2.40, show $2.20; Candy Fox, place $3.20, show $2.80; Taloha, show $2.80.

THIRD RACE—Purse $800, claiming, 3-year-olds and upward, one and one-eighth miles—Start good, won handily, place driving. Went to post at 2:26 p. m.; at post one minute. Winner, b. g. 4, by Novelol-Momoweta by Planudes. Owner, W. T. Looney. Trainer, J. M. Goode. Time, :24 2-5, :47 4-5, 1:13 2-5, 1:41 3-5. Value to winner, $650; second, $100; third, $50.

Grand King	105	1	2	1h	2d	2½	6	6	T. McElroy	4.40

Longchamps, given well-judged ride, raced far back in first six furlongs, began moving up fast leaving back stretch and, after losing much ground at last turn, finished with a rush and was ridden out to the finish. Norseman raced far off leaders first seven furlongs, came with a rush in the stretch and was racing best of all at the end. Lee Adrin saved ground in the stretch after closing a gap but faltered last 50 yards. Little Blaze had no more than quit. Grand King was raced into exhaustion trying to shake off Dingo first part.

$2 mutuels paid: Longchamps, straight $6.80, place $4.00, show $2.60. Norseman, place $12.20, show $5.80.

FOURTH RACE—Purse $800, allowances, 2-year-old maidens, futurity course—Start good, won easily, place driving. Went to post at 2:53 p. m.; at post one minute. Winner, b. f., 2, by Polymelian-Sweetly. Myrtle Rose	112	4	6	5h	6	7	7	6	A. McGuire	48.95

Little Cyn, easily best, but away slowly, was hard hustled to get to leaders in first quarter, drew away while doing turns and was in hand the last sixteenth. Winifred began fast, raced wide, but held on well entire trip. Beggar Boy displayed fine speed from start, but began tiring when entering stretch and was raced wide. Xcellenza could not get to leaders. Others were outrun.

$2 mutuels paid: Little Cyn, straight $3.40, place $2.60, show $2.20; Winifred, place $3.80, show $3.20.

Woodlore, taken to lead slowly in first three furlongs, was raced wide last turn and, under strong urging, stepped away at end of stretch. Candy Queen the entire final quarter of a mile. Candy Queen went into contention with saving of ground with unusual determination, took second place at end. Sheffield, a belated rush the last quarter of a mile. Thistle Gold raced wide but evenly, had good speed for three furlongs, but quit badly at end. Comrade began to tire after Glow. Mirafel, Coohoogan and Mary Jane were in no position to break clean when start was made, Mary Jane breaking to the inside and interfering with After Glow.

Trifecta paid: Woodlore, straight $7.60, place $4, show $3.80; Candy Queen, place $3.80, show $4.80; Creek Indian, $7.60.

NOTRE DAME DEFEATS DRAKE, 21-0, FOR EIGHTH VICTORY

WALLACE AND O'BOYLE SCORE ON LONG RUNS

Forward Passing Attack Features Play of Rockne's Men—Bulldogs Held on One-Yard Line.

By the Associated Press.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 20.—Notre Dame was a step nearer its goal of another national football championship when it disposed of Drake today, 21 to 0. Knute Rockne's roving gridiron warriors now have high hopes of annexing the title of football champions of the United States as did the 1924 Rockne team.

Carnegie Tech on Nov. 27 and University of Southern California on Dec. 4 are the barriers remaining in the path to a championship. Drake's scalp was added to those at Beloit, Minn., Penn State, Northwestern, Georgia Tech, Indiana and the Army.

Drake did not let the Notre Dame homecoming crowd off without a thrill. Early in the second period the Iowa lads worked the ball to within a yard or so of the Notre Dame goal line, but their threat was finally stopped when the Notre Dame defense stiffened.

Edwards Scores First.

Notre Dame's touchdown came in the second period when Edwards and Rearden executed a forward pass that netted 17 yards. O'Boyle smashed through for 15 yards and Rearden added nine yards by an end play, putting the ball on Drake's one-yard line. Edwards pushed through for the touchdown. O'Boyle place kicked for the extra point.

The game was a nip and tuck affair until the final period when Drake apparently weakened somewhat. Near the end of the contest Drake launched an aerial attack, but one of the passes fell into the hands of Wallace, Notre Dame right end, he traveled unmolested nearly 30 yards to the Drake goal. O'Boyle again kicked for the point. O'Boyle's 30-yard run gave the final score. He kicked goal.

Wesleyan Wins From Principia

Only Score of Local Eleven Was Made Against Visitors' Second Eleven.

By DAVISON OBEAR.

The Central Wesleyan College football team defeated the Principia Academy eleven, 14 to 2, in their annual game at Taylor Field, yesterday afternoon, Wesleyan scored two touchdowns in the first quarter while the Academy gained its score in the final period.

In the first few minutes of the opening quarter Schuette, the big left halfback, put his team in scoring position by making a 40-yard end run. On the third down Schuette carried the ball eight yards over the Principia goal line for the first touchdown. Helmers kicked the goal for the extra point.

A 65-yard run by Helmers, Wesleyan right halfback was stopped by Green, the Academy end, on the Principia four-yard line. Brandhorst, fullback, scored Central Wesleyan's second touchdown on another end run. Helmers' kick added another point. Principia then received the kick-off and advanced to the visitors' 40-yard line. A place kick by Morey, Principia halfback, was short of the goal posts. The visitors staged another offensive attack and carried the ball to the Academy one-yard line but the Principia defense withstood four attempts to score.

The second Central Wesleyan team took the field at the start of the third quarter. Principia gained more confidence in this period and kept the visitors away from scoring position.

In the final quarter Principia outplayed Central Wesleyan and early in the period carried the ball to the 5-yard line. Wesleyan held and on the first play Brandhorst tried to carry the ball from behind the goal, posts but was downed by Hattery, Academy guard, for a safety.

Western Gains Fifth Victory

Alton Eleven Defeats St. Louis U. High, 22-0, in Prep League.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ALTON, Ill., Nov. 20.—A fine running and passing attack gave Western Military Academy a 22-to-0 victory over St. Louis University High here this afternoon in the final game of the St. Louis Preparatory League.

Borah's end runs and line smashes featured the Western victory. The game was played on a field blanketed with snow and ice.

By defeating the St. Louis eleven the Cadets kept their Conference slate clean, winning five games against no defeats.

Score by quarters:

Standing Position Important In Serving, Helen Wills Says

By Helen Wills.

(Copyright, 1926.)
(All rights reserved. Reproduction prohibited.)

HELEN WILLS

THERE are serves and serves, hundreds of them, and it is a brave person, indeed, who claims that he knows them all. Their mechanics are difficult for anyone, except their owners, to explain. And so I'm going to be safe, and choose my own serve to describe, because I know it best. It is not a particularly spectacular one; neither is it very thrilling to watch. But it has been a true and faithful friend to me.

One of the reasons I like it is that it requires little effort, which makes it valuable in a long match. It is of a type that is capable of several different speeds, and can be varied in this way.

With the beginner, I think it is best to choose one serve which is suited to his style or play and then learn it well. He has, then a stroke upon which he can depend. Since the serve holds such an important place in the game, this is to be desired.

There are not many players who have several ways of serving. Among the best players, William Tilden is perhaps the outstanding one. He is versatile and has a wide range of service, but most players rely mainly on a change of pace and speed, and on good placing of the ball.

Three Big Factors.

STANDING position, body balance and swing of the racquet are important considerations for the beginner.

In taking the serving position, for singles, most plyaers agree that it is best to stand at about the center of the baseline. The advantages of this are obvious. The central position on the court is the commanding one for the serve.

The left foot is advanced and is almost parallel with the baseline; the right foot is a step behind it. The left shoulder is towards the net. It is well to avoid standing with the body facing the net. Rather, imagine that you are standing upon an imaginary line that cuts the net at right angles. In this way, the swing is unhampered and can be free and easy, and capable of more speed.

Body balance and swing of the racquet are so closely interwoven that they must be described together.

As you take the standing position, the weight of the body is on the left foot, the one nearest the line. The racquet is held out with its head pointing towards the net. Then the swing is begun, which is more or less circular in its motion. The racquet is brought back and as it describes the lower part of the swing, the weight of the body is in the act of shifting to the right foot. At the very back part of the swing, the weight is entirely on the right foot. Then, as the racquet comes forward to meet the ball, the weight shifts from the right foot to the left, and at the finish of the stroke, the weight is entirely on the left foot.

Rotation of Weight.

THE rotation, here, of the weight, is a very interesting thing, and can be learned without a ball, wherever there is room to swing a racquet.

The left leg acts as a pivot upon which the whole body turns. In this way, the shoulders get into the serve, and put punch into the stroke.

The ball is not hit with the flat face of the racquet, but with a sideways surface in order to get the spin needed to bring the ball down into the court. The grip on the racquet is shifted slightly. The index finger is separated a little from the others.

The left leg is the pivot, thus making it easier for the right to come into the court for a quick start. The weight of the body combines with the swing and motion so that the most speed from the least effort is obtained.

THE HUNTING - - CALL - -

By ALEC MERMOD

THE quail season opened Nov. 10 and nearly everyone who owned a bird dog turned out with great expectations. The first two days were good and ordinarily good bags would have been made, but a great many hunters were sadly disappointed, and returned from what has always been good territory with the report that birds were scarce.

There are several reasons why the shooters had such poor luck.

During the dry weather last summer, when so many small streams dried up, the birds moved to spots where water and food were more plentiful, and no doubt many remained on these new grounds and may be found later by persistent hunters.

Good advice might be to hunt near some stream that had a fair flow of water all summer, hunting particularly the higher ground, for the recent hard rains no doubt have caused the quail to leave the bottoms.

Another reason for not finding birds is that the cover is very heavy and there is considerable pollen which affects dogs' noses. Again, many dogs are out of training and need several days' work before getting into perfect condition. It is likely that more birds will be found in the timber than in former years, for in most sections farmers have put in their winter wheat, and have left very few fields unplowed, so there is a scarcity of stubble and ragweed of this year's growth. There is a seed growing in timber known to most of us as "beggar lice," which is very attractive to quail and when we have a heavy snowfall forms a large per cent of the quail's food.

The Co-Operative Quail Investigation Committee has been making a study of quail food conditions in Southern Georgia.

The annual report contains an illustration of the contents of crop of a quail killed in January, which shows 11 while acorns, the smallest being about the size of a pea and the largest about as big as a 32-caliber bullet; four insects, some bits of green leaves and four varieties of weed seeds. The investigation being carried on by this committee is going to be of considerable help to those who wish to protect and propagate these game birds.

Duck shooting has not improved to any great extent, though some good bags have been made during the past week, but it is not very satisfactory as a whole.

The Springer Spaniel.

THE English Springer has only recently interested the American public, but bids fair to become very popular not only with the sportsmen but with others who just want a dog to have around.

This dog is intelligent and is easily trained, quite active and develops considerable speed, which makes him attractive as a field retriever.

Acceptable colors which will qualify on the bench vary in this breed more than in any other, and may be any of the following: black and tan, liver and tan, lemon and white, liver and white, black, white and tan.

A well-developed Springer will weigh about 40 pounds.

As a snipe retriever the Springer has few equals, for he is fast and sure. He is also a very good duck retriever though not as well fitted for deep water work as is one of the regular retrievers, i.e., Labrador or Chesapeake Bay, for the under coat is not as heavy as that on the others just mentioned.

Many of our Eastern shooters are using Springers for retrieving upland birds, and are not training their pointers or setters to retrieve.

The Springer makes an ideal family dog as he is obedient and friendly.

Quantico Marines Defeat Soldiers

Win by Score of 27 to 7—Mrs. Coolidge Presents Them With Cup.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Playing without the aid of their backfield stars in the commissioned rank, the Quantico Marines today again won the Army-Navy enlisted men's championship by overwhelming the Fort Benning, Ga., infantry team, 27 to 7.

This victory enabled the soldiers of the sea to retain the President's cup, first competed for last year, and kept unbroken the long string of victories over the best the army has been able to place against them.

A colorful crowd, including high officials of both services, filled the Catholic University stadium. Mrs. Coolidge presented the silver cup to Capt. "Zeek" Bailey of the victors, a Marine officer, who went into the game at center during the closing minutes of play.

NEW HAMPSHIRE ADDED TO BROWN'S VICTIMS

By the Associated Press.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 20.—Brown defeated New Hampshire State here today, 40 to 12. Coach D. O. McLaughlry opened the game with the 11 "iron men," keeping them in until the second period, when the Brown backfield, headed by Dave Mishel, scored twice. New Hampshire played a stubborn game until the second half, when the line weakened.

Keeps Hair Combed, Glossy Well-Groomed all Day

"Hair-Groom" is a dignified combing cream which costs only few cents a jar at any drug store. Millions use it because it gives that natural gloss and well-groomed effect to the hair—that final touch to good dress, both in business and on social occasions. Even stubborn, unruly or shampooed hair stays combed all day in any style you like. "Hair-Groom" is greaseless; also helps grow thick, heavy, lustrous hair.

Millers Oppose White Banners In Soccer Game

Clash Will Feature St. Louis League Double Bill—Raticans Pay Wellstons.

For the first time this season, St. Louis elevens will be opposed to each other in the soccer league games at Sportsman's Park this afternoon. Heretofore one of the tilts has been an intercity affair, but with the Westfern Association disbanded the St. Louis League will resume play.

In the opener, the Wellstons oppose the Raticans, while the second and feature attraction will bring together the Ben Millers and White Banners, rivals for championship honors here for the past few seasons.

The chances are that several new faces will be seen in the lineups of the various elevens. Willie Foley of the Millers has benched Ebby Dunn and as a result will show a rearranged forward line. Tate Brady of the Wellstons and Harry Ratican of the Raticans also will have new men.

John Cradock will referee the first game and Paul Murphy the second. Play at 2 o'clock.

Featherweights and Flyweights Meet Tuesday

Doetzel-Lang and Merz-Stein Bouts to Feature South Broadway Card.

Flyweight and featherweight punchers of the St. Louis amateur district will furnish the inter-club events billed as headliners of the bi-monthly boxing tournament to be held next Tuesday night at the South Broadway A. C. The flyweight feature brings together Clifford Doetzel and Ray Lang in a return match, while Frankie Merz meets Joe Stein in the feather-weight special.

In one of the most interesting engagements of the club's last tournament Doetzel, a member of the South Side team, was awarded a point verdict over Lang. The latter is a member of Barney McCarthy's Tower A. C. boxing stable. Both boxers entered the fistic game this season. Prior to his last setto with Lang, Doetzel had won two decisions over Don Hyatt. Lang has lost two verdicts to Mickey Mazer besides his defeat at the hands of Doetzel. He has, however, given a fine account of himself in every bout.

Frankie Merz will try for his ninth consecutive triumph in his match with Stein. The Business Men's A. C. featherweight won every bout in which he has participated since he took up the manly art a year ago. He will face a tough and experienced foeman in Stein who was a consistent winner in local tourney competition last season.

Opponent for Ghnouly Sought.

Officials of the South Broadway club are still awaiting a reply from Coach Wilsman of Sherman Park Community Center, who has been invited to send either Eddie O'Neill or Tony Pirrone of the Easton avenue squad, against Joe Ghnouly of the South Side club, in a flyweight special. O'Neill holds the district title for his division while Pirrone annexed runner-up honors in the last championship meet.

An opponent is also sought for Frank Power, Western A. A. U. middleweight champion, who has offered to take on any challenger in a special match.

The open events to be held as preliminaries of Tuesday night's tourney have attracted a total of 30 entries. The prelim list includes several ringsters who have attained class A rating in the Western district.

Following is a complete list of entries filed to date:

MY LIFE AND RING CAREER —By Gene Tunney

First Greb Bout Taught Gene How to Transform Tornado Into a Breeze

Science of the Crafty and Heady Boxer Is Sure to Level the Brute Force of the Slugger, Heavyweight Champion Writes.

By Gene Tunney,
World's Heavyweight Champion.

CHAPTER XIX.

WHEN I faced Harry Greb for the second time, I felt that it wasn't in the cards for me to be cut up the way I was in our first battle. I thought also that I had inspired respect in Greb's heart.

It was in the thirteenth round of our first fight that I learned how to lick Greb. I knew that I would defeat him in the second meeting because he would lead with a right hand.

I had made a mistake of trying to counter with a right to the body and by stepping under his punch. I learned that I should wait, feint and then step outside instead of inside his punch. I would have made a success of this in the first fight had my legs not been too weary, and my feet too securely glued to the floor to permit of the quick dance step, and the left hand to the body.

Greb, too, had hit me with everything he possessed in that first fight and I had taken them without falling to the floor. So, when we met Feb. 23, 1923, at the Garden, I was fit for the 15 rounds of milling and cocksure of victory. It was a cleancut triumph and I beat Greb at his own game.

A steady, gruelling left-hand attack on Greb's body, sidestepping as I countered his right-hand leads, brought me back my light-heavyweight championship just as I had planned. From a howling tornado, Greb dwindled to a mild breeze. The wings of the Pittsburg windmill were drooping. Getting slammed in the stomach never was known to increase a man's speed. As early as the sixth round, I had Greb wobbly. I had pounded him from collar button to belt line.

But Greb, as I have said before, was a great fighter. He never knew the meaning of the word "quit." He came back for the seventh with flaming spirit. But it proved only a flash. For the rest of the battle he resorted to his usual tactics and in the twelfth round, Referee Patsy Haley, himself a fire eater, warned Greb against his inclination for roughhouse activities. Holding and hitting were Harry's aces in the last four rounds.

Greb Started Mad.

I UNDERSTAND that there was loud weeping, wailing and gnashing of teeth among "sure-thing" gamblers. They had shifted at the last moment to Greb.

One of the funny spots of the fight was the scene just preceding it. My manager, Billy Gibson, and all the retinue of Greb were explaining to Referee Haley what constituted a foul. Haley, a veteran fighter and a man whose courage in handling bouts never has been surpassed (for instance, when he disqualified Harry Wills recently in the fight against Jack Sharkey), listened patiently. Everyone was gesticulating and shouting. All this time, Greb was dancing about the ring, mad as a hornet, and I think that he wasted some valuable energy before hostilities commenced.

At the very outset, Greb started circling about, trying to fool me. But I sent a hard right to his body that stopped his circling. During the fight, I thought I heard the crowd yell for me to "rough him." One time he held my head "in chancery. But rough or mild, I always will maintain that Greb ranks with the best of them. He wasn't intentionally dirty or foul. He was just built for rough work and knew no style but the most vigorous sort.

The crowd was against Greb. In fact, the crowds usually were against him. That is another reason why I think he was great. You have heard some fighters claim they never heard the cheers that greeted them or bothered about the so-called razzing they may have drawn. But I always felt encouraged when the boys gave me a hand. I will admit that when I get going and was put in hot water, I wasn't listening to the roar of the fans. However, when there were cheers for me, it heartened me.

Likes Friendly Crowds.

IF any fighter in the world had his choice, I believe he had rather perform before a friendly than a hostile audience. I presume this goes for all branches of sport. Yet Greb, the freak of Fistiana, only bared his teeth or shook his head like a wounded bull when he was hissed, booed and given the catcall.

Billy Gibson was elated at my victory over Greb. I, too, was glad, but I felt that I still had a lot to learn. I was confident now that science was the thing I needed in a high degree to win higher honors in the fistic game. New arts, says Emerson, conquer the old. I felt that the new art of boxing, as begun by James J. Corbett, would be the final goal for all champions.

Here and there you will continue to find some superlative slugger who for a time will dominate his field, just as the immortal old John L. did. But his conqueror usually will prove to be the scientist. As surely as the invention of gunpowder was destined to doom the fortress, the science of the crafty and heady boxer will level the brute force of the slugger.

My success with Greb did not mean the death of my ambitions—but merely a start. The fact that I was growing and that I was having some difficulty in making the light heavyweight limit of 175 pounds led me to believe that I would become a legitimate heavy ultimately. I redoubled my efforts. I exercised much. I took up golf seriously, because it afforded life in the open and relaxation. My golf game today is fairly good.

Gibson is an ardent golfer. Indeed, he gives the "pros" an awful time of it up around the Westchester-Biltmore Club. My putting could be improved on, but I think I could get into tournament form if I had another 10 years at the game. But I will not brag on my ability at golf because I don't want my friends Bobby Jones, Walter Hagen and Sweetser to laugh their heads off.

(My typist just told me: "But, Mr. Tunney, you shouldn't have ended that last sentence with a preposition!" To which my only defense is that Joseph Addison, one of our greatest stylists, often closed his sentences with prepositions.)

CONCORDIA BASKETBALL SQUAD PREPARES FOR TEN-GAME SCHEDULE

The Concordia Seminary basketball squad will be cut to 15 players during the coming week, Dr. Eber Simpson, coach, announced yesterday after the practice session in the Armory at Market and Grand. The original number of candidates reached 24, the largest cage squad in the history of the institution.

Six games have already been announced for the 10-game schedule planned by Dr. Simpson. Those already scheduled will open Jan. 7 with the State Teachers' College of Cape Girardeau and end with St. Louis University on Feb. 26. Other opponents will be Lincoln College, McKendree College, Hanover College and Indiana State Normal. Negotiations are also being carried on with Baker University and Lombard College.

Dr. Simpson, former Big Ten and Missouri Valley athletic star, will have but three veterans around which to arrange the new Concordia quintet. Kretschmar and Wagner return at forwards and Ecksteadt at guard. However, two promising candidates for center are Woerling and Schmidt, while a total of 14 applicants for the vacant guarding positions applied.

MURPHYSBORO WILL PLAY CARBONDALE

The Murphysboro Township High and the Carbondale Community High elevens will meet on the Murphysboro athletic field Thanksgiving afternoon in the feature game of the Southern Illinois gridiron program. The game will be the seventh meeting between the two squads, four of which have gone to Murphysboro and the last two of which Carbondale has won.

Thursday's game will be the eighth of the season for the Murphysboro squad, all seven of those played having been added to the Red Devil victory list, which totals 84 games, with only 10 defeats, in the last eight playing seasons. Carbondale's eleven is equally reputable, being led by "Red" McGown, one of the outstanding players in Illinois interscholastic football.

Attention, Amateur Basketball Teams!

AMATEUR basketball teams, members of leagues or independents, are invited to mail in their scores to the Post-Dispatch for publication. These columns may also be used by players to obtain positions and managers to arrange and obtain games. Address communications to the Amateur Basketball Editor.

"Can't Conscript Capital or Draft Labor"

—Bernard M. Baruch.

But Government Can Mobilize and Allocate Industry as Well as Money and Men to Win a War and Prevent Profiteering.

Head of War Industries Board Tells How to Organize Country's Total Useful Power in Time of National Danger.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
Of the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.

If President Coolidge in his Armistice day speech at Kansas City had in mind the actual wartime conscription of the whole nation's entire wealth, intending to apply the plan in the same sense and manner as the men of the nation were conscripted in the last war, he sponsors a scheme that would bring to the nation chaos instead of order, general disaster instead of victory.

If, however, the President had in mind the governmental supervision and direction of the nation's wealth instead of actual possession and control, he sponsors a proved plan that was beginning to function efficiently at the close of the war.

The foregoing are the views of Bernard M. Baruch, former chairman of the War Industries Board, the man who, under President Woodrow Wilson, had more power than any other person in directing American finances, industries and other resources in the world war.

"I cannot believe that the President meant that the Government should take over the wealth of the nation as we took over the men in the last war," Baruch declared. "If he did, Senator Reed has him in an indefensible position. Everything that Reed prophesies would come true. The nation would be demoralized at home and ultimately defeated by the enemy. I believe the President was carried away by a phrase, the conscription of capital. You can't 'conscript' capital any more than you can 'draft' labor in war time. You can supervise and direct these two elements but you can't set a military bureaucracy over them. Strange to say, Reed and I are in agreement on this."

Baruch was seen in his offices on Madison avenue, New York. Universal military service, or as he phrases it, "industrial mobilization," and "taking the profit out of war," are a subject dear to him. He believes that his plan is one thing he can hand down to posterity. He wants future generations to profit by the lessons of the last war.

Six feet four inches tall, straight as a wand, white haired, alert eyed, he walked around his large mahogany desk as he explained his plan to make war less alluring to politicians and industrialists who might forget its horrors.

"This is an old subject with me," he said at the beginning of a two-hour interview. "I've been trying to get people interested in it since 1919, when some of us realized that what we had learned during the war should not be lost.

Priority Is Key to Whole Situation

"At the very start, let this be realized: The industrial mobilization plan does not contemplate the conscription of wealth or the drafting of labor. Those are two impossibilities. The industrial mobilization plan means what it says, the mobilization of the resources of the country for the winning of a war. It functioned in the United States during the last war and would function again, but more efficiently, if necessary. The key to the whole situation is priority."

Pausing beside his desk and stretching out his left hand he continued:

"The resources of the country might be referred to as the five M's as represented by my fingers. The first is man power; the second is money; the third is maintenance, by which I mean food; the fourth is materials, by which I mean raw materials, manufacturing facilities, transportation, fuel and power, and the fifth is morale—the spirit of the people at home and in the armed forces."

The fifth point was represented by his thumb. He closed his hand into a fist and held the thumb, representing morale, held down the fingers representing the other M's.

"The object of the mobilization plan is to furnish the armed forces with men and materials," he continued. "This must be done with the least possible shock to the country. We must seek to maintain the status quo ante bellum.

How the Super-Board Would Function

"This can be done only by a super-organization acting under broad powers which can survey and direct the entire industrial field. You may call this the War Industries Board or the Industrial Strategy Board. It will be made up like any other supervisory committee, with a chairman, vice chairman, members in charge of various activities, bureau chiefs and subordinate workers. The Army, Navy, Shipping Board and other governmental agencies would be represented; not to direct the industries of the country, but as a funnel through which the needs of their departments would be transmitted.

"The Army would submit its needs, the Navy its needs; the Shipping Board would do the same. It would be the duty of the Strategy Board to supply those needs. As in the last war, none of these agencies would be allowed to commandeer anything without the approval of the chairman of the War Industries Board.

"That takes care of the armed forces. What about the civilian population? Prominent manufacturers said during the last war, 'Tell us what the Goverment wants and we'll fill the orders; but don't interfere with the sale of the part of our product the Government does not want to use.' That was and is unthinkable.

"We must take care of our civilian population. To that end a definite standard of prices should be set, preferably as of some date before the emergency.

"Real peace-time prices should be made to prevail.

"Here is where mobilization, priority and subsequently price-fixing come in. The men who sit at the War Industries Board meetings are leaders in their own particular industries. The steel, oil, copper, food and other industries would be there. Behind them would be the State War Industries Boards and behind them would be the county and city boards. All these men would work with the local, state and national boards drafting personnel into the armed forces.

Industries the First to Be Classified

"Now as to priorities, priority of men and materials. The boards would have a list of all industries, essential and less essential. Men would be first selected from the less essential industries. Say that a man was a florist's clerk—a less essential industry. Into the army he would go. The next man might be an experienced watchmaker. The draft board would make a note of his occupation, and when the time came, he would be set to making fuses, artillery sights or the like. When the draft board came to a steel worker or ship builder, the chairman would have his priority claim, and treat him accordingly. Of course fault might be found with the percentages or ratios, but the decisions of the board would have to stand until proved unsound.

"The same plan would work with the industries themselves. The board would allocate what supplies they could have, and through the railroad administrator, when they could have them. The less essential industries would be cut down to a minimum or might be cut off entirely or put to other operations. The administrators for the various products would see through their local boards that the orders were carried out. If there was 'bootlegging' of products, the source of supply would be cut off.

"Viewed now, this plan may seem harsh, yet it was in effect during the war. During the last days of the war, by a system of priorities, the board was allocating to our own army, and navy, to the Allies and to the essential war industries, only the things they required. It was making priority rulings as to transportation and they were being followed out by the railroad administrator.

"The fuel administrator distributed fuel only on rulings of the board. The board actually carried into effect an order that no building involving $2500 or more could be undertaken without approval of the board. No steel, no cement, no materials of any kind could be used for any purpose whatsoever unless the board permitted it. No steel company could sell over five tons of steel without the board's approval.

Board in Last War Highly Efficient

"The Treasury would not permit the raising of money for any industrial or financial operation unless it was approved by the board. Industries were curtailed but never destroyed; skeletonized, but never killed. Indeed the use of men, money and materials was rapidly being brought into exactly the condition I believe would be necessary in case of another war.

"As the production of the less essential industries would be curtailed, so that production of the essential industries would be increased. The increase would be sufficient to take care of the enormous demands of the armed forces and the needs of the civilian population. Here is a plan that would have been followed in 1919 if the war had continued:

"Manufacturers, jobbers and retailers of shoes would have been compelled to make and sell shoes only of a specified quality and at a fixed price, effective July, 1919. No one who did not have a card of the War Industries Board in his window could sell shoes, and only standardized shoes could be sold. No jobber or manufacturer would sell shoes to anybody who did not have this card. The shoes were to be stamped class A, B, or C, and had to be of the quality prescribed and sold at the price fixed.

"The country was so organized in every district that there could be immediately reported to Washington the name of any shoe retailer who did not carry out the regulations of the board as to price and quality. Through restrictions on his labor, money, raw materials and transportation, no manufacturer would have been permitted to sell any retailer violating the regulations. The armistice stopped the execution of this plan."

"But doesn't that come pretty close to a violation of Constitutional rights?" Baruch was asked.

Relied on Marshall for Authority

"The point was raised," he replied, "but I remembered reading a paragraph by Chief Justice John Marshall to the effect that the Constitution carried within itself a higher authority than it actually expressed—an authority to protect itself from destruction. I used that quotation for all it was worth.

"That's the way prices would be fixed. The board plan contemplates the fixing of wages in the same way. Members of the district and national boards would know the levels of pre-war wages and regulations would be enforced to maintain these levels.

"There might be attempts to 'bootleg' labor, but the board would keep a close check on that. There would be an excess profit tax on industries, because the essential industries would have a great opportunity for large profits. This excess profits tax, or something similar, would cut down the earnings, not to zero, but to a rate as low or lower than the pre-war level. And when a man tried to 'bootleg' his own labor to employers we'd nab him for the army.

"The use of money would and should be directed during the national emergency. Right now the Federal Reserve Banks virtually set the rate of interest money can earn. A man should no more be permitted to use his money as he wishes than he should be permitted to use the production of his mine, mill or factory, except through the general supervising agency.

"During the final phases of the world war no man, corporation or institution could raise money without the approval of the capital issues committee of the Treasury Department, which committee in turn would not permit the borrowing of money unless the War Industries Board approved the use to which it was to be put. We turned down Mayor Hylan when he wanted to spend $8,000,000 for new schools in New York and we did the same when Philadelphia wanted to build a couple of million dollars worth of viaducts. We told them these were commendable projects for peace time, but would have to wait until the United States had finished the war."

Didn't your position as chairman of the Board give you power greater than that 'ever dreamed of by a Roman dictator or Oriental despot,' to use Senator Reed's phrase?"

Must Not Be Servant of the Trusts

"There is no doubt that the chairman of the Board did have and would have tremendous power under this plan, but it is absolutely necessary that he should have. And he must be a man who can make quick decisions and mean 'no' when he says 'no.' He must not be cowed by the steel trust or any other great organization. He must have only one object in mind, the welfare of his country."

"How would you select the man to hold this supreme position? An irresponsible or unscrupulous person could make hundreds of millions of dollars for himself."

"That's an old question. How do we judge the qualifications of our President or members of the Supreme Court? We can only select the man we believe the best fitted, and if he isn't suitable, kick him out."

Baruch was asked what bills had been introduced in Congress to further either his plan or one similar. He answered that there had been none he could support. The outstanding bill upon which hearings have been held before a Senate committee is the Capper-Johnson bill, which would authorize the President to conscript men in an emergency for industrial as well as military service, but does not propose to conscript wealth.

Baruch declared that he could not support this bill because he believed that even with patriotism at great heights, conscription of labor would be impossible and unworkable.

"There is no need to conscript labor if the profits are taken out of war," he said. "With prices fixed both for military and civilian supplies, there would be no need for increased wages to meet the increased cost of living. The labor organizations would not seek an unfair advantage from a country in war.

"As Senator Reed says every dollar would go into hiding if the Government attempted to conscript wealth. That conscription would defeat itself. The attempted conscription of labor would put all labor organizations on the offensive and would defeat itself."

"What about the War Department's survey of all the industries of the country with the plans whereby these factories can be turned into munition plants in case of an emergency?" Baruch was asked.

War Department Survey Is Useless

"That survey is not worth the paper it is written on," he replied. "Business conditions today are not what they were yesterday. They will not be tomorrow what they are today. Army officers have collected a lot of imposing statistics and drawn up contracts that would be useless during a war. The War Department hasn't been able to get together with the Navy to allocate the needs of each. In the event of war, the Shipping Board would demand certain things the Army and Navy wanted, the food administrator would clash with the quartermaster corps and we'd have a repetition of the early days of the World War. The army is looking out only for the army and there's no co-ordination in its plan.

"It would be much better if the Army would busy itself with problems involving varying numbers of troops under varying conditions, making note of the supplies of men and material it would need. In the event of a war then, the Industrial Strategy Board or the War Industries Board would furnish the supplies. This board through a facilities committee could soon ascertain where those supplies were to come from."

"When would this industrial strategy board be called into action?" was the next question.

"Only in an emergency similar to the last," Baruch answered. "If we were at war with Mexico such a board would not be necessary. The army could handle the situation without trouble. Of course, there should be some supervising agency, but nothing like the board that functioned during the last war. On the other hand, if England and Japan should attack us, then our existence would be at stake and everyone in the nation would have to do his or her share."

"One more question. The next war we hope will be in the distant future, 30 or 40 years from now at least. If you have not sponsored legislation for your plan, what tangible thing will there be for the next generation to work from?"

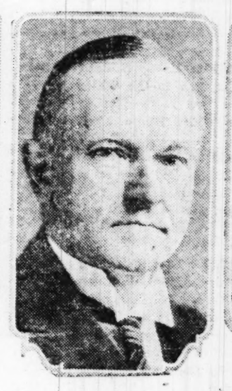
"There is now only my own preachings," he answered. "When the next war comes all my colleagues who served so splendidly on the War Industries Board probably will be gone. I endowed a chair at Johns Hopkins University with a view to perpetuating the war board idea, but no lectures have yet been asked for. I can only hope that when the next war comes some one will find out how the industries board functioned in the last war.

"Is there any disposition on the part of other countries to take up the idea?"

"There was for a time in England and France, but the last time I heard from Winston Churchill, he said the army clique was getting back into the saddle and if there should be another war the usual war mistakes would be repeated. And I get the same replies from France."

By Senator Reed.

"THERE would be but one result—at the mere approach of war every dollar would go into hiding; business would be paralyzed; the wheels of industry would cease to move; the entire machinery of trade and commerce would stop. The individual and economic life of the country would be as completely paralyzed as a human body if the spinal cord were severed at the first cervical vertebra. No man would dare trade, barter, buy or sell; no one would venture to make an investment. Universal chaos would immediately result. Accordingly, at the very time when the Government would be most needed to stimulate the activities of the people and to promote the highest economical activities, everything would suddenly come to a standstill. The result would be worse than the loss of a hundred battles."



By President Coolidge.

"TO expose some men to the perils of the battlefield while others are left to reap large gains from the distress of their country is not in harmony with our ideals of equality. Any future policy of conscription should be all inclusive, applicable in its terms to the entire personnel and entire wealth of the country."—From the President's Kansas City speech on Armistice Day, 1926.

By Bernard M. Baruch.

"TAKING the profit out of war is not synonymous with conscription of wealth, as it is sometimes regarded. The latter is a theoretical project, prohibited by our Constitution, contrary to the spirit of our social and political institutions and impossible in practice. Taking the profit out of war is an orderly and scientific development of the economics and conduct of modern war, necessary to the effective mobilization of national resources and indispensable to equalizing the burdens of war among the armed and civilian population. Born of experience and proved by practice, it removes some of the most destructive concomitants of modern war—the confusion and waste incident to war-time inflation."

The A B C of Farm Relief As Gov. Lowden Outlines It

Grower, Selling Below Cost of Production, Needs Co-operative Organization to Set Prices and Order Surplus Crops to Storage—Manufacturing and Farming Compared.

By WILLIAM F. ALLEN,
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

THE country is prosperous. Business is good. Working men have achieved the highest standard of living in the history of labor. The United States has corralled 40 per cent of the wealth of the world. There is a general air of serenity and well-being.

But suppose that some morning the newspapers should carry these headlines:

"Interest on Corporate Investment Reduced from 11 to 3.5 per cent."

"Wages in industry reduced from $1250 to $648."

"Wages of railroad workers reduced from $1570 to $648."

How startled and panicky the world would be!

"And yet," remarked former Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, "you would only behold a world reduced to the present status of agriculture."

The figures in the imaginary headlines are real. The average return upon capital in industry today is 11 per cent. The farmer earns 3.5 per cent, and if he should figure depreciation and depletion of the soil, as industry figures depreciation, that 3.5 per cent would be wiped out. The farmer and his family earn an average of $648 a year. Workers in industry earn an average of $1250 a year, without the aid of the family.

More Farm Than Engage in Industry.

"The farmer is broke, and the larger his crop, the more severe his bankruptcy.

Mr. Lowden was asked why and what could be done about it. He readily and succinctly explained why. He was not so sure of the remedy, though he had a suggestion.

"This plight of the farmer is serious," he began. "There are more farmers than there are persons in manufacturing, transportation and mining combined. The capital invested in land is greater than the capital in manufacturing, transportation and mining. So large a proportion of our wealth and population cannot be permitted to remain bankrupt long. The decline of all nations in history began with the decline of agriculture.

"Let us compare farming with manufacture and how each is conducted. The manufacturer has a known capital investment. He bears certain, fixed operating costs. He has known computable overheads. He knows his approximate output. He figures interest on his investment, adds operating costs, overheads and a round profit, divides this by his estimated output and fixes his price, 'Here is my price,' he says to the public, 'take it or leave it.'

Law of Supply and Demand Weakened.

"Now the farmer has all of the expenses that the manufacturer has. He has capital invested. He has operating costs. He has overheads and he would like to enjoy a profit. What happens to him? He can estimate his production. But he cannot divide production into costs and name a price. He can't say 'take it or leave it at that price.' On the contrary, some one names a price for him and says to him: 'Take it or leave it.'"

"The tragedy is that the price named in

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

To People of British Birth.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WILL you please permit me, through the columns of your paper, to address an appeal to the residents of British birth in your city, on behalf of the children of the miners in the Welsh coalfields? So many requests for charitable contributions are made to Americans that I do not feel that this is a case for their consideration. I am of the opinion that our own people, once they know of the need, will come forward and do what is necessary.

To those of you who have left the British Isles to achieve a happier future in this great land of opportunity, I want to say a few words regarding the terrible conditions existing in some of the coalfields, more particularly those in the Rhondda district of South Wales. Many of you are well acquainted with the dire poverty in which the coal miners and their families live, even in the most prosperous times of the industry, but the coal strike has lasted some six months now, and many thousands of miners are being forced back to work for wages that are best described as starvation pay, but it is for the sake of the women and children they are doing so.

The Board of Education of Rhondda has been taking care of the children from its own funds, and feeding some 18,000 of them three times per day; it has spent $175,000 on this work and is now at the end of its resources, and unless help is received from some outside agency, it means that these 18,000 little children will be reduced to dire want this winter. The need is not only for the barest necessities of food, but with the advent of cold weather shoes and warm clothing are very badly needed. The Rhondda district is badly-hit by the strike, as it is in the very heart of the Welsh coalfields, and is, therefore, purely a one industry district, so that there is nothing the miners can do to earn a single penny till the mines reopen.

The Very Rev. Herbert L. Johnson, A. M., B. D., Dean of St. Paul's Cathedral, Detroit, Mich., will receive and acknowledge all contributions to this fund. Will you not sit right down now and help us to bring to these children some idea of what Christmas charity means?

Detroit, Mich. RUFUS J. RUGLEN.

Traffic Cops and Pedestrians.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

"DON'T you ever look at them lights?" They're not moving!" harshly spoke the traffic cop as a pedestrian advanced two steps and automatically stepped back two steps.

Self-preservation is the first human instinct. Everyone can recall instances of action before constructive thought. The flash of the green light advances both pedestrians and vehicles. The autos do not stop, but forge ahead and cut right through the pedestrians, who are forced to stand still in the street, only to grab the chance to advance after the autos have passed. The power of such necessary habit over the human mind is inevitably of a hypnotic nature, which automatically causes the pedestrian to advance upon the sight of space clearance, which is more prominent and dominating than the signal lights, as these not only are out of the natural line of sight, but facing the right angle instead of the pedestrian, who is traveling on the left side of the square of an intersection.

Moral: For traffic experts—Don't oppose the laws of nature and expect humans to follow your rules without question.

H. C. PERSONS.

Cincinnati, O.

Democratic Party's Mission.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHENEVER a great fundamental principle of government is brought into question the same ought to be made the paramount issue by all the political parties contending for the reins of government, that the matter be thoroughly understood by the people and properly settled. Fundamentals are the arteries through which a government receives its lifeblood.

The most important fundamental question of government before the American people at the present time is the matter of local self-government, or whether we shall keep inviolate the covenant between the Government and the states to preserve that autonomy vouchsafed in the Constitution.

The constant encroachment upon the reserved rights of the states by the Federal authority must be looked upon with grave apprehension by all liberty-loving people of America.

The Democratic party should be the natural guardian of local self-government. What other political party could so consistently demand the restoration and preservation of this principle of government held so sacred by every true American.

In the next contest for the presidency, should the Democratic party place high upon its banner, "For the restoration and preservation of State Rights and Local Selfgovernment," subordinating other complex and aggravating local and economic questions; and at the same time choose a standard bearer tried and true to such a program, victory for the party would be certain and the whole country would be made to rejoice.

Bentonville, Ark. W. L. MARLEY.

THE INDEPENDENT VOTER.

The New Republic assesses the recent election as a total loss. The people "voted obediently, as they were expected to vote," it says, and "to no purpose."

Did the people of Pennsylvania vote, as they were expected to vote, when they gave the Democrat Wilson, a plurality of approximately 50,000 over Vare outside of Philadelphia? Excepting Senator Norris of Nebraska, we know of nobody who expected such a revolution in that State. And, the New Republic, we think, is quite alone in declaring such a vote to be "of no purpose."

Massachusetts rejected Butler and elected Walsh, and though that result was earnestly hoped for, we doubt if it was generally expected. Certainly some supposedly competent political observers expressed the opinion that Butler would win.

Illinois' big Republican plurality of 886,000 to Harding in 1920, of 444,000 to Coolidge over Davis and La Follette two years ago, was reduced to a fragment in the senatorial contest. Considering the limitations of the Democratic candidate, Brennan—the city-boss tradition, the fact that Insull had also contributed to his campaign, the injury that incapacitated him for active campaigning—can such a vote be competently dismissed as "expected and of no purpose"?

Here in Missouri, Mr. Hawes, a wet, polled a plurality of more than 35,000 in the dry, rural area outside of St. Louis, and wiped out the normal Republican majority of, say 35,000 in this city. Can such an accomplishment be considered as "expected and of no purpose"?

The truth is there was a great deal of independent voting on Nov. 2, not only in the states mentioned, but throughout the entire country. In consequence the Republicans probably have lost control of the Senate, as the New Republic asserts. If they retain control and effect an organization, it will be at the price of enormous concessions to the insurgents whom it cast into outer darkness a short time ago.

The seventieth Congress will be a different body from the sixty-ninth—different in personnel and sentiment, and logically certain to make a different record than it would have made if the people had not repudiated the Coolidge administration.

The New Republic, it seems to us, is lugubriously mistaken in its facts and conclusions. It fails completely to see that most important political person, the independent voter.

A WANDERER RETURNS.

Twenty-one years ago a young cowboy packed his "chaps" and ropes at the Mulhall ranch, near Guthrie, Ok., and took train for New York as part of a Wild West show that was to open in Madison Square Garden. Recently a world traveler, humorist and comedian stopped for a little visit at the Mulhall ranch. Will Rogers had returned to his starting point for the first time in all those years. Col. Zack Mulhall, who started him on his way, was there to greet the wanderer. The ranch had not changed so much with the years, but many things have happened to the cow hand who rode away so long ago.

Col. Mulhall asked his distinguished visitor where he would have been, but for that early start, and the prince of entertainers replied: "I reckon I'd be making a lot of corn over at Claremore, and those people all over the world wouldn't have been bothered."

Still, the corn-belt farmers complain of the evil results of the surplus crop, and the demand for Will Rogers exceeds the supply. In the profitable peregrinations of this erstwhile herder, there must be an argument against keeping the boys on the farm, if one is needed.

Here, too, is a rebuke for the sage who held the "rolling stone gathers no moss." His wanderings have brought wealth to Will Rogers, who might have stuck to the soil and demanded that Congress do something to relieve him. He would be the last one to frame a formula for success, but he can tell the world there are other ways besides sticking to the job.

A MOCKERY OF JUSTICE.

The recent decision of the United States Supreme Court affirming that a violator of the prohibition laws cannot claim the protection of the constitutional guarantee against double jeopardy, and that he may be prosecuted in both state and Federal courts, and subjected to two penalties for the same offense, is neither good law nor good morals.

This question, in other matters, has been before the Supreme Court for many years. In counterfeiting cases, for example, a majority of the court has contended that a state might punish a man for passing counterfeit coin and that would constitute no bar to Federal prosecution for counterfeiting. Yet in one of the earliest of these cases, that of Fox vs. Ohio, decided in 1847, Justice McLean entered a vigorous dissent. He said:

The point is not whether a state may not punish an offense under an act of Congress, but whether the state may inflict, by virtue of its own sovereignty, punishment for the same act, as an offense against the state, which the Federal Government may constitutionally punish.

If it be so it is a great defect in our system. For the punishment under the state law would be no bar to a prosecution under a law of Congress. And to punish the same act by the two governments would violate not only the common principles of humanity, but would be repugnant to the nature of both governments. If there were a concurrent power in both governments to punish the same act, a conviction under the law of either could be pleaded in bar to a prosecution by the other. * * * There is no principle better established by the common law, none more fully recognized in the Federal and state constitutions than that an individual shall not be put in jeopardy twice for the same offense. * * *

Nothing can be more repugnant or contradictory than two punishments for the same act. It would be a mockery of justice and a reproach to civilization. It would bring our system of government into merited contempt.

Justice McLean closed his opinion saying:

I stand alone in this view, but I have the satisfaction to know that the lamented Justice Story, when this case was discussed by the Judges the last time he attended the Supreme Court, and, if I mistake not, one of the last cases discussed by him in consultation, coincided with the views here presented.

REED AND THE WHITE HOUSE.

Senator Reed is not saying that he would not like to be President of the United States, nor is Missouri saying that she would not like to see him so honored.

Missourians know the Senator better than the rest of the country knows him. They have been fighting him longer. They know what his mettle is, and how it has in the heat of conflict through the years acquired its present quality of fineness.

To make Reed of Missouri President of the United States would be to rededicate ourselves to American freedom. It is not easy to believe that a nation could so be reborn—but it might happen. Every great epoch is the story of a man. Reed likes the things the men who founded the American government liked. He likes freedom. He likes liberty. He likes equality. He likes justice. He likes honesty. He hates the same things the men who founded the American republic hated. He hates privilege. He hates oppression. He hates dishonesty. Reed is Thomas Jefferson reincarnate. There would be some scenes at the White House with Reed there, just as there were some scenes at the White House when Thomas Jefferson was there. But there would be a man in the White House if Reed were there. There would be a Democrat in the White House if Reed were there—just as there was a man in the White House when Thomas Jefferson was there—just as there was a Democrat in the White House when Thomas Jefferson was there.

Reed says the same things said by Lincoln, Roosevelt, Jackson, Jefferson and Wilson. He says them with a deadliness and a conviction unsurpassed by any of those men. It would be a shock to the White House after Coolidge. We are not sure the White House would stand up under it. Even a very strong cannon is likely to blow up with big shot in it after desultorily firing birdshot. We are not sure that any of us could stand it. We would have to think it over.

Anyway, whether Reed would or would not like it, or whether the country would or would not think of it, there is one fine thing about it. It will give us something real to think about for the next year and a half, and God knows we need it.

PROHIBITION IN TEXAS.

Three items of prohibition news in Texas:

One agent has been indicted on the charge of extortion.

Another has been arrested on a charge of drunkenness.

Third, a Houston woman, Mrs. Evelyn Edwards, has brought a suit for damages against the Prohibition Director of South Texas. She charges that agents entered her home, broke an urn containing the ashes of her dead son and maliciously scattered them over the floor, despite the pleadings of her small daughter and Negro maid.

Arriving home before the agents had left, Mrs. Edwards asked them to "Please go—haven't you done enough?" "We'll leave when we damn please," was the answer.

Later she telephoned the circumstances to the Director, who told her not to file any charges against the agents and he would file none against her, concluding his advice with: "You are sitting pretty."

Gen. Andrews recently denounced strong-arm methods and issued a sweeping order commanding agents to observe the ordinary decencies in their work and insisting upon "lawful law enforcement." Violation was to be followed by instant dismissal.

The General's attention is respectfully directed to Director Hammons of South Texas and his agents.

THE PROMACRAUCHENIA.

The promacrauchenia, a prehistoric beast whose fossil remains have just been found in the Argentine, sounds like a most unearthly kind of monster. He is described as camel-like in general structure, with the head of a horse, the legs of a giraffe, the proboscis of a primitive elephant, the teeth of a rhinoceros and the feet of a prehistoric three-toed horse. Assemble those details and you would have a frightful apparition.

One is inclined to doubt that such monstrosities ever existed. But take stock of the animals now living on the earth and you will find many who are equally incredible. Go no farther than the St. Louis Zoo, and you will see many natural monstrosities. The huge head of the hippo, whose eyes project like the headlights of an automobile and whose mouth is a veritable cavern, is like nothing you have seen before. The sea lions are weird beyond belief in their slimy bonelessness. There are birds in the big bird cage which look like something seen in a nightmare.

Why, for all we know, this dreadful promacrauchenia may have been a beloved barnyard pet in Pleistocenic times.

BALLADE OF A SOUND PHILOSOPHY.

He pains my neck who sadly sings
That life is dull and such as that;
It does not help to better things
To say 'tis weary, stale and flat.
Of course it is; we're all aware
What things the sad desire to say;
But thoughts like those my style impair,
And laughter is the better way.

Some reason on the silly game
Although they say that life lacks sense,
In aimless things they seek an aim
And try to prove life's excellence;
I've never sought to solve as yet
The puzzle of the parts we play;
With futile quests I'm not beset
And laughter is the better way.

Perchance this world is far from good;
Do futile tears improve our fate?
And though we reason as we should
Does reason help make matters straight?
As I have said, tears cramp my style,
A fig for lofty reason's sway;
If life lacks sense, why not a smile?
And laughter is the better way.

L'Envoi.

Sweet Prince, the seers of gloom I shun,
And those by reason led astray;
For living is a lot of fun,
And laughter is the better way.

A POLICEMAN'S LOT IS NOT A HAPPY ONE.

"This bottle of wine was found in the car," the policeman told the Court.

"How do you know it's wine? Did you ever drink wine?" asked the Court.

"Yes," answered Policeman O'Keefe.

"Well, take a drink of this and see if it's wine," the Court ordered.

O'Keefe did.

"It's wine," he said.

"Is it intoxicating?" asked the Court.

"Yes," said O'Keefe.

The case being closed, a bailiff started to take care of the bottle.

"Hi, hi!" the Court was exclaiming. "The policeman can take care of that. He handles it all right."

O'Keefe slipped the bottle into his pocket.—Chicago Daily News.

A NEEDED REFORM.

Something should be done about it. We view the situation with alarm. We would like to see some political party put a plank in the 1928 platform about the matter. When prohibition is so well enforced that Wayne B. Wheeler and Dr. Clarence True Wilson are left free for other duties, we hope to enlist them under our banner as fellow crusaders. When the child labor amendment is part of the Constitution, we expect a large batch of recruits. When the education of children is controlled from Washington, we intend to thank heaven that we went to school when the old gray mare was what she used to be—that is, many long years ago. Our devotions completed, we shall try to have the National Educational Association join our army. Pending the happy time when we can get all these recruits, we intend to be an army of one, and carry on an intensive campaign of education, jollification, villification, exasperation and vituperation to attain our objective. We demand a week not dedicated to anything—motion pictures, Edam cheese, fruit, used automobiles, spare tires, save a child, save a nickel, save a dime, save two bits, go to church, go to grass, go to hell, father, mother, sister, brother, son, daughter, maiden aunt, bachelor uncle, canned goods, wet goods, dry goods, yard goods—we want a week that begins Sunday morning and ends the following Saturday night—we demand a WEEKLESS WEEK.

The MIRROR OF PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

DR. ANGELL KNOWS.

From the Detroit News.

YOUNG people in the colleges and universities find an able defender in James R. Angell, president of Yale University, and few commentators are better entitled to an opinion. For Dr. Angell was reared in the university atmosphere. His father was the revered James B. Angell, for many years president of the University of Michigan.

And this is Dr. Angell's opinion, expressed during a recent visit to Detroit: "In the main, the young man in college today can be trusted to conduct himself as a gentleman should." Now most folks, thinking of the young people of their acquaintance who have sufficient ability, energy and the source to go to college, long ago came to the same conclusion, even when the hue and cry was raised to the country. But it is a satisfaction to learn that a man of learning and of intimate knowledge of collegiate conditions, verifies the judgment. Dr. Angell says the average college youth is a "good kid." And Dr. Angell is a professor of psychology; he ought to know.

KANSAS EXPLAINS.

From the Wichita Eagle.

THIS discussion about the origin of the word "carping" as used frequently in the expression "carping critic" leads us to pick up an unused oar for a moment. The word is not from the French, but from the fish, and is so called because the carp is scaly, dumb, sneaking and full of bones. In the human variety the bones are mostly above the ears. The carp is also of the sucker variety, and will steal your bait. It is considered absolutely of no value. When caught, it will try and flop back into the water.

FARMERS' EARNINGS SHOW SMALL RETURNS.

From the Manufacturers' Record.

ACCORDING to an analysis by the National Industrial Conference Board, the agricultural industry's balance sheet for the crop year just ended shows that the average return for the labor and management supplied to the farm by all farm operators—that is, owners and tenant farmers combined—amounted to $679 per farm operator for the year, which included food, fuel and shelter supplied by the farm. But the farmer who owns and operates his own farm should receive a return on his money invested in the farm as well as a return on his labor, the board's study points out.

Taking the farm owner-operators as a group by itself, and allowing them only their farm income a return of 5% per cent on their investment—which is the lowest rate of interest their money would earn invested in farm mortgages—the remainder income from the farm, representing return on labor and management, averaged only $440 per farm owner-operator for the 1925 crop year. This sum amounts to less than half of the tenant farmer's average income, it is also less than the average annual earnings of hired farm help, which were $[illegible] not including board.

TAX ASSESSMENTS IN ST. LOUIS TOTAL $1,292,357,385

Announcement by State Commission Shows Increase of $65,188,085 Over Aggregate for 1925.

FIGURES FOR STATE NOT YET COMPLETED

City's Share of Levy for Whole of Missouri Approximately 26.7 Per Cent, It Is Estimated.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 20.—Assessed valuations of all classes of property in St. Louis total $1,292,357,385 for 1926 taxes, the State Tax Commission announced today, following completion of the distribution of the assessed valuations of public utilities and railroads to the city and counties. The 1926 total for St. Louis is an increase of $65,188,085 over last year.

The St. Louis total is 26.7 per cent of the grand total of approximately $4,835,000,000 in assessed valuations of all taxable property in the state for 1926 taxes.

The exact total for the entire state has not been determined by the commission, as several of the smaller counties have not sent in their reports on the assessments of merchants and manufacturers, which is the last assessment reported to the commission.

Assessments in St. Louis include $1,067,297,932 for real estate and personal property; $142,093,100 for assessment of merchants and manufacturers, and $82,964,332 for that part of the property of railroads and public utilities in St. Louis that is allocated to the city under the distributable property law.

Does Not Include Land.

This utility assessment for St. Louis does not represent the full assessed value of the utility and railroad property in St. Louis. The law governing state assessments of railroads, street railways, telephone, telegraph and electric companies, provides the assessments of such companies shall be apportioned to the cities and counties in which they operate, on a mile of track or mile of wire basis. Under this system the cities lose and the counties gain.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 20.—Assessed valuations of all classes of property in St. Louis total $1,292,357,385 for 1926 taxes, the State Tax Commission announced today, following completion of the distribution of the assessed valuations of public utilities and railroads to the city and counties. The 1926 total for St. Louis is an increase of $65,188,085 over last year.

The St. Louis total is 26.7 per cent of the grand total of approximately $4,825,000,000 in assessed valuations or all taxable property in the state for 1926 taxes.

The exact total for the entire state has not been determined by the commission, as several of the smaller counties have not sent in their reports on the assessments of merchants and manufacturers, which is the last assessment reported to the commission.

Assessments in St. Louis include $1,067,291,933 for real estate and personal property; $142,093,100 for assessment of merchants and manufacturers, and $82,964,332 for that part of the property of railroads and public utilities in St. Louis that is allocated to the city under the distributable property law.

Does Not Include Land.

This utility assessment for St. Louis does not represent the full assessed value of the utility and railroad property in St. Louis. The law governing state assessments of railroads, street railways, telephone, telegraph and electric companies, provides the assessments of such companies shall be apportioned to the cities and counties in which they operate, on a mile of track or mile of wire basis. Under this system the cities lose and the counties gain.

The St. Louis assessment of merchants and manufacturers, reported at $142,093,100, is an increase of $8,737,100 over the total of $133,356,000 reported for last year. The assessment of merchants and manufacturers for the entire state, still unreported from a few small counties, usually totals about $250,000,000.

Under the distributable property law, the $47,144,102 assessment of the United Railways Co. of St. Louis was apportioned at $38,645,780 to the city and $8,498,322 to St. Louis County. This assessment, as with other public utilities, represents only the property returned to the State Tax Commission, and does not include land, buildings, supplies and other items assessed locally.

Utilities Assessments.

The city received $12,582,980 of the assessment of $21,527,785 placed upon property of the Union Electric Light and Power Co. St. Louis County was apportioned $6,655,095 of the assessment, and the remainder went to other counties in which the Union Electric operates.

Assessment of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. by the State totaled $22,034,350, of which $4,205,197 went to the city and $1,607,717 to St. Louis County. The balance went to numerous other counties in the State in which the Southwestern Bell operates.

The assessment of $2,500,000 on the electric department of the Laclede Gas Light Co., all was apportioned to St. Louis, as the company operates within the city. The gas department of the company is assessed by the St. Louis Assessor.

ENGLISHMAN AGREES WITH AMERICAN WAR DEBT VIEW

John Wycliffe Black of Leicester to Speak at English-Speaking Union Luncheon Friday.

Agreement with the American viewpoint on the European war debt question was expressed Friday by John Wycliffe Black of Leicester, England, a former member of the British Parliament, who spent the day in St. Louis, as the guest of J. M. Bader, 5540 Pershing avenue. He will return next Friday, and will speak at a public luncheon of the English-Speaking Union Friday at 12:30 in Parlor A, Statler Hotel.

Black, a member of the Liberal party in English politics, said he had no sympathy with the general European outcry against the payment to the United States of war debts. He declared England could and would pay her debts, and stated that this was the opinion of the majority of the British.

He is the only delegate ever sent by the Disciples of Christ Church of Great Britain to the United States, and was the principal speaker at a convention of this denomination in Memphis last week. A retired shoe manufacturer of Leicester, England, he is active in the administration of public affairs in this city.

Frank V. Hammar, president of the St. Louis Chapter, English-Speaking Union, will preside at the luncheon. Reservations may be made at headquarters of the chapter, 1333 Syndicate Trust Building.

A B C of Farm Relief Outlined By Gov. Lowden

these days is below the sum of his costs.

"We hear so often: 'The law of supply and demand must prevail.' I wonder. I wonder if we realized that competition is necessary to the law of supply and demand, and that actual competition has largely disappeared from business.

"There is a leader in virtually every established big business in the country—Standard Oil, United States Steel. When Standard Oil quotes on gasoline every other refinery adopts Standard Oil's price. United States Steel makes steel prices for the whole industry.

"The farmer comes to town to buy a pair of shoes. At one store the price is $7.50. He can't afford that price and goes to another store. There he may find the same quality of shoes at $7.25. Still too high for his purse. To another store—$7. Still too high for him. He finds the price essentially the same at all stores. He goes home without his shoes.

"Next day he loads up wheat and goes to the elevator. Does he say as the shoe dealer said to him: 'I want such and such a price.' No. The elevator man says to him: 'I'm paying $1 today.' The farmer pays the other fellow's price for shoes, if he takes them, and takes the other fellow's price for his wheat, or hauls it back home.

Selling Organization Seems a Remedy.

"The point I am seeking to make is simply this: The farmer encounters organized selling on every hand and, when it comes to his product, encounters organized buying. He must become an organized seller. He must achieve the power to fix his price as industry does on a cost plus basis.

"How? The answer is difficult. There are millions of farmers. The producers of any one article in industry seldom number more than 100. It is hard to get millions together. It is easy to get a hundred together.

"The nearest answer seems to lie through the farmers' co-operatives. Some of us have suggested a Federal farm board to bolster the co-operatives and to stimulate their expansion to include as large a percentage as possible of the growers of any one product.

"We have proposed that this board be vested with power to inquire into certain facts. Is there a surplus in some basic farm product? Does this surplus depress price below cost of production with a reasonable profit? If the board finds the answer 'yes' to both inquiries, then it is empowered to authorize the co-operative power to take charge of the surplus and store it. The only aid from the Government would be the distribution, among all producers of the one product, the cost of holding over the surplus. The board would not fix prices. But cotton growers would gather about a table with the textile manufacturers of Europe and they would bargain upon price. The grower would enjoy, as industry does, organized selling.

"It may be that there is a better solution than this. I am not insisting upon any particular remedy. I only say that the problem is there and that it is of the gravest importance."

Marshal Petain Writing a Book.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—Marshal Petain is spending some of his time in the pursuit of literature. "Le Soldat" (The Soldier), a subject with which the Marshal is quite conversant, will be the title of a book to which he now is putting the finishing touch. Paul Bourget, prominent French writer, who has read the first part of the work, pronounces it a masterpiece. Both Marshals Joffre and Foch are members of the French Academy, a distinction which has not been bestowed on Marshal Petain. His friends hope that "Le Soldat" will open the gates of the immortals to the hero of Verdun.

(Solid Mahogany)

This Suite is custom-made in the Prufrock-Litton factory—newest type—solid mahogany frame all around backs, front of arms and elegantly carved all around the base.

Each piece will be covered in mohairs of your selection—newest shades and patterns. Reverse side of cushions covered in your choice of attractive damasks or linen friezes. This well-made Suite, a regular $265 value, priced for the three days at only

LARGE TALL-BACK COXWELL CHAIR, TO MATCH—$60 ADDITIONAL.

Separate pieces will be sold.

We feel confident this value is without a parallel anywhere in the city at anything near this price.

The Perplexing Problem!

The problem of checking the "galloping" boys and girls of nowadays is still perplexing the teaching minds.

Why they offer such widely different methods of solution is beyond the comprehension of those who have solved it.

People who build houses to endure don't build them in the sand or at the foot of a volcano; they build on a foundation which only TIME or advancement can destroy.

So it is with children! Lay the proper foundation for them AND not only TELL them what to do and why, BUT SHOW THEM!

Beautiful Grands

THESE two Grands are convincing proof of the superiority of Piano values at Lehman Corner! We are glad to indorse these instruments with the assurance that any Piano from the House of Lehman is sure to please and satisfy the most critical.

Smith & Nixon $525
Deferred Payments

A pre-holiday offer which presents to prospective Piano purchasers an unusual opportunity of securing extra value at an amazingly low cost...for this is a Grand to be compared only with instruments selling at much higher price levels.

It is made by the Smith & Nixon Company, for 60 years makers of fine Pianos. The superb tonal qualities of this charming instrument and its richly beautiful Mahogany Case make it a Piano which will grace with distinction even the most elaborate of homes. And yet, it is offered at a price within the means of every lover of Music and Beauty.

Fischer Grand $875
Deferred Payments

Produced by J. & C. Fischer, the oldest Piano Makers in the world, this Grand is truly the epitome of their art. To be able to offer St. Louisans this outstanding Grand at this price is an accomplishment made possible by the dominance of the House of Lehman.

Tonal beauty and durability, such as this Piano possesses, is not possible in an instrument of less than the highest scientific perfection or with less than the best in materials and craftsmanship. The Musical sweetness and the evenness of tone in this Grand will delight those who appreciate the best in music, while the beauty of its Mahogany Case will appeal to everyone.

Your present Piano will be accepted as Down Payment on either of these Grands.

CHURCH DEDICATION TODAY TO OPEN SERIES OF EXERCISES

West Park Baptist to Dedicate Electric Pipe Organ Tomorrow Evening.

The first of a series of dedication exercises for the West Park Baptist Church will take place at 11 o'clock this morning at the new building, Hodiamont and Wells avenues, with Dr. W. H. Geistweit of Dayton, O., former pastor of the Third Baptist Church here, delivering the principal address. Dr. Geistweit will also speak at a fellowship service at 3 o'clock this afternoon, and at the evening services.

Dedication of the church's electric pipe organ will be held tomorrow evening, with Dr. Percy B. Eversden at the console, and a chorus choir singing Gaul's oratorio "The Holy City." Dr. A. H. Armstrong of the Federation of Churches, Mrs. E. F. Brown of the Women's Board of Religious Organizations, and visiting pastors will speak. Interdenominational Night, Tuesday. A dedication dinner will be given Wednesday.

The West Park Baptist Church was started in 1893 as a mission of the Third Baptist Church in a room at Morton and Chatham avenues. It was established as an independent organization, with its present name, Jan. 3, 1904, at which time a site was purchased and a church erected at 5944 Easton avenue. The present site was bought in 1923, and construction started 15 months ago.

The new church, which is of modified Italian Renaissance type, is one of the largest in West St. Louis, having 51 rooms besides an auditorium seating 540 persons.

HELD FOR AUTO CRASH CAUSED BY POLICEMAN

Injured Milk Wagon Driver Locked Up 2¼ Hours on Another Officer's Order.

After being painfully injured early yesterday when a policeman's automobile skidded into his milk wagon, Samuel Doehring, 22 years old, of 2619 South Spring avenue, was held a prisoner for two and a half hours while the policeman, responsible for the collision, remained at liberty.

The policeman, Bernard T. Aka, 33 years old, of 6242A Goerner avenue, is attached to the Laclede District.

Doehring, employed by the Jersey Farm Dairy Co., was driving a two-horse wagon north on California avenue at 5:15 a. m., when he stopped in obedience to an automatic traffic signal at Lafayette avenue. When the signal changed to "Go," he started his team forward, and the wagon was struck and turned around by an eastbound coupe driven by Patrolman Aka, accompanied by Miss Ruth Antonella, 27, a nurse, of 3711 Olive street. Doehring suffered a sprained back and wrenched right leg; Miss Antonella suffered lacerations and bruises.

All three proceeded in the automobile to city hospital, where Doehring and Miss Antonella were treated. Patrolman Aka and Miss Antonella then drove off, and Doehring was locked up in the prison ward, with intoxicated men and criminals, including a confessed murderer, for company. His detention was at the request of Patrolman Kubik of the Soulard District, who chanced to be at the hospital.

Doehring was indignant over his treatment. He was held until 8:30, when his release was ordered by Capt. Kirk, who found that Patrolman Kubik had acted on his own initiative, Patrolman Aka making no complaint.

In fact, Aka accepted responsibility for the collision, saying his car skidded on the icy street when he applied his brakes to obey the "stop" signal. He denied he was traveling as fast as 35 miles an hour, as Doehring had charged. He offered to pay all damages.

On duty until 11 o'clock last night, Aka had spent the rest of the night at the home of Miss Antonella, his wife's cousin, because he did not wish to drive through the slush to his own home, he reported. About 5 a. m., he added, he and Miss Antonella set out to get breakfast, and were driving around in search of a restaurant when the collision occurred.

SAYS TRACTION SLUSH FUND WAS USED IN KANSAS CITY

Harry R. Walmsley Alleges Democrats Got $250,000 and Seeks Reed Investigation.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Senator Norris of Nebraska has forwarded to the Reed Campaign Fund Committee of the Senate, a communication from Harry R. Walmsley of Kansas City, asking for an investigation of "common reports" that street railway interests of Kansas City had contributed $250,000 for the Democratic ticket in the last campaign in Missouri.

Copies of Walmsley's charges were received by several other Senators.

Walmsley complained of alleged ballot box frauds, and the use of a corruption fund, but his charges seem to revolve about street gossip growing out of a street railway franchise recently granted in Kansas City. Walmsley alleged that the street railway interests had contributed between $250,000 and $750,000 to the "Democratic machine" in Kansas City, which is popularly supposed to control the municipal government, and which supported the Democratic candidates in the last election as it usually does.

"Characteristic of Mr. Walmsley," Says Senator Reed.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 20.—Senator Reed said today he had no information regarding the charges by Harry R. Walmsley of a Democratic corruption fund in the last campaign.

"Without prejudice," the Senator said, "I regard the story as characteristic of Mr. Walmsley. The idea of such a sum is an absurdity on its face."

The Senator added that if Walmsley would produce evidence that a large sum of money was used and that it had a bearing on the race for Senator, the evidence would be given proper consideration.

Walmsley is a local Republican politician, and was a member of the Legislature more than 20 years ago. Republicans active in the party organization said they had nothing to do with his charges.

Divorced Princess in Factory.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 20.—Princess Sophie Charlotte, who recently obtained a divorce from Prince Eitel Frederick, second son of the ex-Kaiser, has gone to work for a wall paper factory in Hanover. She is in the designing department, and is said to be extremely clever. She draws most of her ideas from her knowledge of military affairs. Riders on horseback in the uniform of Frederick the Great's Hussars are among her novelties. Another design shows a tournament of the Teutonic Knights of the Crusades. The Princess, in turning her talents to advantage, has given new impetus to the feminist movement.

SENATOR MEANS TO ADDRESS VETERANS

Mass Meeting of Spanish War Organizations to Be Held at Jefferson Barracks.

United States Senator Rice W. Means of Colorado, commander-in-chief of the United Spanish War Veterans, will be the speaker this afternoon at a mass meeting of Spanish War organizations at Jefferson Barracks, when Col. Moor N. Falls, commandant at the Barracks, and several of his staff, will be inducted into United Spanish War Veterans' Camp No. 7.

Senator Means arrived in St. Louis last night from Columbia, Mo., where he participated yesterday in the dedication of the Memorial Tower of the University of Missouri. He was escorted by Herman A. Finke, department commander of Missouri of the United Spanish War Veterans, and Robert E. Lee, past commander and national aide on the staff of the commander-in-chief.

The St. Louis camps of the United Spanish War Veterans will assemble at Jefferson Barracks at 1 p. m. and the reception to Senator Means will be at 2 o'clock.

At noon tomorrow the Senator will speak at a luncheon at the City Club, and in the evening will depart for Cleveland, where he will present to Col. Carmi A. Thompson the Past Commander-in-Chief jewel of the veterans' organization.

STRENGTH to do so saved this boy in spite of "little faith"

Mrs. I. R. Gisner of Brightmoor, Michigan, recently declared in a signed statement:

"I believe FATHER JOHN'S MEDICINE saved my boy's life. I wish I could tell every one who has bronchial coughs to try it. Not only has my boy gained weight, but the cough has left him completely."

FATHER JOHN'S MEDICINE, the great tonic-food, puts strength into the system to resist the COUGHS, COLDS, and other ailments of childhood which so often end disastrously. Get it; give your child the same chance. No drugs nor alcohol. Get a bottle from the drug store today.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE PLANS SOUTHERN GOOD WILL TOUR

Party Will Visit Carolinas, Florida, Georgia and Tennessee.

A "good will" tour to Florida and other states in the southeastern portion of the country will be conducted early next year by the Chamber of Commerce. The schedule embraces a portion of the country not perviously visited by a similar delegation from St. Louis.

The delegation will leave St. Louis on a special train on the morning of Jan. 23, going direct to Louisville, Ky., then to Asheville, Black Mountain, Winston-Salem, Greensboro, High Point and Charlotte in North Carolina; Columbia in South Carolina; Augusta, Ga.; St. Augustine, Daytona Beach, Miami, Palm Beach and West Palm Beach, Seabring, Lake Wales, Bartow, St. Petersburg, Sarasota, Bradentown, Tampa, Orlando and Jacksonville in Florida; Macon and Atlanta in Georgia and Chattanooga, Tenn., returning home Sunday, Feb. 6.

WARNS AUTO INDUSTRY TO SOLVE FUEL RIDDLE

W. L. Dempsey Says Gasoline Consumption Will Soon Far Outstrip Production.

The American automobile industry, "with untold millions invested" and with stock having a market value thrice that of physical assets of the companies, is "solely dependent upon a continued supply of suitable fuel," but no organized effort is being made to protect the industry against exhaustion of the supply.

This assertion was made in an address Friday night before local members of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and the Society of Automotive Engineers, at the Engineers' Club, by W. L. Dempsey, a member of these groups and of the Royal Society of Arts, and a consulting engineer.

Failure of the oil fields, he declared, would ruin the automotive industry, which in turn would shake the nation's social, economic and financial structure.

If every automobile now licensed in this country used two gallons of gasoline daily, the aggregate consumption per day would be 40,000,000 gallons, which would call for a crude oil production of 120,000,000 gallons or 3,000,000 barrels, Dempsey said. This is only 500,000 barrels less than the average production of the last year, he added, but the actual daily consumption of gasoline per car now is a gallon and a half. The danger, he pointed out, lies in the increasing demand for this fuel.

Can't Last 10 Years Longer.

"Are we not living in a fool's paradise, which the Government's Board of Conservation says cannot last a decade longer?" he demanded. "Is not the automotive industry as a whole committing the most stupendous crime of all ages and digging its own grave? In the face of declining fuel supplies, when the curve of gasoline consumption has already crossed the curve of production, the industry is still beating its tomtoms and ballyhooing most vociferously to sell more cars, in spite of the fact that there are now more than enough cars in use to transport the entire population of the United States at one time without crowding.

"It is the general opinion of geologists, engineers and economists that the coal supply of the United States is amply sufficient for many generations to come. Quite the contrary opinion is held in regard to the oil supply. A preliminary report recently by the Federal Board of Conservation held that the entire oil supply of the United States, at the present rate of consumption, would probably not last longer than six years, and the hope was expressed that some new method might be discovered to relieve the situation.

"The greatest user and waster of liquid fuel is the automotive industry, which has never been characterized by sound judgment, sanity or business statesmanship."

It is hopeless to think of using grain alcohol as a motor-car fuel, Dempsey declared, pointing out that to supply the machines now licensed with alcohol would require every grain of corn the nation raised, "so that all our days would be meatless and milkless days." Likewise, the speaker declared, shale oil deposits of a few Western States will not meet this fuel demand, as the present fuel consumption is estimated at 25,000,000 gallons a day, which would require the mining of 1,000,000 tons of shale daily.

Calls Electric Power Remote.

Turning to water power, of the nation, Dempsey said this was limited rather than "limitless," and declared that "the dream of driving even a small fraction of automobiles by electric current is not even a remote possibility." The Fords alone now in use, he averred, have eight times the horsepower of all the developed water power in the United States and double the potential water power.

Dempsey took occasion to say a good word for inventors, defending "geniuses of the garret." "What inventors need most," he asserted, "is not great research laboratories, but greater respect, more tolerance and a disposition upon the part of both the Government and the public to encourage and foster inventions and inventors and protect them against practical infringement of their rights."

In all history, only 5,000,000 patents for new and useful ideas have been granted to citizens of the world, the speaker remarked, and 1,500,000 of these went to Americans, while, in comparison, Liberians got only two.

NEEDS 1000 OLD OVERCOATS TO AID MEN OUT OF WORK

Director of Amity Association Says Solicitors Who Use Name of Organization Are Frauds.

J. P. Solven, director of the Amity Association, 310 Market street, who made an appeal last week for donations of castoff clothing for distribution among jobless men, has learned that unauthorized solicitors have been collecting old overcoats in the name of the association.

"The Amity Association does not send out solicitors and the persons who have been collecting clothing from house to house are not connected with our organization," Solven said. As a result of the appeal, made through the press, 300 overcoats were received and distributed through the association last week, according to Solven, who estimates that 1000 additional coats are needed.

Santa's Headquarters

Dear Children:

Ho, Ho, Ho. Back in St. Louis! How fine it is to see so many of my little friends again. Crowds of you came to see me yesterday and told me what you wanted for Christmas. You don't know how much it helps me to know exactly what you want because I am always rushed on Christmas eve and can't stop to ask you then.

Those of you who could not come downtown to see me yesterday are invited to come Monday — or any day this week. I'll be in my Favorite Toy Shop at Vandervoort's until December 25. Ho, ho, ho.

Yours for the jolliest of Christmases,
SANTA CLAUS.

Finds $17,000 in Stolen Securities.

By the Associated Press.

ELGIN, Ill., Nov. 20.—For nearly three months a canvas bag containing $17,000 in securities lay obscured by weeds along a roadside west of here. Yesterday Charles Sadens, farmer, found the bag and and investigation revealed that it had been stolen from the Brodhead (Wis.) bank in a robbery Aug. 27. The robbers, finding the securities to be non-negotiable, are believed to have discarded them in their flight.

Elizabeth Scudder Makes Her Debut At Dinner-Dance

Country Club Is Charmingly Decorated in Smilax and Chrysanthemums With Lights in Yellow Shades

A HARMING simplicity marked the dinner dance honoring Miss Elizabeth Scudder, given by her father, Mr. Scudder, Friday night at the St. Louis Country Club. The walls of the dining room were covered with quantities of smilax in which gleamed lights covered with yellow paper. Inverted umbrella arrangements in the same tone shaded the chandeliers, and painted yellow shades over the lights of the musicians' alcove. The dinner tables, seating about 200, were ferns and orchid chrysanthemums with tapers were interspersed with candelabra. The receiving line stood in the lobby before a background of flowers, and in addition to Miss Scudder and her father, her grandmother, Mrs. Claude Kilpatrick, her aunt, Miss Mary Scudder, and her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene A. Perry, Jr. The debutante wore the white gown in which she served as a special usher at the Veiled Prophet ball. It was cut with a close fitting bodice and skirt embroidered in rhinestones, and with an uneven hem line. She carried white orchids.

Miss Alice Muckerman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Muckerman of 44[illegible] Lindell boulevard, has selected Wednesday, the date of her wedding to Charles Clause II, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Clause, 7[illegible]16 Belt avenue. The ceremony will be at nuptial high mass at 11 a. m. in St. Louis Cathedral and will be followed by a wedding breakfast for the bridal party and reception at the Muckerman home. The prospective bride will have as maid of honor her sister, Miss Gladys Muckerman. Miss Lois Engel, Miss Dorothy Egan, Miss Ruth Krause, sister of the prospective bridegroom and Miss [illegible] of Quincy, Ill., will be bridesmaids.

Debutantes Take Lead in Busy Thanksgiving Week Social Calendar

"Queen Marie" Luncheon for Miss Sally Green, and Dinner Dance for Miss Martha Love.

THE Thanksgiving social calendar this year presents an unusually imposing array of festivities. With the debutante season at its height, affairs for that group will perhaps take precedence and Saturday will find society's ranks depleted because of the Army and Navy football game in Chicago.

Debutante activities the afternoon preceding the holiday will include a Queen Marie luncheon to be given by Mrs. Carl F. G. Meyer at the Coronado Hotel, in honor of Miss Sally Green; a reception to be given by Mrs. H. Chouteau Dyer to introduce her daughter, Miss Clarissa Dyer, with Miss Charlotte Vanderlip of New York assisting; and in the evening the dinner dance at the St. Louis Country Club for Miss Martha Love, the Veiled Prophet Queen. This affair will be the second large one for Miss Love, and will be given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward K. Love.

On Thanksgiving day the debutantes and their escorts will be the guests of Mrs. Jackson Johnson of Portland place at a luncheon, also at the club, for her granddaughter, Miss Marjorie Niedringhaus, and the evening following Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Warrington Baldwin will give a dinner dance for their daughter, Miss Roccena Baldwin, after which many of the guests will depart for Chicago to attend the game.

The second of a series of lectures sponsored by the Junior League will be given tomorrow by George A. Dorsey, author of "Why We Behave Like Human Beings." In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Robert Burkham will have a theater party for Miss Elizabeth Allen; Tuesday, Miss Julia Klipstein will be introduced at a reception at her parents' home in Brentmoor, and a dinner for Miss Jane and Miss Margaret Mahler and a theater party for Miss Peters appear on the engagement books.

MISS SALLY GREEN, the guest of honor.

Mrs. Pierre Chouteau Scott and daughter, Miss Chouteau Scott of the Forest Park Hotel, returned yesterday from a visit of several months in the East. They were accompanied home by Mrs. Scott's sister, Mrs. John K. Erskine of New York.

"A Night in Honolulu" For Miss Sally Green

Oriental Atmosphere Pervades Party Given by Mr. and Mrs. John Leigh Green for Their Daughter — Guests in Costume.

THE outside world, wrapped in a blanket of snow, with a pale moon shining faintly through ice-laden trees, offered striking contrast to the glow from a tropical crescent, the swish of cocoanut palms and the twang of Hawaiian music, an atmosphere in which the debutantes and their escorts found themselves at "A Night in Honolulu," given by Mr. and Mrs. John Leigh Green of 12 Kingsbury place, complimenting their daughter, Miss Sally, at the Coronado Hotel Wednesday night.

The party was given in the ballroom, where the Spanish architecture lent itself admirably to the arrangements. A long balcony draped with shawls at one end of the room, palm trees at various points and pineapples on each table enhanced the illusion of the tropics and gave a perfect setting for the feast, an institution in Honolulu. Leis, tokens of friendship and happiness in Hawaii, made of orange-colored flowers, were provided for each guest, and Miss Green and her sister, Miss Marian, wore similar leis of white carnations.

During the dinner a native orchestra in costume wound in and out among the tables singing Hawaiian ballads to a ukulele accompaniment. The food itself had a native tendency. Fish preceded the dinner and fruits played a prominent part. For dessert there were ices in odd shapes and cocoanut cakes.

The colorful costume worn by the guest of honor depicted the rainbow, which glows frequently in Hawaiian skies. Handkerchief drapery of vari-colored tulle depended from a gold cloth bodice trimmed with flowers. Miss Marian Green represented the moon, in gold and silver brocade, with a crescent of rhinestones attached to her hair by a headdress of ribbons.

Eugene Baker and Miss Roccena Baldwin were the sailor and the sailor's sweetheart, the latter in sweater and short skirt with a sailor's cap and a sign with her title on her back. Tully Tupper created much merriment as a missionary in Prince Albert coat, large hat and Bible; Curry Kirkpatrick, in collegiate trousers 50 inches across the cuffs and bearing a pennant, was the University of Hawaii; Miss Kathleen Ryan and Miss Florence Brooks were Chinese dancing girls, in two-piece costumes of blue satin, heavily embroidered. Miss Ryan wore a jeweled metal headdress brought from Honolulu last summer by Mr. and Mrs. Green.

Miss Anne Coxe was in the severe Mandarin coat of brocaded green and gold worn by the Chinese, with flowers in her hair, and Miss Virginia Hemenway and Miss Edith Peters were pirates in short trousers, gay shirts and pirate boots. Miss June Morgens was an attractive sailor boy in white suit and cap, and Miss Judith Spencer was a native dancing girl in grass-skirted garb. Miss Julia Klipstein was another moon in a black costume and wig much studded with rhinestones, and a new moon perched on one shoulder. Joe Folk wore a grass skirt modestly over his own long gray trousers, and Stafford Lambert was the roustabout in blackened face, derby stuck with matches and dark sweater. Miss Dorothy Maxwell was a harem girl, with draped pantaloons and Oriental veil. Eugene Baker and William Hadley were sailors, and Warren Wagner an officer in the same branch of the service.

The table for the hosts, laid full length at one side of the room, was bedecked with low bowls of gaily colored flowers, and the guests all sat facing the ballroom. At Mr. and Mrs. Green's table were: Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Claggett, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Bemis, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene D. Nims, Mr. and Mrs. Robert

Debut Receptions and Debutantes' Parties Planned

Invitations Issued for Introduction of Miss Clarissa Dyer to Society Wednesday Afternoon.

Invitations have been sent out for the debut reception of Miss Clarissa Dyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Chouteau Dyer of 29 Lenox place, which will be given by Mrs. Dyer Wednesday afternoon. Miss Charlotte Vanderlip of New York, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank A. Vanderlip, will arrive tomorrow and will receive with Miss Dyer. She was a classmate of Miss Dyer at Bryn Mawr College and will be complimented by a dinner which Mr. and Mrs. Dyer will give for her Tuesday evening.

Invitations were received Thursday for a dinner dance in honor of Miss Marjorie Niedringhaus, to be given by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lee I. Niedringhaus of 29 Portland place, at the St. Louis Country Club the evening of Dec. 10.

Miss Margaret and Miss Jane Mahler, debutante daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Frank Mahler of Brentmoor, will be complimented by a theater party Dec. 4, which will be given by Mrs. Carroll Smith of 7200 Creveling avenue. The sisters were presented to society at a reception which their mother gave Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Louis Werner of La Due road will entertain a group of debutantes at a theater party the night of Dec. 1, in honor of Miss Christiana Wygant, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Henry A. Wygant of Harrisburg, Pa., who is the guest of her cousin, Mrs. John O'Fallon Delaney of 5105 Lindell boulevard, and her sister, Mrs. Eugene Potter Curran of the Castleraregh Apartments, University City. A supper dance will follow the theater party.

Mrs. William N. Claggett of 5115 Lindell boulevard will be hostess at a theater party the evening of Nov. 29, complimentary to Miss Ruth McElroy, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Finlay McElroy of 23 Portland place. Miss McElroy also will be the guest of honor at a similar party to be given by her aunt, Mrs. William D. Collins of 5 Hortense place, the night of Dec. 29 when the Princeton Triangle Club will appear at the Odeon.

Mrs. Henry Stuart Butler of 5034 Bartmer avenue gave a luncheon yesterday for Miss Martha Ferguson. The guest list was comprised of young women, former students at Miss Bennett's School at Millbrook, N. Y. The guest of honor also attended Miss Bennett's school. The alumnae from St. Louis include Mrs. Davis D. Walker III, who was Miss Catherine Hall; Mrs. George Gellhorn Jr., who was Miss Barbara Bay; Miss Eugenie Howard, Miss Betty Corby, Miss Jane Thompson, Miss June Morgan and Miss Julia Klipstein. Mrs. Gellhorn is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Mansfield Bay of 6440 Cecil avenue.

Mrs. Richard O. Kennard Jr., of 11 Thorby place, and Mrs. Kennard's mother, Mrs. F. W. Jurden, who makes her home with her daughter, gave a tea Tuesday afternoon for the latter's daughter-in-law, Mrs. Guy E. Jurden, a recent bride. Receiving with the hostesses and the guest of honor was Mrs. Alfred Ritter of Washington, Mo., sister of the bride, who was Mrs. Kennard's guest last week. Mrs. Foster Holmes and Miss Patty Woodson had charge of the tea table. About 75 guests called. Mr. and Mrs. Jurden who have been making their home at the Forest Park Hotel, will take possession of their apartment on Cates avenue, between Goodfellow and Hamilton avenues, in January.

Mrs. Henry McLure Young of 5451 Cabanne avenue was hostess at a tea last Sunday afternoon in compliment to her sister-in-law, Mrs. John Meston Holmes, a bride of the early summer, and Miss Nan Taussig, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Primm Taussig, who passed the summer in Europe with Miss Janet Holmes, a sister of Mrs. Young. Miss Laura Jamison and Miss Janet Holmes served and about 100 guests called between 5 and 7 o'clock.

have a box for the Princeton Triangle Club play Dec. 29 for their daughter, Miss Susie Singleton, who will make her debut this season.

Dr. and Mrs. Dalton K. Rose of 240 Linden avenue, Clayton, gave an informal dinner Wednesday evening.

Mrs. L. E. Sherman of 4202 Lindell boulevard was hostess at a bridge luncheon yesterday, complimenting her guest, Mrs. William E. Day of Kansas City. There were five tables for cards.

The Art Alliance of St. Louis has sent out cards for a reception at the William K. Bixby Hall of Fine Arts, Washington University, Skinker road and Forsythe boulevard, Saturday evening, Nov. 27, at 8 o'clock.

The St. Louis Chapter, Daughters of the American Colonists, will hold a reception the afternoon of Dec. 2 at Jefferson Memorial for the State Regent, Mrs. Edward Schaaf of St. Marys Mo., who will come to St. Louis to visit the chapter. In the receiving line will be regents of all the colonial societies which include the Daughters of the American Revolution, the First Families of Virginia, the House of Burgesses, United Daughters of the Confederacy and others. Invitations for the reception will be sent out this week.

Cards have been issued by the St. Louis Woman's Club for a reception Friday afternoon, Nov. 26,

Mr. and Mrs. William H. McClung of 6660 Washington avenue, have announced the marriage of their daughter, Miss Ethel Alice, to Harold Church Kranenberg of Chicago. Mr. Kranenberg is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Kranenberg of Grand Rapids, Mich., and is a graduate of the University of Michigan. Mrs. Kranenberg attended Washington University. They will make their home at 6244 Winthrop avenue, Chicago.

A wedding of interest to friends in St. Louis took place Wednesday, Nov. 10, at Cheyenne, Wyo., when Mrs. Sybella Zucker Dinneen of that city became the bride of Capt. Thuriby Morgan Rundel, 13th U. S. A. Cavalry, Fort D. A. Russell, Wyoming.

The ceremony was performed in the First Congregational Church, by the Rev. John C. Blackman, the pastor. The attendants were cousins of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. James M. Garrett. The bride wore a gown of brown georgette with trimmings of velvet of corresponding color, and a small brown hat.

Captain Rundel is in command of Troop C, 13th Cavalry, the Black Horse Troop, famed for its drills. Shortly after the ceremony the bridal party motored to Denver. Capt. and Mrs. Rundel then departed for St. Louis where a fortnight's honeymoon will be spent as guests of Mrs. Rundel's parents, Mr. and Mrs. David I. Zucker, 513 East Lockwood, Webster Groves. They will return to Fort Russell Dec. 5, where they will be at home to friends in quarters 88, 13th Cavalry Circle.

Institute to Have Two-Day Exhibit

There will be an exhibit and sale of peasant arts and crafts at the International Institute, 3231 Washington boulevard, from 3 to 6 p. m., Dec. 3 and 4.

Unusual articles of wearing apparel, beautiful laces, pottery, vases, ornaments and bric-a-brac typical of various countries of Europe and Asia will be displayed. There will be music, and refreshments will be served by women in native costumes. Hand-woven linens, embroideries, brasses and some articles imported from Poland and the Orient will be on sale. Mrs. O. P. J. Falk, Mrs. C. L. Russell and Miss Eleanor Wood, who are in charge, will be assisted by members of the Junior League and St. Louis alumnae of the Bennett School in New York, among whom will be Mrs. Briggs Hoffman, Mrs. Fred Niedringhaus, Miss Dorothy Brown, Mrs. D. D. Walker III, Mrs. Lynn Gratiot and Mrs. Robert O. Bonnell.

The Institute recently moved to its present quarters and the members of the board have been making curtains and pillow covers and upholstering furniture for the clubrooms. The exhibit will take the place of a housewarming and will be open to the public.

Military Ball To Be Colorful

The formal banquet and ball which officers of the 451st Infantry will give Dec. 4 at Hotel Chase, honoring Col. O. W. Bell, who recently assumed duties as Chief of Staff of the 102d Division, and Carl F. G. Meyer, civilian aide to the Secretary of War, will be a colorful spectacle and one of the most elaborate military social events held in St. Louis in several years.

Invitations have been sent to Major General Harry A. Smith, Washington, General Staff, and president of the Infantry Association, who is well known to officers of the regiment, and to Brigadier-General Edward L. King, commandant of the General Staff and Command School at Fort Leavenworth, a guest at the regiment's formal dinner given last summer at the Officers' Golf Club at Fort Leavenworth. Brigadier-General Frank M. Rumbold, Adjutant-General of Missouri, is expected to attend.

Color will be lent by the presence not only of Regular Army and Marine Corps officers but by the presence of the Navy and Naval Reserve officers as well as members of the British Officers' Mess, which comprises former British Army officers residing in St. Louis. Washington University will be represented by active and alumni members of Scabbard and Blade, national military fraternity. Alumni representing chapters at Missouri, Oklahoma, Wisconsin and Washington universities are found among the members of th 451st.

An entertainment program will be interspersed between dance numbers.

Invitations have been accepted by Col. Moor N. Falls, commanding Jefferson Barracks; Lieutenant-Colonel John A. Paegelow, commanding Scott Field, and Lieutenant-Colonel William H. Clendenin, retiring Chief of Staff of the 102d Division. Regiments of the division have been invited to include enlarged models of their distinctive regimental insignia in the decoration scheme.

Mrs. C. Henry Miller of Sherwood drive was hostess for her bridge club at a luncheon Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 16.

Goodwill Industry Auxiliary Formed

An auxiliary to the Goodwill Industries was organized at an enthusiastic meeting at the Missouri Hotel Friday by 85 women prominent in the social and civic life of St. Louis.

The object of the new organization is to sponsor the Goodwill Industries nursery at Thirteenth and Tyler streets.

The officers elected are Mrs. E. A. Kieselhorst, president; Mrs. I. W. Adair, first vice president; Mrs. R. C. Frampton, second vice president; Mrs. Fred Johnson, third vice president; Mrs. Rosemond Hell, fourth vice president; Mrs. Howard Dudley, recording secretary; Mrs. C. Justin Myers, corresponding secretary and Mrs. Albert Maull, treasurer.

Talks were made by Mrs. Robert Fox, president of the Board of Religious Organizations, Mrs. Norman Windsor, president of the Child's Conservation Conference; Mrs. F. H. Littlefield, president of the Eighth District Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs and Mrs. I. W. Adair of the Goodwill Industries. A short program was given by a number of the children from the Goodwill nursery and a group of songs sung by Miss Elizabeth Turner Fox of the Morning Choral Club with Mrs. Charles H. Elliott at the piano. A luncheon preceded the business meeting and program.

Many Boxes Sold for "The Giant Killer"

MUCH interest is being taken in "The Giant Killer," the Centennial Mission pageant to be presented at the Odeon the week of Nov. 28.

Heading the list of box holders for opening night is Archbishop John J. Glennon, who made the request last spring that the pageant be written and presented as the contribution of the Catholic students of the city to the centennial of the founding of the diocese of St. Louis.

Large groups of the alumnae and friends of various schools have taken entire sections of boxes. Maryville College of the Sacred Heart has engaged most of those for the opening night. The students and friends of St. Louis University High School have taken the night of Wednesday, Dec. 1, and the friends and alumnae of Visitation Academy are arranging to occupy the boxes the evening of Friday, Dec. 3. Fontbonne College, Webster College, Loretto Academy and practically all of the Catholic institutions of higher learning in the city have numerous boxholders among their friends and former students.

Directing the work of the Central Patroness Committee, as graduate advisers and veteran members are Miss Josephine Bates and Miss Josephine Brinckwirth. The girls of Visitation Academy form the Central Committee, composed of Miss Mary Hayes, Miss Helen Breck, Miss Margaret Skinner and Miss Josephine Flanigan. Other members in the various schools represented are Miss Marie Louise Scott and Miss Hortense Doyle of Maryville College; Miss Mary Powers and Miss Theo Fehlig of Webster College and Miss Agnes Reilly and Miss Alice Igoe of Fontbonne College.

Among the boxholders and patrons of "The Giant Killer," are: Archbishop John J. Glennon, Mrs. Paul Bakewell, Mrs. Howard Benoist, Miss Eugenia Chouteau, Mrs. Seth W. Cobb, Mrs. E. J. Costigan, Mrs. A. J. Donnelly, Mrs. C. Lumaghi Drew, Mrs. F. A. Garesche, Mrs. A. P. Ghio, Mrs. Sol H. Gross, Mrs. J. L. Hemp, Mrs. L. S. Hornsby, Mrs. H. B. Huette, Mrs. J. M. Janis, Mrs. E. M. Jennings, Miss Emilie Maffitt, Mrs. B. O. Mahaffey, Mrs. M. C. Murnane, Mrs. Amedee V. Reyburn, Mrs. M. H. Rosenbaum, Mrs. Ellsworth Smith, Mrs. Charles P. Stanley, Mrs. F. M. Switzer, Mrs. John C. Tobin, Mrs. Vol C. Turner, Mrs. E. P. Boll, Mrs. E. H. Wagner, Mrs. P. W. Warner, Mrs. Rolla Wells, Mrs. George W. Wilson Jr.

24-Hour Service on Repairing Silk Hosiery

GRAND-LEADER

Monday is the Day—at 9 o'clock our November Sale of Apparel opens with a marvelous assemblage of special values in Coats, Frocks and Furs of authentic styling. Year by year our November Sale becomes more firmly established as a buying occasion—and in this event the values confirm the traditions of the sale. Many distinctive garments have been specially purchased—others from our own stocks are grouped at prices decisively low.

NOVEMBER SALE OF APPAREL

FUR COATS

Values Are Exceptional in Each Group

$135 — Serviceable Coats of Russian Foal, kid giraffe, marmot, seal-dyed coney combined with contrasting furs, and of caracul paws in platinum and cocoa. Many youthful types for misses included.

$185 — A wide choice of fur Coats including smart novelties of kid caracul, kid leopard, chevette, antelope, caracul, and many Coats of muskrat with self trimming or in combination with harmonizing furs.

COATS

Misses' and Women's Fur-Trimmed Models

$68 $95

Coats that reflect the most recent style tendencies—Coats as remarkable in value as in style-rightness. The rich suede-like and high-pile fabrics of the season are shown in models designed for women of large and small stature, and for the miss who wears a size 14, 16 or 18. Straight silhouettes, slight bloused lines, deeper sleeves, upstanding collars, shawl collars, cuffs of fur.

Such unusual Coat values are too important to overlook when they come this early in the season. Coats specially purchased have been grouped with smart models from our regular selections to offer a wide choice and a maximum of value. These are the styles that will be worn by fashionable women and misses—they feature smart fur trimming in becoming collars and sleeve decorations.

Women's Coats of Smart Individuality

The desire for a Coat of true distinction may be gratified with economy from this November Sale group — for these Coats have been selected with discrimination for their style and for their value. Each is a style that will give grace and distinction to the woman who chooses it.

$115

The all-black Coat, the dark Coat with light fur, the light Coat with darker fur, are important styles included at this price. Coats that wrap snugly about the hips, Coats slightly or frankly bloused, Coats with flattering collars, deep cuffs, reveres, and partial borders of fur.

Misses' Sizes 14, 16, 18. Women's Sizes 36 to 44 and Sizes for the Larger and Taller Women, 42½ to 50½.

DRESSES

Correct Midseason Modes for All Occasions

$18 $28

Women's and Misses' Frocks

Youthful modes for miss 14-to-18, and Frocks of sophisticated smartness for madame—an assemblage of the most accepted daytime styles for business, street, afternoon and evening. The fabrics and the colors are smart and new—light and dark shades in Georgette, silk crepe, velvet brocade, crepe satin, Frisca, cloth, jersey, and combinations of materials. Women's Frocks include regular and large sizes 34 to 50½.

(Women's Dress Section and Misses' Store, Third Floor.)

Women's and Misses' Frocks

In the Costume Salon—an excellent choice of afternoon Frocks in Georgette, velvet, and crepe satin, giving prominence to the rich colors of the season. In the Misses' Store Frocks are charming hand-drawn Frocks of crepe de chine in exquisite pastel colors; other Frocks of Georgette, Romaine, velvet combinations and satin crepe—one and two piece in effect, with touches of sleeve embroidery, and brilliant rhinestone pins and buckles.

(Costume Salon and Misses' Store, Third Floor.)

Three Groups of Frocks in the Costume Salon

$33 $48 $58

For street, for afternoon wear, madame finds it a pleasant economy to choose from this group of new Frocks of Georgette, satin, and the so-fashionable Canton crepe. Willow green, soft biege, red, and black are favored among the colors.

The tailored street Dress, the afternoon Frock of velvet, Georgette or satin, and the Frock for informal evening wear are included in this group—as well as evening Frocks of more formal type. Each is a new mode—each is smart and charming.

An opportnity to add to one's wardrobe a Frock of individual chic, at a saving! Madame may choose a tailored cloth Frock, an afternoon Frock of Velvet, Canton crepe or satin, or an evening Frock of velvet, lace or Georgette.

Jefferson Barracks

Col. and Mrs. Moor N. Falls will give a dinner at their headquarters at Jefferson Barracks Wednesday night, before the officers' dance at the Red Cross House, for the field officers of the post and their wives, Maj. and Mrs. Charles T. Smart, Maj. and Mrs. Chester Cordwell Staples and Maj. and Mrs. Charles A. Ross.

The Jefferson Barracks Post Entertainment Committee has selected the following dates for officers' dances: Nov. 24, Dec. 31, Jan. 21 and Feb. 21. These dances will be held at the Red Cross Hostess House and a special committee on arrangements will be selected for each dance.

Lieut. Daniel H. Hundley gave a bridge dinner at his quarters in Jefferson Barracks for a few friends Tuesday evening in honor of Miss Ora Weser of Chicago, Ill., who is visiting Mrs. B. S. Spencer in St. Louis. The guests were Miss Mae Smart, Miss Elizabeth Hubbell, Miss Judith Spencer, Lieut. William G. Stephenson, Lieut. Gustin N. Nelson and Lieut. Hamer P. Ford.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Schoen of Darlington, Ind., are visiting Mrs. Schoen's parents, Capt. and Mrs. Martin B. Dunbar of the Quartermaster Corps at Jefferson Barracks.

Maj. and Mrs. E. W. McCaskey of Collingswood, N. J., have been visiting their son, Capt. E. W. McCaskey Jr., at Jefferson Barracks. They left last Monday night to visit another son, Lieut. Donald D. McCaskey, at Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

Capt. and Mrs. Clement J. Gaynor entertained Congressman and Mrs. L. C. Dyer at dinner in their quarters in Jefferson Barracks on last Thursday evening. The other guests were Miss Mae Smart and Mr. C. A. Newcome Jr. Congressman and Mrs. Dyer left yesterday for Washington, D. C.

Capt. and Mrs. Robert G. Cousley will give a buffet supper at their quarters before the officer's hop in Jefferson Barracks on next Wednesday evening. The guests will be Capt. and Mrs. Clement J. Gaynor, Capt. and Mrs. Thomas S. Sinkler Jr., Capt. and Mrs. Frank E. Brokaw, Capt. and Mrs. Nathan M. Neate, Capt. Ralph Slate, Mrs. Charles J. Goodfellow, Lieut. and Mrs. John S. Miller and Lieut. and Mrs. William S. Wood.

Mrs. Charles J. Goodfellow gave a birthday surprise bridge supper for her daughter, Mrs. John S. Miller, wife of Lieut. Miller at Jefferson Barracks Friday night. The guests were Maj. and Mrs. Charles T. Smart, Maj. and Mrs. Charles A. Ross, Maj. and Mrs. Chester Cordwell Staples, Capt. and Mrs. Thomas S. Sinkler Jr., Capt. and Mrs. Frank W. Romaine, Capt. and Mrs. Nathan M. Neate and Lieut. and Mrs. George J. Engelthaler from the post, and Mrs. Jean Herring and Mr. Parker Woods from St. Louis. The quarters were attractively decorated with yellow chrysanthemums.

Mrs. Auguste R. Taylor, wife of Lieut. Taylor of Jefferson Barracks, has arrived at the post. Mrs. Taylor has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Taylor, in Louisville, Ky., for the past four months since their return from foreign duty in the Hawaiian Department.

Parent-Teacher Booth At Women's Exposition

THE St. Louis Council of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers has taken a section at the coming Women's Exposition at the Coliseum for the purpose of presenting a pre-school age health contest, as the council's contribution to the child welfare work of the city and county.

Mrs. F. A. Fuller, president of the council, is chairman of the general arrangements committee for the demonstration. Mrs. E. P. Walsh, Mrs. James L. Cook, Mrs. Myrt A. Rollins and Mrs. George H. Sutter are other members of the arrangements committee.

The council will have the co-operation of Dr. Max A. Starkloff, head of the St. Louis Health Department and of firms interested in child welfare work.

The ticket sale for the council will be directed by Mrs. George Eigel, assisted by Mrs. Louis Huberle and Mrs. M. Duncan. Mrs. A. L. Stone will be head of the publicity department and Mrs. Julius Kung of the speaker's bureau.

Capital Society Calendar Upset By Queen Marie

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—The change in the plans of Queen Marie of Rumania, which canceled a second visit to Washington, altered the social program for this week in the national capital considerably. A number of private and public social events had been planned in her honor, including receptions by the Daughters of the American Revolution, the American Red Cross and the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

The private affairs planned included a brilliant dinner by Mrs. Marshall Field and a reception at the Rumanian legation. A number of parties also had been arranged by the younger set for Prince Nicolas and Princess Ileana. All had to be abandoned at a moment's notice.

Thanksgiving day will be spent by the President and Mrs. Coolidge at the White House, and they will have with them only Mr. and Mrs. Frank Stearns of Boston, their house guests.

The others of the Cabinet also will have family dinner parties. Vice President and Mrs. Dawes expect to be in Washington by Thanksgiving.

Last week Col. George Harvey, former American Ambassador to Great Britain, was a guest at the White House, as was Senator William M. Butler of Massachusetts.

Another group of interesting visitors have been the Italian aviators who came here to attend the Schneider cup races at Hampton Roads. The Italian Ambassador and Mme. de Martino entertained at a reception for them on Wednesday.

There were several weddings this week. One was that of a niece of Mrs. William Howard Taft, Miss Patricia Andrews Herron, daughter of Mrs. William C. Herron and the late Mr. Herron and Joseph Lancaster Brent, son of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan K. Brent of Baltimore, which took place on Thursday at the Bethlehem chapel of the Washington Cathedral. A reception followed the ceremony at the home of Chief Justice and Mrs. Taft.

Another wedding of interest to the social group here was that of Miss Beatrice McLean, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Ridley McLean, to L. T. Charles Godwin Moore Jr., U. S. N., of Littleton, N. C., which also took place on Thursday.

Much interest also was shown in the marriage of Miss Elisabeth Ferry Coonley, daughter of Mrs. Avery Coonley, to Waldron Faulkner of New York. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Ezra Squier Tipple, president of the Drew Theological Seminary of Madison, N. J.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, widow of the late President, has as her house guest Miss Margaret Woodrow Wilson, eldest daughter of President Wilson. Miss Wilson will spend a fortnight here after which she will return to her home in New York City.

A large contingent from Washington officialdom will go to Chicago for the Army-Navy football game. Secretary of War Dwight Davis will head the group of Generals who are going. Secretary of the Navy Curtis D. Wilbur also has arranged a box party for the Navy side, and his guests will include Speaker of the House and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth.

Mrs. James A. Reed assisted Mrs. Ashburn, wife of Gen. T. Q. Ashburn, at the debutante tea of Miss Muriel Bliss, Mrs. Ashburn's niece, given in the officers' quarters of Washington Barracks on Monday.

Mrs. Thornton Boland will entertain at luncheon Dec. 10 in honor of Miss Adelaide Douglas and Miss Eleanor Hodges. The two honor guests are debutantes. Miss Hodges is a cousin of Mrs. Boland and lives in Baltimore. Mrs. Boland was among those entertaining at the Congressional Country Club at luncheon last week.

The Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, Charles S. Dewey, who has been in St. Louis, has now returned to Washington.

Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins was among those who entertained guests at the card party for the benefit of the Washington Juvenile Protective Association.

Mrs. John B. Henderson entertained at dinner on Tuesday evening in honor of the Duchess of Hamilton, Lady Margaret Hamilton and Miss Lind of Hageby. The other guests were the former Ambassador from Spain and Madame Riano; Senator and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, Senator and Mrs. Robert B. Howell, Mr. and Mrs. James Beck, Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Laughlin, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mondell, Col. and Mrs. Arthur O'Brien, Mrs. McCormick Goddhart, Mrs. Stephan B. Elkins, Mrs. James Carroll Frazer, Mrs. Sidney Cloman, Dr. C. Ernest Smith, Gen. George O. Squire, Hamilton McCormick Goodhard and Alexander Kirk.

Secretary of War Dwight Davis was among the officials and diplomats invited to meet the Italian aviators at the luncheon given in their honor by the Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg. Secretary Davis also was the ranking guest at the dinner given Tuesday night by Major-General and Mrs. Edgar Jadwin.

Mrs. James Carson Breckenridge, wife of Col. Breckenridge of the United States Marine Corps, who is spending the fall with her mother at Summit Point, W. Va., entertained a house party from Washington over the week-end.

Webster Groves

Mr. and Mrs. Percy Ludlow, with Miss Margaret Ludlow, are spending the week-end at Columbia, Mo., attending the "homecoming" at Missouri University.

Mrs. Woodson Barnhart of 411 Woodlawn avenue entertained Friday afternoon, Nov. 19, with a bridge luncheon.

Miss Ruth and Miss Betty Brigham, accompanied by their brother, Lucian Brigham, spent the past week-end at Columbia, Mo., where on Saturday they attended the Missouri-Washington football game.

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Turner of 156 Gray avenue have returned from Columbia, where they spent several days.

Miss Elizabeth Cook of 45 Mason avenue entertained the members of her high school club Friday evening.

Mrs. R. King Kauffman of Oakwood avenue has returned from a short stay in Chicago, where Mr. Kauffman is now located in business. Mrs. Kauffman and the other members of the family will depart early in the New Year to join Mr. Kauffman and make Chicago their future home.

Mrs. C. H. Schlapp of 26 Algonquin lane departed Nov. 14 for a visit with relatives in the East.

Mrs. W. F. Koken of South Jefferson road has gone to New York, where she will spend a few weeks and also visit her daughter, Miss Ellen Koken, who is a student at Tarrytown on the Hudson.

Mrs. L. W. Lacy of Glen road has gone to East Orange, N. J., where she will be the guest of her daughter.

Miss Dorothy Goggin is attending the homecoming of Missouri State University at Columbia this week-end.

Mrs. J. H. Trembley of Swon avenue has returned from New York, where she was the guest of relatives for several weeks.

Mrs. Edwin S. Healey of Maplewood, entertained the bridge club of which she is a member Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 17.

Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Knight of Evanston, Ill., were the guests of Mrs. James L. Sloss of South Rock Hill road for several days this week.

The regular meeting of the Lockwood P. T. A., will be held Tuesday, Nov. 23, at 8 p. m. Prof. Hay of the Junior High School, will be the principal speaker of the evening, his subject being: "Plans for Work in Junior High This Year."

The marriage of Miss Dorothy Becht, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Becht of 34 Oak terrace, to Mr. Kenneth Church of University City, took place last evening at the First Congregational Church, with Dr. Dwight M. Bradley, officiating. Miss Adele Pendergast was the maid of honor with Miss Josephine Newsome, Miss Genevieve Carraher, and Miss Florence Pauly, as bridesmaids. Little Patricia McGuire, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. McGuire, of Oakwood avenue was the flower girl. Mr. Church had as his best man his brother, Harrison Church. The groomsmen were Mr. Allen McMahan and Mr. Stephen Boggiano, and Byron Rust of Indianapolis. A reception at the home of the bride's parents followed the ceremony after which Mr. and Mrs. Church departed for a wedding trip through the East.

Several students from Webster College are among the participants in the pageant, "The Giant-Killer," written by Rev. Daniel A. Lord, and which is to be presented at the Odeon the week of Nov. 28, by the students of Catholic Colleges and Schools. Miss Dolores Gillon of Clinton, Ill., who is a student at Webster College, has been given the leading feminine role. Miss Genevieve Barth, Miss Juanita Abell, Miss Thelma Coyne, Miss Theresa Shea, Miss Rosalie Siefert, Margaret Peters, Miss Edith Gossmeyer, Miss Agnes O'Connor, have speaking parts. Twenty-five girls from Nerinx High School, will be among the "Flower Girls." A Union Thanksgiving Service will be held in the Presbyterian Church, Thursday morning at 10:30 o'clock. Dr. David M. Skilling will preach the sermon, and the remainder of the service will be participated in by the clergy of the other churches. Mr. Alfred Lee Booth, the organist, will give an organ recital preceding the services.

Quite a number of children from the Missouri Baptist Orphans' Home, at Pattonville, were the guests at the Webster Groves Baptist Church last Sunday morning. After the services the children were taken to the Community Hall and served with a chicken dinner and a short program. The Camp-Fire Girls assisted in entertaining the small children.

F. R. Jesse and his daughter, Miss Katherine Jesse, went up to Columbia, Mo., Friday, to attend the homecoming at Missouri University.

Miss Grace Maybury of South Gore avenue gave a bridge tea Thursday afternoon for Miss Dorothy Becht, whose marriage to Kenneth Church was an event of last evening, Nov. 20.

Mrs. R. E. Flint of Spring road was hostess for the Friday Club, Nov. 19. During the luncheon a discussion of Charles Dickens' "Tale of Two Cities" was enjoyed. The next meeting of the club will be Friday, Dec. 3, at the home of Mrs. C. O. Smith, 720 Fairview avenue. Dr. George R. Dodson will give a talk on "Patriotism Up to Date."

Judge and Mrs. Sam D. Hodgdon have gone to Jacksonville, Fla., where they will be the guests

Sale of Original Paintings

By Old and Modern Artists

An interesting collection of original Paintings and Etchings that will appeal to lovers of the beautiful. Bits of Old-World beauty—exquisite canvases that have become mellow with age—or interesting studies of life as it is today executed by modern artists were individually selected by our personal representatives and are offered to you at very attractive prices.

Attractive in treatment and subjects is this extensive group of paintings on which the artist has convincingly depicted the mellow tints of rustic landscape, the quaint charm of European peasants, the gorgeous splendor of a scene at court, and many other fascinating studies, all done in charming manner.

Wrinkles Vanish Before Your Very Eyes!

Do you believe it possible to literally erase your wrinkles, crows-feet and age lines? Just try this simple experiment: Mix a spoonful of powdered tarkroot with a spoonful of lemon juice, wet your face with this soothing emulsion—and observe in your mirror the most remarkable phenomenon you have ever beheld. Lines, furrows and sags actually disappear before your very eyes—in less than 15 minutes! And this astonishing result is accomplished without the least harm. The treatment, on the other hand, is altogether beneficial to skin and complexion. The effect is not at all like that produced by any cosmetic, enamel or make-up—in fact, the tarkroot mixture is to be removed from the face, leaving nothing artificial.

No one can really appreciate the wonderful rejuvenating effect of powdered tarkroot, used as directed, without procuring an original package from the druggist and trying it. Tarkroot quickly erases wrinkles. Improves facial contour.

LOOK YOUNG AGAIN

A valuable asset to man or woman. Have your Face Lifted. Eye Bags, Wrinkles, Crow's Feet and Double Chin removed. Imperfect Noses, Prominent Ears quickly corrected. Scars, Moles, Warts, all blemishes removed. No pain or danger. Charges reasonable.

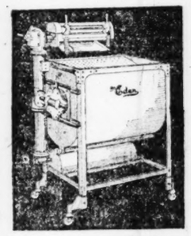
Magnificent New Union Electric Retail Store

Now More Than Ever The Logical Place To Buy Electrical Home Labor Savers



The EDEN WASHER

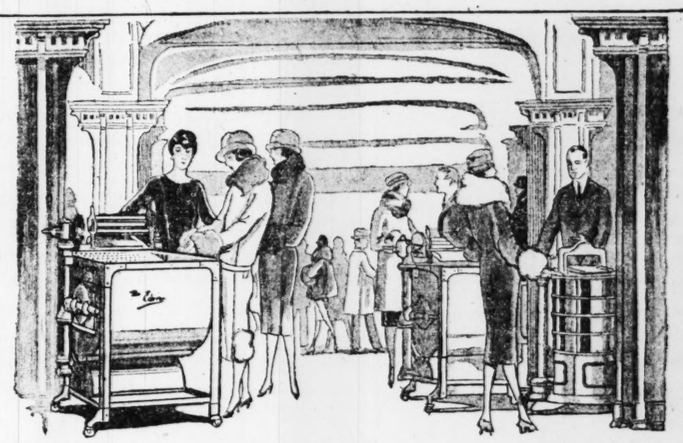
Playing a prominent role in electrifying the daily routine of the home you will see this new de Luxe Eden Washer.

Edens are well and favorably known in more than 55,000 St. Louis homes today, by far in the majority which use modern washers.

WHIRLPOOL WASHER

The Whirlpool Washer has taken a prominent position in national favor in the short space of a year.

Whirlpool Washers are noted for their great washing speed and their simplicity—two prime requisites in Washers of today.



St. Louis' New Department Store of Things Electrical

Every St. Louisan who likes to see evidence of the spirit of progress in our great city should pay a visit this week to the Union Electric Light and Power Co's new store at Twelfth and Locust. Your visit will be well repaid, for you will see the most complete and pleasing display of electrical merchandise ever shown in this city.

When you go, make a mental note to see the actual demonstrations of the following home labor savers, which are undisputed leaders in their fields:

EDEN WASHERS
WHIRLPOOL WASHERS
SIMPLEX IRONERS
UTENCO IRONERS

These are Washers and Ironers which the Union Electric Light and Power Co. recognize as worthy of their new home. To supply this great institution with all of the washers and ironers they sell is an honor of which we are justly proud.

SIMPLEX IRONER

Years and years of faithful service in thousands of homes have given the Simplex a standing which has never been approached by other ironers.

You will see, in the new Union Electric Store, several Simplex models, each one designed for its particular field of ironing in the home.

UTENCO IRONER

Another electrical labor saver which has distinct appeal for its application of the age old principle of ironing in a new and different way.

Personal preferences lead in different directions, so your selection of an ironer is made easier by the demonstration of two proven principles.

Activities of Women's Clubs And Societies

The Executive Board of the Eighth District, Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs, met at Town Club Wednesday, with the President, Mrs. F. H. Littlefield, presiding.

The federation is co-operating with other organizations in civic and philanthropic work, and Mrs. U. S. Coudy, first vice president, reported several meetings sponsoring such activities. Mrs. Fred Johnson reported there are crippled children in the State waiting to be brought to the city for surgical treatment as soon as arrangements can be made. Chairmen from the Federated Clubs and responsive physicians are selecting and preparing eligible children to be treated in St. Louis and Kansas City, the railroads having agreed to provide free transportation.

The board indorsed the principle of jury service for women, and also voted to prepare a bill to be presented to the Legislature asking that the State care for dependent crippled children as an economic measure.

Mrs. Littlefield will represent the federation on the Civic Union organization and has also been invited to speak before the Woman's Club at Nashville, Ill.

The literature section is giving books to the traveling library. The Legislative Committee is studying measures indorsed by the General Federation, the Americanization Committee is analyzing the immigration problem and the education department is making a study of the public school system.

Mrs. Robert Erwin, second vice president, reported contributions to the General Federation endowment fund and Mrs. W. P. Erhart gave a report of the continued interest in and growth of the Phoebe J. Ess scholarship loan fund. Mrs. Erhart was reappointed custodian of the fund at the State biennial.

Miss Alvis Long, who was appointed State chairman of international relations, spoke of her recent stay at Geneva, and Mrs. Frederick Hall, art chairman, announced a "Study of American Artists" for the next meeting which will be held at the Artists' Guild.

Mrs. Theo. Koers, chairman of the Smoke Abatement Committee of the Woman's Chamber of Commerce, was given a reception by members of her committee at the home of Mrs. J. F. Hickey, 3547 Wyoming street, Tuesday. The guest of honor was presented with a platinum friendship circle from the committee. A special meeting of the Smoke Abatement Committee will be held Nov. 23 at 2 p. m. at the Missouri Hotel to elect an assistant chairman.

The regular meeting of the Study Hour Club of Kirkwood was held Nov. 9 at the home of Mrs. E. W. Clausen, 225 Blackmer place, Webster Groves. Mrs. E. W. Peabody was the assistant hostess. Mrs. Paul Shortridge spoke on Oriental rugs. An original poem on the same subject was read by Mrs. Otis Turner. The next meeting will be Tuesday and will be followed by a Thanksgiving tea for the Old Folks' Home at Kirkwood.

The regular meeting of the Pioneers was held Friday at the Temple Israel's House Next Door. Mrs. Lizzie Drey was hostess. The subject was "Child Psychology." A paper on Ellen Key's "Century of the Child" was read by Mrs. Joseph Batt. Miss Bessie Wolfner read a paper on "Our Enemy the Child."

The Ladies' Aid Society of the First Congregational Church will hold a Christmas bazaar at the Gatesworth Hotel Tuesday from 1 a. m. to 5 p. m.

The Library Committee of the Town Club will have a library tea from 3 p. m. to 5 p. m. Sunday, Nov. 21, in the lounge of the club. Mrs. Gertrude G. Drury will give an informal book review, and Miss Olivia Marting will sing.

The chairman, Miss Lucy Rosebaugh, and her committee will serve tea, assisted by the following members of the hospitality group: Miss Genevieve Albers, Miss Laura A. Bird, Miss Virginia Carrico, Miss Mary Gibson, Miss Irene Lowe, Miss Myrtle Mason, Miss Ruth Norris, Miss Alma Robb, Miss Madge Robb, Misses Helen and Cecilia Rowan and Mrs. Ruth Crane Davis.

The first of a series of Parent-Teacher association meetings was held Wednesday afternoon at Homer Hall, when a book section was organized. A "Save for Travel" plan recommended by the Executive Committee was accepted. An allowance plan for the students is under consideration also. Dr. Adrien Bleyer, the school physician, spoke at the meeting.

The Catholic Women's League met Friday at the Holy Redeemer School Hall. Mrs. Robert P. Roos read a paper on "The Mexican Situation." The meetings of the league take place the second and fourth Friday of each month.

An entertainment and dance under the auspices of the child welfare department of the Woman's Chamber of Commerce will be given at Strassberger's Hall Grand and Shenandoah avenues, Saturday, Nov. 27, at 8:15 p. m. The entertainment, "Deacon Dubbs," will be presented by the Protected Home Dramatic Club.

The Woman's Chamber of Commerce is observing an at home day each Thursday at headquarters in the City Club Building, with Mrs. Adolphe Neuville, the president, in charge. The Ways and Means Committee of the Woman's Chamber of Commerce held a bridge luncheon at the Missouri Hotel Thursday.

The Earnest Endeavor Club met at Town Club Monday, the president, Mrs. Gordon Z. Davis, being in charge. The Earnest Endeavor is a study club, but has representatives on all district committees, and also always has some particular objective for its philanthropic work. Just now it is contributing to the loan scholarship fund and the crippled children's work.

The Tuesday Literary Club met at the Artists' Guild Tuesday, Mrs. Quincy Slocumb, president, presiding. The subject was "The Means for Acquiring Peace" and Mrs. H. H. Muchall gave a report on the peace conference to which she was a delegate at Washington, D. C. Mrs. W. L. Nelson gave a summary of a talk which was given by Andrew C. Maroney and the discussion which followed. The talk was on "The Causes and Cures of War." Mrs. Roy Butts and her daughter sang a group of patriotic songs and Mrs. William Badger and Mrs. W. P. Nelson served at the tea table.

The Ensee Study Club recently observed "Guest day" at the Town Club with Mrs. Fred Armstrong as hostess. The club will be entertained tomorrow at 2 p. m. by the Pevely Dairy Co. at its plant, Grand boulevard and Chouteau avenue.

The Rubinstein Musical Club met last night at the home of Miss Louise Biedenstein in Normandy. A program of St. Louis composers was given. Junior and juvenile clubs have been organized with 30 charter members. The junior club will meet the first Sunday in each month and the juvenile club will meet the last Sunday of the month. A Thanksgiving party will be held at the home of Mrs. August Hartman the evining of Nov. 27. Officers of the club are: Miss Bertha Donnelly, president; Miss Olivia Williams, vice president; Miss Julia Wessels, treasurer, and Miss Helen Louise Furling, secretary. The next meeting will be Dec. 9 at the home of Mrs. William Lochmueller, 4122 Farlin avenue.

Simple Home Mixture Darkens Gray Hair

Cincinnati Barber Tells How Any One Can Prepare It in 5 Minutes.

Any man or woman can easily look twenty years younger by simply darkening their gray, faded, or streaky hair. This is now easy to accomplish with a recipe given by a well-known Cincinnati barber.

Simply take a half-pint of water, add one ounce of bay rum, ¼ ounce of glycerine and a small box of Barbo Compound. Shake and it is ready to use. These ingredients can be bought at drug stores at trifling cost.

Applied to the hair twice weekly this delightful mixture quickly gives the desired shade. It is easy to use, is not sticky or greasy, will not color the scalp and does not rub off.

A Sure Way to End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, all itching and stantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

How I Keep My Waves
By Edna Wallace Hopper

My hair is ever-wavy, with never a marcel. It always has a glow. The reason lies in a hair dress which experts made for me.

I apply it on a brush twice a week. To fluff my hair I comb it backward, and the fluff remains. For a curl, use combs or fingers in the usual way, and the curl will last. It keeps a permanent wave in the same way. Or it keeps hair sleek and smooth for those who want it, and does it without grease.

This remarkable hair dress is now supplied by all toilet counters. It is called Edna Wallace Hopper's Wave and Sheen. The price is 75 cents.

No girl or woman will go without it when she once sees what it does. It multiplies the beauty of the hair and keeps it in the style one wishes. You will be delighted with it.

Club Notices and Meetings

Dr. George R. Dodson will speak on "Patriotism Up-to-Date."

The club exhibition and Thanksgiving dance to be given at the Town Club Saturday, Nov. 27, beginning at luncheon and ending when the last dancers depart, is to be one of the big club events of the year.

The day will start with luncheons given by the members entertaining before the card party in the lounge. Cards will be played from 2 p. m. to 5 p. m. with a half hour interlude for the committees to have their exhibitions. These will be given from the swimming pool to the auditorium and comprise, among other things, a Punch and Judy show.

Dinner will be served from 5:30 p. m. to 7 p. m. for those who care to entertain in advance of the evening card party, in the service dining room. The dinner dance will be in the auditorium, starting at 7:30 p. m. There will be several cabaret features and decorations appropriate to the season.

The next regular meeting of Miriam Lodge, No. 17, U. O. T. S., will be held at the Buckingham Annex Tuesday at 2 p. m. After the business meeting the Drama Study Circle will present its second program of the year. The subject will be "The Swan," a play by Franz Molnar. Mrs. Oscar Leonard will read a paper and Mrs. Joseph Grand will lead the discussion. The program will begin at 3:45 p. m. and is open to all interested.

The New Era Club will meet Tuesday at 1 p. m. with Mrs. V. L. Sheldon, 5538 Cabanne avenue. After luncheon the study of Egypt will be resumed by Mrs. J. W. McCarthy, who will give a paper on "The Nile." Discussion of current events will follow.

The first educational luncheon under the auspices of the Council of Jewish Women will be held Monday, Nov. 29 at noon at Hotel Chase. Mrs. Elias Michael will speak on "The St. Louis School Board Charter and the Way It Operates." At the close of this lecture there will be an open forum in which everyone is urged to participate.

The Confederate Memorial, Historical and Literary Society met Wednesday with Mrs. M. Liflander, 5811 Pershing avenue. Mrs. A. M. Pachter, Mrs. J. O. Rutledge, Mrs. J. W. Gerrell and Mrs. Edward Rabenberg assisted the hostess. Mrs. W. H. Allen presided.

Mrs. W. A. Vivion read a paper "Life in Colonial Virginia," which revealed interesting data that led the audience into the economic, educational, religious and social phases of the colonial period.

Mrs. Milton Southeimer gave a detailed report of the luncheon-bridge party which netted more than enough to complete the pledge for the Catherine Springer Home for working girls. The Annie L. Hickock room is named for a former president of the Confederate memorial.

The women's auxiliary to the Railway Mail Association met at the home of the president, Mrs. I. L. Johnson, 3948 Humphrey street, Nov. 16, with Mrs. J. G. O'Neal and Mrs. W. H. Soost, assistant hostesses. After the luncheon a short business meeting was held. The program consisted of a short play by members entitled, "An Early Woman's Club Meeting." Roll call was answered with "My Most Embarrassing Moment." Preparations were completed for the card party to be held tomorrow for the benefit of the Crippled Children's Fund.

Mrs. J. K. Stribling of Oakwood avenue will be the hostess at a card party to be given Tuesday, Nov. 30, for the benefit of the Daughters of American Colonists.

NEW LEVELS OF LUXURY SET FOR NEW YORK SALON

American Cars to Vie With Those of Europe in Originality and Brilliance of Upholstery and Fittings.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—The annual automobile salon will pitch the highest tone of luxury thus far in automotive history when it opens in the Hotel Commodore on Nov. 28, and continues until Dec. 4.

Among European cars will be the Minerva from Belgium, Mercedes from Germany, Isotta and Fraschini and possibly the Itala from Italy, the American-British Rolls-Royce and the Panhard-Levassor and Renault from France.

Vying with these in originality and brilliance of upholstery and appointments will be American cars, the Dusenberg, Lincoln, the Arrow, Cadillac Packard, the Marmon, Locomobile, Cunningham and Franklin, displayed by their manufacturers or by such noted custom body builders as Fleetwood, Locke, Brunn of Buffalo, Rollston of Philadelphia, Dietrich of Detroit, Fisher, Willoughby, Hibbard & Darrin, Fleetwood, Holbrook, Rothschild & Co. of Paris and Le Baron. In an attempt to change the entire conception of automobile body construction will be made by the Weymann company, using Weymann fabric bodies on Hispano-Suiza and Panhard chassis. The Weymann company is occupying the old National Motor Co.'s factory in Indianapolis, where it will make bodies for various chassis. The Weymann fabric body is made entirely of leather and is very light, its weight being on the frame.

Virtually every automobile manufacturer in Europe is equipping his chassis with Weymann inclosed fabric bodies as standard or optional models. Efforts have been made in the last three years to build fabric bodies in the United States, but the invasion of Weymann means a large spurt in the interest taken in this form of construction.

The 12 Lincoln cars on display will be done most lavishly in a series of designs portraying 12 periods of art, with decorations by H. T. Strong.

It would be difficult to conceive anything more luxurious than the new Cadillacs, which will be displayed by Fisher and other body builders.

A number of cars carry Weymann fabric bodies, some of which are elaborately custom designed. Incidentally, German automobil coach work, as seen at the show, has improved greatly. A body on a Maybach chassis, for instance, costs around $7200.

Among the lighter cars shown was a one-cylinder Hanomag, with engine at the rear. The Hanomag has no front axle, the double transverse springs serving that purpose by gripping the wheel spindles between their ends.

The Voran, one of the cheaper cars, has front-wheel drive. Its front wheels are at the ends of superimposed quarter elliptic springs, which run crosswise and are fastened at the inside ends to the differential casing. The rear springs are semielliptic. Brakes are fitted to the front wheels.

The Mercedes-Benz models have a system which oils virtually every moving part on the chassis.

The Protos car has a novel clutch, which employs a tapered ring of laminated leather which engages a "V"-shaped groove.

The Mauser car has a coil spring universal joint.

An oil pump on the Audi car operates two opposed pistons which work the front and rear brakes.

An interesting front wheel drive car is the Antrieb, which has a four-cylinder engine.

One of the Mercedes-Benz touring models has only two doors, one on each side.

GERMAN CAR DESIGN TREND AWAY FROM FREAKISHNESS

Increase in Number of 6-Cylinder Makes Is an Outstanding Feature of Auto Show in Berlin.

An increase of a dozen or so in the number of six-cylinder motor cars was a feature of the recent German-Austrian automobile show at Berlin. The trend of German automobile design, as disclosed at the show, seems to be away from the freakish and toward the general principles observed by American engineers. For example, the Rumpler car, which formerly had its engine in the rear, is engined in the conventional way, except that the drive is to the front axle. Several other cars have front-wheel drive.

Timing gears often are set at the rear of the engines. Overhead valves are gaining ground. Coil and distributer ignition seems to be rapidly taking the place of magneto ignition. Most makes shown had pump water-cooling systems, unit construction of engine and gear case, dry disc clutches and four-wheel brakes even on the cheaper models.

Aluminum alloys, some of them stronger than steel, are used in many German cars for axles, wheels, frames, brake drums and gear cases, as well as for crankcases, pistons, cylinder castings and cylinder heads. The new Rumpler has its whole frame made of aluminum alloy. This car has no rear axle; instead, each rear wheel is on a stub which is held by arms pivoted on a cross tube on the chassis, while at each side of each stub axle a quarter elliptic spring is fastened to the side frame member so that its free end can slide on the stub.

MUCH ROAD WORK UNDER WAY NORTH FROM ST. CHARLES

Construction Pushed on U. S. Route to Hannibal and Keokuk, and on State Highways.

By ROBERT H. HALL
Press Bureau of the Automobile Club of Missouri.

The fourth of the surveys of highway divisions of Missouri made by the Automobile Club of Missouri is based on division No. 3 with headquarters at Hannibal. This division includes 11 counties in Northeast Missouri. It has two United States highways—routes 36 and 61, and 12 State highways—Nos. 4, 4b, 6, 9a, 10, 15, 22, 45, 47, 54, 54a and 56.

On U. S. Route No. 61.

Of chief interest in this division is U. S. No. 61, which runs from St. Louis to Keokuk, Ia. Leaving St. Louis, this highway follows the concrete slab of Federal No. 40 to a point half a mile east of Wentzville. From there it goes north to Hannibal. From Federal No. 40 to Moscow Mills and thence through Troy to Eolia, a distance of 28.4 miles, the highway is graveled and in good condition.

From Eolia to Louisiana, a distance of 16.1 miles, it is graveled, as it is to Frankford, 16.3 miles farther on. The route to this point from Troy is all detour, and the highway, when completed, will not follow the present routing. The same holds true through Frankford and New London, a distance of nine miles, which is graveled. Between the two latter places 12 miles of concrete is under construction. From New London through Oakwood into Hannibal, a distance of 9.7 miles, the highway is also concreted.

Some Dirt Beyond Canton.

From Hannibal to Palmyra, a distance of 14.2 miles, it is concreted. This is the last concrete encountered on this highway until the Missouri-Iowa line is reached.

From Palmyra through Taylor and La Grange into Canton, a distance of 26.6 miles, the highway is graveled. Between Canton and St. Patrick, a distance of 15.2 miles, there is a 1.8-mile graveled detour just out of Canton, then dirt, very slippery in wet weather.

A 6.6 dirt detour is encountered between St. Patrick and Winchester. Between Winchester and Waylands 12 miles of road is under construction, being graveled at present. A dirt detour of 1.6 miles, merging into a gravel road of 4.8 miles into Wayland, must be used from Winchester.

From Wayland to Alexandria, a distance of 8 miles, the highway is graveled. From this point there is 1.8 miles of concrete to the Iowa line, and thence 3-3 miles of brick and macadam paving to Keokuk.

On Federal Route No. 36.

U. S. No. 36, the only other Federal Highway through this division, running from the Wabash bridge over the Mississippi River at Hannibal to Shelby on the Macon county line, is in good condition. From the Wabash bridge to Hannibal, a distance of 1.1 miles, it is concreted. From Hannibal west to Withers Mill, a distance of 7.8 miles, it is graveled and concreted.

From Withers Mill to West Ely, a distance of 5.7 miles, the highway is graveled. From West Ely to Monroe City, a distance of 11.9 miles, it is concreted, except for 1.3 miles of gravel. From Monroe City through Hunnewell into Lakenan, a distance of 12.6 miles, it is concreted. From Lakenan to Shelbina there are 4.4 miles of concrete and a mile of gravel.

From Shelbina through Lentner and Clarence to Shelby, a distance of 17.2 miles, the highway is dirt. This is the end of route No. 36 in division No. 3. From Shelby the highway continues west through Macon.

State Road Work.

Some of the highways in this division aer not of great interest to motorists in general. Of especial interest, however, is the activity on No. 22 from Louisiana west to the Audrian Randolph county line. Immediately out of Louisiana on this highway there is 6 miles of concrete under construction. A detour is provided along the old road to Bowling Green, a distance of 10.5 miles, which has been graveled.

From Bowling Green to Curryville there are 7.7 miles of gravel, then 4 miles of gravel and 6.8 miles of dirt. From Vandalia to Farber there are 6.6 miles of gravel. From Farber to Laddonia there are 2.6 miles of gravel and 3.6 miles of dirt. The dirt road continues to Scotts Corner, 5.5 miles farther on.

From Scotts Corner to Mexico a distance of 12.8 miles, the highway is graveled. The balance of this highway from Mexico through Thompson, Centralia, into Audrian, a distance of 28 miles, is dirt.

About the only State highway in this division which is of interest to St. Louis motorists is No. 56, running from Troy through Chantilly, Winfield and Old Monroe to the Lincoln-St. Charles County line. Considerable graveling has put this road in a fair condition.

Between Troy and Chantilly the character of the road is as follows: 1.7 miles gravel, 1.5 miles dirst, 1.1 miles gravel, 4.6 miles dirt. Between Chantilly and Winfield there are 1.3 miles of dirt, and .54 of a mile of gravel. From Winfield to Old Monroe there are 4.4 miles of gravel and from Old Monroe to the Lincoln-St. Charles County line there is half a mile of dirt. From this point, the end of division No 3, route No. 56, now dirt, continues south to St. Peters, where it connects with U. S. No. 40.

MOST SALES ON TIME PAYMENTS ARE OF AUTOS

Of All Cars Sold in U. S., $2,642,000,000 Worth Are Bought on Deferred Plan, Expert Reports.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—The contention of business alarmists that installment buying is mortgaging the future income of the American people to such an extent that in time of financial stress the economic structure of the nation will crumble into chaos, was disproved today in a searching report on the deferred payment plan in the United States.

The report presented to the Third National Automotive Financing Conference by Milan V. Ayres, industrial economist and analyst of national reputation, established these facts.

Motor Cars Head List.

That installment business in the United States has not increased to any marked extent in the last two years. That it has reached a stage of stabilization.

That annual sales of goods, exclusive of real estate, stocks and bonds, on the installment plan in this country amounts to $6,179,-

When temperature falls below 30 degrees Jack Frost starts to get in his work—wasting fuel, slowing up lubrication, throwing extra strain on your starter batteries.

Keep the "shivers" out of your motor—

Chilly carburetors are one of the world's worst strains on a car driver's disposition. So often they are entirely unnecessary, too. By simply conserving the natural warmth of the engine the carburetor can be kept ready for a prompt start in a large share of cases. That's why car owners who have once tried out one of the IRVING Radiator Shutters won't drive in cold weather without it. They know it quickly pays for itself in added economy—and that it will outlast the car itself. Ask to see one.

AGAIN AND A GAIN

NEW BUICK Registrations for October swamped the field in St. Louis and St. Louis County by another wide margin—nearly double its next competitor, more than double the next, three times the third, then up to four times as many and more. This splendid record increases Buick's lead from 12% to 20% more than the next ranking car in new registrations for the year to date—

The greatest proof of Buick popularity

Here are Official (*) figures for October

BUICK	223	Next Car	42
Next Car	113	Next Car	39
Next Car	92	Next Car	36
Next Car	71	Next Car	33
Next two cars, each	52	(Each of the others registered less than 30 cars apiece)

Those nearest Buick have both fours and sixes, others fours only. The nearest exclusive six was 131 cars behind Buick.

20% of All New Cars Registered In October Were Buicks
(Exclusive of the two low-priced fours)

This is the best evidence that the motor-buying public is making its selections from a quality standpoint, and is not being influenced by extravagant statements, price reductions and offers of excess allowances.

Compare Buick with any car, in finish, equipment, details, performance or in any way you choose—and you will quickly see the reason for its popularity.

PLANS NEW LIGHT SIX WITH KNIGHT ENGINE

Firm, Organized in Detroit, Proposes to Sell Sedans for Less Than $1000.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Nov. 20.—A new light six-cylinder car, with Knight sleeve valve engine, will be placed on the market early next year by a new automobile manufacturing unit to be announced here soon. The concern, headed by David R. Wilson, president of the Wilson Foundry and Machine Co., plans to produce this car on a mass basis.

With the arrival of the new car there will be available a complete line of Knight-type cars covering the price range, and topped with the English Daimler double six, which is to be marketed by the F. B. Stearns Co., along with the latter's own product. The new product will not conflict with the Willys-Knight line. The sedan will form the mainstay of the new line and will sell probably for slightly under $1000.

Manufacturing rights have been obtained from the Knight American Patents Co., which controls the use of the Knight type of double sleeve engine in the United States. Wilson has long been identified with the industry as the company with which he is associated is a large manufacturer of Knight engines.

The Wilson Foundry and Machine Co. will build the power plants for the new company, which, however, will be independent otherwise and will operate in one of several available plants, at or in the vicinity of Detroit, which have been under consideration.

Associated with Wilson in organizing the enterprise are John N. Willys, John C. Nichols Jr., R. H. Harger and Ray Allen. The new concern, which will have a clean start, building the new car in its own plant and creating its own independent distributing organization.

SAYS CHAMPION PLUGS WON ALL BIG RACING EVENTS IN 1926

Champion spark plugs in the 1926 racing season have won every major racing event in America and the rest of the world, says R. A. Stranahan, president of the Champion Spark Plug Co.

"Today they hold every world mark for speed, durability and stamina. During the year they have broken more than 20 records that, at the end of 1925, were their own world speed marks," he declares.

Half of Auto Owners In Massachusetts Obtain Insurance On Their Cars

Liability Policies Required by Compulsory Law Designed to Protect Pedestrians From Reckless Drivers.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, Nov. 20.—Already nearly 50 per cent of automobile owners in Massachusetts have taken out policies required by the State compulsory insurance law, effective Jan. 1, on their cars before license plates and driver's license will be issued to them for 1927. The insurance required is designed to protect the pedestrian rather than the motorist. It may be either a $5000 liability insurance policy, a surety bond of equal amount or consist of $5000 in cash or securities deposited with the Massachusetts Division of Highways.

The liability insurance policy need cover only personal damages in case of an injury with another car, and does not apply to damages to the car. The policy is not effective if the accident occurs off a public highway, such as in a garage or the grounds of a filling station.

For Pedestrian's Benefit.

This means the compulsory insurance law was designed primarily for the benefit of the pedestrian as a means of protection against reckless drivers. It is also aimed at the class of automobile owners who drive cheap cars bought either for small sum or on the installment plan, and who, in case of an accident, are unable to pay any damages to the persons injured.

Early last summer it appeared that if plans were not made immediately to handle the rush of applications which would come around the first of the year, chaos would result. Representatives of the insurance companies were called into conference with the State officials and representatives of various automobile associations and between them standard rates were worked out and plans made for handling the 70 per cent of motorists who had no insurance protection.

When the rates were announced it was an agreeable surprise to many automobile owners to find that compulsory insurance had resulted in quite a cut in comparison with the former rates. For instance in the Boston area the required $5000 policy costs $29 a year for such light weight cars as the Ford and Chevrolet; $37 foo the medium weight class which includes cars such as the Nash, Chandler, Moon, Oakland and Oldsmobile while $45 must be paid on policies covering the heavier class of cars such as the Hudson, Lincoln and Cadillac. Motorcycles get a comparatively low rate, ranging from $11 to $29 depending on the territory and type of machine.

Used Car Prices Slump.

Although many feel that some such protection has long been needed they are wondering about its effect upon the automobile trade. Used car prices have already taken a sharp slump and indications are that they will go much lower before the winter is over. A poor used car market naturally has an adverse effect on new car sales and for this reason there are many who believe that a strong lobby will develop at the next meeting of the legislature in an attempt to repeal the law.

As it is now, the motorist in Massachusetts has to pay the highest fixed charges per year to operate his car of any car owner in the United States. In addition to the compulsory insurance he must pay for a driver's license, the registration plates on his car and a personal property tax, which in this State is never under $30 a year and in some places is as high as $42. This means that factory workers, office people and small business men are beginning to consider seriously whether the financial sacrifice they must make is worth the pleasure they get from their cars, especially in a State where motoring is not very pleasant or profitable during the winter. Taxicab organizations have already filed protests to the effect that they will be driven out of business if they are forced to pay the regular insurance premium charges on their fleets of cabs.

$10,000,000 In Premiums.

Again it is pointed out that the insurance companies will receive more than $10,000,000 a year in premiums as a result of the new law. This amount expended toward better highways, stop lights and other means of giving the pedestrian more safety would go a long ways. But the insurance companies claim that the new law is no bonanza for them, inasmuch as it means an enormous increase in clerical work, a larger staff of lawyers and increased court costs, as they must handle all cases arising out of personal injuries received from motor car accidents.

As a safety measure the compulsory insurance law is sharply questioned. The tendency will not be towards safe driving, its opponents claim, but towards more reckless driving, as drivers know that the insurance companies will look after any claims filed against them as the result of an accident unless it should be of a criminal nature. The insurance companies are not going to grant compensation for every claim made, and it is comparatively safe to say that at least 25 per cent of the automobile accidents are a result of the pedestrians' fault. Again, the insurance companies point out, that the premiums, as in life insurance, will depend upon the number of deaths caused by the motor car.

Deaths Comparatively Fewer.

The statistics collected by the Massachusetts Registry of Motor Vehicles seems to uphold the assertions that deaths from automobile accidents are falling off compared with the great increase in number of motor vehicles today. In 1919, when the total registration numbered only 260,881 cars, 582 persons were killed by motor cars, while in 1925, when there were 774,741 cars registered, 755 persons were killed by motor cars. In 1919 there were 448 cars for every person killed, while in 1925 there were 1026 for every person killed. In 1924, the worst year for automobile fatalities in Massachusetts, when the per cent increase in number of deaths was 22.16, while in 1925 the increase was only 6.4, although there was an increase of almost 100,000 cars in the number registered. This is probably due to the stricter enforcement of the State laws regarding licensing, proper regulation of headlights, brakes and other matters which effect the safetiness of cars in general.

The courts are another element that is going to feel the effects of the new law. At present it takes three years for the average automobile case to be settled in court and with the great increase in number of cases caused by automobile insurance it is felt that special automobile courts handling only civil and criminal automobile cases will have to be provided for at the next meeting of the Legislature.

WEYMANN FABRIC BODY TO BE ON STUTZ MODEL

This Light Type Is Said to Eliminate Possibility of Squeaks or Rattles.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 20.—As promised by its president, F. E. Moskovics, upon his return from Europe in August, the Stutz Motor Co., Inc., for which the Benjamin Motor Co. is local distributer, is to introduce a Stutz car with a Weymann fabric body. This body is unique in construction and is said to eliminate any possibility of squeaks or rattles.

The Weymann body might almost be termed a shell built up around the chassis and seats, for the seats of the car are fastened directly to the chassis. This shell consists of a wooden frame-work carrying a light flexible fabric covering that responds to all the weaving and twisting of the car. Doors, which are exceptionally wide, are very light and hung on hinges which are on tapers permitting a certain amount of "give." The door locks are practically universal joints with no chance of rattles developing in them. Other features are the windshield on a universal pivot, permitting it to move, and the frame construction which allows no two pieces of wood to come together.

This type of body is very popular in Europe, where it is estimated that the saving in weight is approximately 50 per cent as against the standard composite construction. Manufacturers using the fabric body believe that from five to eight miles an hour are added to the car's speed through this weight saving.

"The Chrysler Corporation at present is producing 800 cars a day," reports Walter P. Chrysler, president.

BIG CHRYSLER DRIVEAWAY TO ST. LOUIS DISTRICT UNDER WAY

Dealers From This Territory Attend Convention at Detroit, Then Drive Back Home.

A motor car driveaway of unusual proportions is under way from Detroit to various points in the Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois territory of Midwest Motors, Inc., Chrysler distributer in the St. Louis district.

A special train left St. Louis Thursday carrying 100 Chrysler dealers and their representatives, led by G. F. Kinkead, the distributer's wholesale sales manager. They were bound for Detroit to attend the annual convention of Chrysler distributers and dealers. L. M. Stewart, president of Midwest Motors, preceded them by a day.

The program provided for inspection of the factory so that they might see at first hand what the Chrysler "standardized quality" policy really means and how it is being carried out, besides sales talks, conferences and a banquet.

They were to leave Detroit yesterday, driving as many cars as they could handle. Information was that the St. Louis contingent would arrive in Chryslers tonight.

"Smoother and quieter than any car I have ever driven"— —such is the verdict of owners of the Greater Oakland Six, with Rubber-Silenced Chassis.

A vital reason for its velvety performance is an entirely new and exclusive engineering principle—

—the Oakland Six engine rides on rubber and drives through rubber.

Rubber engine supports absorb any vibration in the frame due to the torque reaction of the engine, while a rubber-silenced drive erases all body rumbles and vibrations communicated from the rear wheels, drive shaft and transmission.

Moreover, the Harmonic Balancer—pioneered by Oakland—practically eliminates crankshaft torsional vibration at all engine speeds.

Drive the Greater Oakland Six—and experience a smoothness and quietness of operation and a freedom from closed car rumble never before achieved.

MORE THAN 1,082,000 DODGE CARS PRODUCED

First Auto Put Out by Firm, in November, 1914, Had Entire Steel Body.

The twelfth anniversary of the production of the first Dodge automobile has just passed. The first Dodge Bros.' car was brought out on Nov. 14, 1914. Going back to that year, the Automobile Trade Journal, in its history of the automobile industry printed in 1925, thus describes this event:

"After many months of anxious expectation the announcement of the Dodge Bros.' first car in November, 1914, revealed what the two brothers, John and Horace, after their years of manufacturing experience for Ford, considered was the best vehicle."

Continuing, it says: "The most radical feature was an entire steel body in which the panels and frame were of stampings, a design that has been continued."

The article concludes: "The Dodge Bros.' products have been known for few radical changes made from year to year."

In 12 years the Dodge Bros.' factory has grown from a small group of buildings with floor space of less than 20 acres, to a large group of modern factory structures occupying a total area of 130 acres.

The records show more than 1,802,000 cars produced.

Starting with car No. 1 on Nov. 14, 1914, the first 100,000 cars were completed in 23 days less than two years. The 500,000th car was completed three years, eight months and seven days later. Car number 1,000,000 was completed three years five months and 13 days later. The next 800,000 cars were produced in two years, 10 months and 15 days—an interesting record compared with the seven years, 11 months and 17 days required to build the first 800,000.

The last 100,000 cars were built in four months—the first 100,000 in a few days less than two years.

The first Dodge Bros.' car, according to the Automobile Trade Journal employed vanadium steel in its crankshaft, at that time considered an unusual feature.

Today, according to factory officials, Dodge Bros., Inc., uses more of this metal than any other manufacturer. It is used for crankshaft, camshaft, connecting rods, transmission gears, propeller shaft, axle shafts, front axle center and spring leaves.

In the first nine months of this year Dodge Bros., Inc., produced 293,842 cars, as compared with 207,601 in the same period in 1925.

The organization now has 3500 dealerships in America and throughout the world.

LABADIE DETOUR REPORTED AS VIRTUALLY IMPASSABLE

Snow Slows Up Traffic on Main Routes and Makes Secondary Roads Very Bad.

The heavy snowfall of the past week caused a general slowing up of traffic over the highways of Missouri and Illinois. In some cases, because of drifts, secondary highways in these states were rendered difficult, if not impassable, according to the Touring Department of the Automobile Club of Missouri.

The Labadie detour, from Gray's Summit west, which was necessitated by the construction program on Federal Highway No. 50 and 60, west of Gray's Summit, is virtually impassable. This detour, of gravel and dirt, is only fair at its best, and is a narrow, winding road, dangerous to drive over even in fair weather. Because of the numerous hills this detour traverses, snow drifts piled up in dips of the road and in other places deep ruts were so filled with ice and slush as to make progress almost perilous.

On Federal No. 40, the airline highway between St. Louis and Kansas City, the heaviest snowfall was remarked between St. Louis and Boonville, while west of the latter city and into Kansas City only a light blanket of snow covered the highway. Traffic was slowed east of Boonville because of the snow, but was kept moving.

Federal No. 61, south from St. Louis to Fredericktown, was covered with snow, but traffic on this highway, as on Federal No. 40, was not held up to any great degree.

RADIO AMPLIFIER IN TESTING DEVICE INVENTED BY PACKARD

Radio amplification is employed in a new testing machine just invented by the Packard Motor Car Co. for inspection of surface finishes and to check engine piston pins and other parts where perfectly polished surfaces are important.

The new machine is the result of years of experimental work. Microscopic photographs were used at first but conclusive results were not obtained, even when pictures with 100 magnifications were taken. These photographs, however, did bring out an interesting fact, that the higher degree of surface finish produced a decidedly narrow sharp band of bright light in the photograph while surface finishes of a lesser degree of polish produced a very wide band, much duller.

This led to the use of a detector bulb which is similar to the cells used regularly in sending photographs by telegraph. Such bulbs respond instantly to the most minute variations in light intensity. In the new machine developed by Packard, the detector bulbs measure the light reflected from the surface under inspection and so give, mechanically, a perfect measure of the degree of polish.

SPALDING BACK ON AUTO ROW IN REFRIGERATION BUSINESS

That the preponderance of installment buying is in automobiles.

That the total increase in installment buying between 1923 and 1925 was only 8 per cent while savings deposits increased 17 per cent.

That the total installment debt is only a very slight percentage of the national income estimated at $70,000,000,000 and that no material amount of installment payments will be defaulted in "hard times."

$881,000,000 Paid Down.

Ayres' report on automobiles shows total cash value of all cars sold in the United States is $3,446,-000,000 and that $2,642,000,000 worth are sold on the installment plan. Increased by carrying charges the latter figure becomes $2,819,000,000. Of this amount $881,000,000 is cash down payment. One billion nine hundred thirty-eight million dollars is deferred payment. But nothing like the total of this is outstanding at any one time as payments are made each month. So $1,049,000,000 or 54 per cent of the annual automobile installment paper is found to be be outstanding at one time.

Figures for the last two years show no increase in outstanding installment paper on cars and trucks during that period.

HUDSON SALES PROMOTION MANAGER DISCUSSES PLANS

H. G. Moock Attends Luncheon of Hudson-Essex Organization in St. Louis.

H. G. Moock, sales promotion manager of the Hudson Motor Car Co., Detroit, spoke Friday at a noon luncheon of metropolitan Hudson and Essex dealers at the headquarters of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., distributer. Moock outlined the Hudson-Essex factory and sales plans for the coming season. He was accompanied by Robert Somerville, representative from the Hudson factory service department.

Following the luncheon, a five-reel motion picture was shown. The film depicted the new $10,000,-000 Hudson-Essex body plant and the processes of body manufacture and assembly.

Among the pictures shown were a series of the new Essex four-door sedan, which is being marketed in St. Louis.

REPORTS CADILLAC MADE 2800 MILES IN 71 HOURS

Col. Ed. Fletcher, a San Diego, Cal. business man, president of the Borderland Highway (the western section of the Old Spanish Trail), reports that he has completed a run from San Diego, to Savannah, Ga., a distance of about 2800 miles, over the Old Spanish Trail in 71 hours and 15 minutes. Arrangements were made beforehand with State and city police and high officials for a fast run. The trip was made in Fletcher's seven-passenger Cadillac sedan, a year old. He was accompanied by his son and two other passengers.

The return trip was made with stops at many points for encouragement of the development of the Old Spanish Trail.

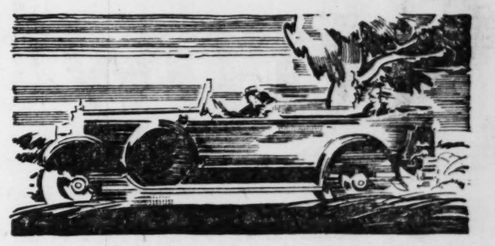
new experiences await you

exclusive with MARMON

Important features and characteristics of the New MARMON Seventy-five which are not duplicated in any other car



Steering without the slightest trace of vibration or "shimmy" at any speed, in combination with new self-energizing four-wheel brakes—due to recently invented Steering Stabilizer, completely solving a problem which has baffled engineers since the advent of balloon tires

A distinct new type of vibrationless power flow as the result of the new Marmon Modulator in combination with Marmon's exclusive system of double-fire ignition—in an engine which represents years of concentration on one basic design.

A fine degree of road balance and easy riding for which Marmon has been famous for years and which has never been approached in any other car—Marmon's exclusive type of compensating rear springs keeps the body of the car on even keel when leaving the crown of the road.

Unsurpassed safety—the only car with patented shock-resisting type of frame with built-in steel running boards, or "side bumpers," which have many times saved Marmon passengers from harm.

Only engine, to our knowledge, in which every bearing is lubricated under full pressure—a prime factor of long life.

These are but a few of the exclusive features which await your inspection in the new Marmon Series 75.

Series 75

Now exhibiting a wide range of both standard and custom-built cars in the advanced mode at prices the most conservative in Marmon history—$3195 and upward—f. o. b. factory.

ERSKINE SIX TO BE ON MARKET IN U. S. JAN. 8

Studebaker's New European-type Car to Be Exhibited at New York Show.

The Erskine six, Studebaker's new 2 1-3 litre European type car, will be placed on the market in this country at the automobile show in New York on Jan. 8, according to a statement by A. R. Erskine, president of the Studebaker Corporation.

The car was introduced in Europe at the Paris Salon in October, and has been exhibited at the London show and at Edinburgh and Berlin. The Erskine six is an addition to the Studebaker line and will be sold exclusively through Studebaker dealers.

The new car also will be exhibited at the national show in Chicago on Jan. 29, and at the principal automobile shows in 1927.

Erskine's statement said that production would start in January at the Detroit plants of the corporation, and that four models would be built. These include five-passenger, four-door sedan, five-passenger touring car with folding top, four-passenger coupe with an auxiliary seat in the rear deck, and a two-passenger business coupe. Production schedules call for 300 cars a day by spring.

The Erskine's six-cylinder engine has a bore of 2⅝ inches and stroke of 4½ inches. The car was designed to turn in an 18-foot radius, deliver 28 miles to the gallon of gasoline, and run up to 60 miles per hour. It has been highly praised by European automotive writers.

IS MARMON CHIEF ENGINEER

Thomas J. Litle Jr., president of the Society of Automotive Engineers, has been appointed chief engineer of the Marmon Motor Car Co.

Litle, until recently, was chief engineer of the Lincoln Motor Co. and goes to Marmon to take the place of D. G. Roos, who resigned. His record in automotive engineering dates back to 1917, when he became associated with the engineering department of the Cadillac Motor Car Co.

AUTO CLUB PLACES ROAD AND SCHOOL SIGNS IN THE COUNTY

The Automobile Club of Missouri plans to issue a weekly bulletin detailing the activities of its Sign Posting Department in signing each prominent interesection and danger point in St. Louis County.

Direction signs were erected at the following intersections in St. Louis County the past week: Natural Bridge and Florissant roads, Link and Olive Street roads, Spoede and Olive Street roads, Craig and Olive Street roads, Olive and Bonhomme roads, Warson and Conway roads, McKnight and Clayton roads, McKnight and Ladue roads, Carson and Natural ridge roads and Warson and Ladue roads.

The club placed "school zone" signs at Lincoln School, 6600 Robbins avenue; Roosevelt School, Natural Bridge road and Marfetta avenue; Garfield School, Haven and Suburban avenues, Pine Lawn; McKinley School, St. Louis avenue and Lucas and Hunt roads, and Harrison School, Albin and Allen avenues.

Signs of the same type were erected at St. Rita's Parochial School, on Spring avenue north of Page boulevard.

BUYERS OFTEN JUDGE CARS BY QUALITY OF UPHOLSTERY

Usually a purchaser of a closed automobile first looks over the various models with an eye to outward appearance. Next his attention turns to interior upholstery and fitments. As a rule, if design, appearance and appointments please him, he seems inclined to take chassis value and efficiency for granted.

Upholstery of rich, soft-toned design invariably gives the impression that equally fine materials are used throughout the car. A number of the finest motor cars are being upholstered in Chase velmo, a mohair velvet of marked attractiveness as well as wear-resisting qualities.

NEW AUBURN EIGHT PRICE TO BE $1495, TOLEDO HEARS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOLEDO, O., Nov. 20.—While E. L. Cord, president of the Auburn Automobile Co., has made no definite statement as to the specifications of the new Auburn straight eight or price, it is understood that it will list around $1495. It will be the first time in the history of the industry that such a car has been offered at so low a price.

The new line is to be a companion to the present large Auburn straight eight.

CLOCK TURNS AUTO LIGHTS OFF AND ON AUTOMATICALLY

An attachment by which an auto clock can be set so as to turn any or all of the lights on a motor car on or off as desired has been invented by Edward Zola, 3131A Magazine street. Dr. Joseph H. Humphrey, 3616A St. Louis avenue, is copatentee. The apparatus has been on display by Max Weinberg, 913 Franklin avenue, who is interested in the invention.

There were also present at the meeting district representatives from St. Louis for Marmon, Chevrolet, Ford, Hudson, Buick, Oakland, Overland and Studebaker cars and from Beck & Corbitt Iron Co., and the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co.

John T. McMahan of John N. Taylor, Inc., Columbia and Moberly, explained the purposes of the meeting.

Capt. Robert E. Lee, manager of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, was the principal speaker and discussed the advantages, purposes and practices of an association. Incidentally he discussed the several automobile problems, including the used car situation, which, he said, was alike all over the country.

At the close of Lee's address a representative from each of the cities was designated as a member of an Organization Committee and McMahan was made chairman of this committee. This committee is to meet in Columbia next Tuesday to complete organization of the Central Missouri Automobile Dealers' Association. Tren a call will be sent out for a meeting of dealers in the central and northern sections of the State to perfect the organization.

FRONT WHEEL BRAKES FOR FORD CARS NOW ON MARKET

The recently announced Heinzelman front wheel brakes for Ford cars work together with the rear wheel transmission brakes and are operated with the same pedal. The car is stopped in less than half the distance ordinarily required.

Heinzelman front wheel brakes are the external type and operate with one lever, a patented feature. There are three adjustment screws to insure contact at all points on the drum and to eliminate dragging.

Three stripper springs release the brake the instant the pressure is removed from the pedal. The drums are 1¾ inches wide and 10 inches in diameter, giving a braking surface of 34 square inches on each wheel.

The brakes operate on an equalizing bar connected to the foot pedal so the braking is applied to four wheels at once.

Heinzelman brakes fit any Ford car. They are manufactured in St. Louis and were given tests for two years before being put on the market.

8 OAKLANDS IN TEST AVERAGE 24.7 MILES TO GALLON OF GAS

Eight Oakland Six cars, one of every year since 1919, were in a test against each other, at Portland, Ore., to renew this car's claim as champion economy car.

In this test, open and closed cars were used. Each carried a measured gallon of gasoline, started over the same route, an up and down grade, and was driven until all the gasoline was used and the engine stopped.

All cars were under official observation of Ernest W. Peterson, automobile editor of the Oregon Journal. The observer followed the motorcade in an Oakland landau sedan, starting with the speedometer at zero. As the gasoline supply of each car gave out, it was stopped. The observer then read the speedometer on his car the mileage that was run on the fuel and made computations accordingly. The gasoline mileage of the cars in the run was from 21.9 to 26.5 miles. The average for the eight cars was within the slightest fraction of 24.7 miles to the gallon.

New Sign on Automobile Row.

A combination electric sign showing "Oakland" and "Pontiac" alternately was erected recently on the front of showroom of the Mississippi Valley Motor Co. The names of these cars have a like number of letters which are placed together. This sign is the third of its kind in St. Louis, according to E. A. Hatfield, president of the company.

SERVICE MANAGERS' BUREAU IS TO MEET FRIDAY EVENING

It is expected that about 100 managers of the service departments of automobile dealers will attend the November meeting of the Service Managrs' Bureau of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association. The meeting will be at the Claridge Hotel next Friday evening. The notice of the meeting sent out by the manager of the bureau, Robert E. Lee, outlines a program headed by George H. Niekamp of the Beck & Corbitt Iron Co., who will talk on "Sale of Accessories by Service Managers."

R. C. Pitzer of the Willis-Jones Machinery Co., Seattle, will discuss and illustrate valve reseating and cylinder grinding.

The Standard Oil Co., through a representative, will show in detail by pictures and samples oil refining processes and the proper lubrication of motor cars.

There will also be a report made by Lee from the United States Bureau of Standards on anti-freeze solutions.

DEALERS TO MAKE CHECK ON REPOSSESSED TRUCKS

At a meeting of the Commercial Car (truck) Bureau of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association at the Claridge Hotel on Monday, representatives of the 11 truck distributers present decided to institute a careful check on repossessed trucks to prevent purchasing of trucks by irresponsible people who had not paid for previously purchased vehicles.

The used truck situation in St. Louis was discussed for two hours and an understanding was reached as to the practice of trading which will result in clearing up some of the evils of the business. It was also announced that under factory instruction to distributers and branch managers down payments on new trucks were now on a uniform fixed basis.

Clyde Erskine, manager of the Mack-International Motor Truck Corporation, chairman of the bureau, presided. Robert E. Lee is manager of the bureau.

AUTO ACCESSORY GROUP TO MEET TUESDAY EVENING

The November meeting of the Automotive Accessory Association of St. Louis has been called by its president, George H. Niekamp, and its manager, Robert E. Lee, at the Claridge Hotel next Tuesday evening at 6:30.

R. W. Proctor of the Black & Decker Manufacturing Co. is expected to discuss a merchandising plan for the coming year and to outline the proper handling of a large automotive equipment display which will be made by St. Louis accessory jobbers at the next St. Louis Automobile Show.

The Packard Six Club Sedan is the ideal combination car for business, social and touring use. Many other beautiful and distinguished body types are available.

Seventy Per Cent
Advanced to Packard Ownership

PACKARD has just analyzed the last two thousand Packard Six sales. Factory officials wanted to verify their conviction that the improved Packards were actually doubling the market for fine cars. The results of the investigation were surprising even to those in closest touch with the new trend in automobile investment.

For it was disclosed that 1,400 out of the last 2,000 buyers of the improved Packard Six had never before owned so fine a car—or even a car in the Packard Six price class. Seventy per cent had broken their previously fixed habit of frequently buying lower-priced cars.

The average mileage on the speedometers of the miscellaneous cars turned in by these Packard Six buyers was only 19,388. And the average age of all these cars was but two and one-half years!

Now, the significant thing is that these 2,000 new Packard Six owners say they expect to keep their Packards an average of 55 months—nearly twice as long as the cars they recently turned in.

These buyers needed only simple arithmetic to prove that they could actually save money by owning Packard cars—if they merely would use the desirable mileage of first-class transportation built into these fine cars.

If you propose to pay more than $1,500 for a motor car you can afford one of the new and improved Packards—beautiful, comfortable, distinguished, and with a performance range now the constant delight of every owner.

As an example of Packard Six prices, the five-passenger sedan is $2780 delivered at your door. You may spread the payments over a year if you wish. Our phone is CEntral 2500.

WHIPPET, IN 3409-MILE RUN, DOES 34 M. P. G.

A. A. A. Observer Reports Coast-to-Coast Record for "Canon Ball" Baker.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOLEDO, O., Nov. 20.—Completing a 3409-mile run across the country in San Diego today, "Cannon Ball" Baker, driving an Overland Whippet with Arthur Means, field secretary of the A. A. A. in New York, as official observer, established an economy record of 34.69 miles to the gallon of gasoline in a trip which averaged more than 250 miles a day and occupied 13 days. Means stated that the Whippet used 98.2 gallons of gasoline and 10 quarts of oil. Eight quarts of water were added to the radiator.

The run started in New York city at noon of Nov. 3. It covered every kind of driving and weather conditions that can be encountered. The car crossed the mountains into New Mexico at an elevation of 9000 feet. During the trip it traveled over concrete, macadam, dirt roads, ploughed for one day hub-deep in mud in Kansas, another day bucked a snow storm in Western Kansas, at times was forced to travel miles in low gear and second gear, and only once did the daily average drop below 30 miles to the gallon and then the record for the day was 29 miles to the gallon.

The first day's run was from New York City to Lancaster, Pa., made in the afternoon, a distance of 127 miles. The gasoline average was 37.7 miles to the gallon. On the second day, Wheeling, W. Va., was reached, a total distance for the day of 294 miles, with an average of 30.9 miles to the gallon.

Indianapolis was reached the third day and the average for the 787 miles to that city was 34 miles to the gallon.

To St. Louis from Indianapolis, the 258 miles were covered at an average of 34.4 miles to the gallon. The day following, Kansas City was the destination, the distance from St. Louis being 278 miles and the average for the day being 32.77 miles per gallon.

At Kansas City, the mileage from New York was 1323 miles and the average 25.28 miles to the gallon.

Leaving Kansas City on Monday, Nov. 8, Baker's destination was Manhattan, Kan. The Whippet bucked a head wind all day. From Kansas City to Topeka it rained heavily and the going was taxing the car to the limit. At Topeka the rain changed to snow and for 60 miles the mud was nearly up to the hubs of the car. The distance covered was 145 miles, the average being 24 miles to the gallon.

Tuesday night the car was stopped at Kinsley, Kan. Snow had blocked all roads and over 100 cars were held up waiting for the storm to clear. During the day the Whippet was driven 15 miles in low and second gear, much of the way over unimproved roads. The distance covered was 258 miles and the average 30.4 miles to the gallon.

Wednesday, Nov. 10, found the Whippet at Syracuse, Kan. "The first 60 miles today were the toughest we have had!" Baker reported. "The entire distance snow banks were up to five feet high and mud where there was no snow." This day the mileage was 162 and the gasoline average 32.4 miles to the gallon.

Nov. 11 the Whippet ran 232 miles to Raton, N. M. It climbed Raton Pass in high gear. The Whippet's average for the day was 35.69 miles to the gallon.

Albuquerque, N. M., was reached in the early evening after a run of 267 miles, much of the distance over mountainous roads, for an average of 28.14 miles to the gallon.

Nov. 12 saw the car make 345 miles to Lordsburg, N. M., on 10 gallons of gasoline, at an average of 24.5 miles to the gallon.

Sunday he drove 276 miles to Phoenix, Ariz., an average of 36.66 miles to the gallon.

Nov. 15 Baker drove from Phoenix to El Centro, Cal., a 275-mile trip, at 34.55 miles to the gallon.

From El Centro the 186 miles to San Diego lay over desert and mountains. The Whippet reached San Diego at noon Tuesday.

Since noon of Nov. 3, the car had gone 3409 miles. It had used 98.2 gallons of gasoline and the grand average for the trip was 34.69 miles to the gallon.

But once on the trip did the average drop below 30 miles to the gallon and then only to 29 m. p. g. An A. A. A. observer sealed the filler cap of the gasoline tank and measured all fuel put into the car.

G. M. A. C. INCREASES CAPITAL

General Motor Acceptance Corp., which operates the service employed in credit purchases of General Motors products, announces that the New York State Banking Department has approved an increase in its capital stock by 60,000 shares. This stock will be sold to General Motors Corp. at $125 a share, thus providing $7,500,000 additional capital.

With this increase, General Motors Acceptance Corporation has capital, surplus and undivided profits of $38,200,000. All of the stock is owned by General Motors.

STUDEBAKER TO BUY BALE OF COTTON FOR EACH CAR SOLD IN SOUTH IN 60 DAYS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 20.—The Studebaker Corp. announces through its president, A. R. Erskine, that it will buy a bale of cotton for every Studebaker sold in the cotton belt in November and December.

The cotton will be purchased at the market price and will be stored and kept off the market at least six months, according to Erskine.

The Studebaker investment in cotton and in prosperity for the South should be between $150,000 and $250,000 as Studebaker sales in the next two months in the cotton area are expected to be between 3000 and 5000 cars.

42,000 HUPMOBILE SIXES SHIPPED UP TO NOV. 1, 1926

Sales of the Hupmobile six in the first year that the car was on the market surpassed the records of any other new car priced above $1000 in a similar period, according to R. S. Cole, general sales manager of the Hupp Motor Car Corporation.

More than 42,000 Hupmobile sixes were built and shipped up to Nov. 1, 1926, as against the previous first year record of 32,000. The car was announced in November, 1925. It broke the former record in less than nine months.

Hupmobile brought out its six following more than 11 years of designing and testing various types of six-cylinder cars and more than two years' work on the one it produced.

"Our second year sales plans for the six, now being formulated, call for a considerable increase in output to meet an enlarged demand already evident," Cole said. "An increase of 40 to 50 per cent is anticipated in our six division for 1927."

NEW BUICK CARS PAINTED TO MATCH LATEST PARIS GOWNS

Engineer Chooses Blends to Harmonize With Woman's 1927 Attire If in Mode.

Kingston Forbes, Buick body engineer, is quoted as saying that women may accept the factory paint job on their 1927 Buicks with the same confidence with which they take as correct the latest gowns from Worth or Paquin. Forbes has chosen his blends for the latest Buick models from color swatches from no less noted authorities than these. Paris designers whose exclusive shades this year will be offered in models at popular prices next year, helped him to enable a woman to pick her 1927 costumes and find when she enters her car that, providing she has bought wisely and in the mode, her gowns and her car are in harmony.

In the colorful array of new Buick models show such Americanized tints as Courier Cream, Paul Revere green, Colonial blue, Delaware green and patrol cream. These shades will greet the spring shopper in exclusive Paris creations. They are soft, crayon tints in duco.

Forbes went everywhere last year where colors and color trends originate in search of the fashion able 1927 shades. He recently returned from Europe with samples of what will be the thing 18 months from now.

The problem of education, he says, has been taken away from color experts by the public. "We thought we might have to teach women to demand colors in their cars to harmonize with their costoms," he said. "We suddenly found that the campaign of education had been completed, even to a greater extent than we believed possible. Color harmony is now accepted and sought. A few years ago, a dull, colorless paint job was the only kind the public would accept. Now they demand life and verve. But they distinguish sharply from the inharmonious. The woman who uses an automobile delights in its fashionable coloring. She realizes at once that someone has taken the trouble to give her a car both beautiful and harmonious—and what is perhaps most important of all, a car that is fashionable."

THOUSANDS SPENT BY PAIGE TO BUILD 12 SHOW CHASSIS

Each of 12 show chassis built at the Paige factory represents an expenditure of more than $3000, not counting the cost of the chassis itself. Work on the Paige and Jewett show chassis began early in September and will continue up to show time.

A standard chassis does not make a show chassis, for the visitor wants to see inside every unit of the car. To plan the "cuts" that will open up the units and yet leave all in working order is one of the difficult feats required of the designers. Then the actual cutting of the odd-shaped openings, around angles, skipping about bushings and bearings, brings more difficult problems.

After this work is completed, all parts of the chassis are prepared for examination.

Every bolt, nut and cotter pin is nickel-plated. The gears, connecting rods and dozens of other parts also are plated. The frame, cylinder block, an dother large units are lacquered in a color scheme. Some plain castings are ground and buffed; others are enameled and baked. The copper tubes of the hydraulic brake conections and the lubricating lines are polished.

Then comes the task of assembling all these finished pieces, parts and units, without marring them. The workers are different in appearance from the typical automobile mechanics.

ACTIVITIES OF BOY AND GIRL SCOUTS

METAL WORK CLASS FOR SCOUTMASTERS

Session Tuesday Evening Will Be at Bryan-Mullanphy School at 7:30.

Instruction in the hammering and etching of metals, as employed in work for the Craftwork in Metal Merit Badge, will be taught members of the Scoutmasters' Training School, at the Bryan Mullanphy School, Klemm street and Shaw avenue, by Scoutmaster Paul Schober of Troop 19, next Tuesday evening before the regular 7:30 o'clock classes start. Troop 19 had charge of the metalwork booth at the recent Boy Scout Merit Badge Exposition at the Coliseum. Scoutmaster Schober will be at the school at 7 o'clock to give instruction.

This will be the fourth meeting of the training school, which is given by the local Boy Scout Council to scoutmasters, assistant scoutmasters and troop committeemen desiring to become more efficient in scout work. Four classes are given—one introductory, and one advanced course in scout leadership, a nature study course and a class in "Boyology," or the psychological element in handling a scout troop.

Lesson on Reptiles.

A mass meeting of all classes will be held first, and "Night Games and Treasure Hunts" discussed. The nature study group, under Richard Mansfield-Jones, will take up reptiles, basing their study on both the live and preserved specimens of snakes, lizards and amphibians used as exhibits in the reptile badge booth at the merit badge show. Many of the specimens are the property of Jones, who was camp naturalist at the Irondale reservation last summer.

The "Boyology" class will have as its subject "The Moral and Religious Nature of a Boy of Scout Age." A different leader is selected for this group each meeting. The two leadership courses will continue their programs of study of the best methods of handling troops and patrols.

Hike in Forest Park.

The nature class will hold a hike in Forest Park next Saturday afternoon, meeting at the Jefferson Memorial at 2 o'clock. The men will endeavor to identify and classify various natural objects encountered and will lay a model nature trail similar to but shorter than the trail at Camp Irondale.

Twenty-three men from the school went on a week-end hike to Troop 81's cabin southwest of Eureka last Saturday and Sunday. Rain prevented an extensive outdoor program, but indoors stunts and games were substituted.

GIRL SCOUT ACTIVITIES

Each patrol dramatized a Scout law at the last meeting of Arrowhead Troop 7, a week ago Friday, and a playlet entitled "A Stroll in the Park" was given by the older girls. Plans were made for a hike in the near future. Field Captain Miss Lauris Baldwin had charge of the meeting, in the absence of the troop captain.

The girls of Troop 43 gave a Hallowen party for their mothers at St. Rose's School Monday evening. Games were played and songs sung. Cookies, made by Mary Murray, and punch, made by the other girls, was served. Mrs. Murray, the mother of Mary, agreed to teach the girls sewing, and Mrs. Pape, mother of Virginia Pape of the troop, offered to teach cooking.

Dorothy Sexaner, Dorothy Wessels and Eleanor Wessels, who have passed all but two of their second-class tests, took charge of the new tenderfeet of Coenia Troop 56 Monday evening, passing them on most of their tenderfoot tests. Games and songs completed the evening's program. Thelma Bergess of Arrowhead Troop 7 visited the troop.

A hike called for last Sunday was postponed on account of rain.

One of the patrols of Troop 1, Kirkwood, took care of the younger children of the mothers of the school, to enable the women to attend a mothers' meeting Wednesday afternoon. The other girls dressed dolls for a Christmas doll show.

Dorothy and Jane Beadles, Carol Mathey, Josephine Harris and Lillian Herron attended the Girl Scout Day Camp last Saturday. Mrs. Fitzgerald has been appointed examiner in nature study for the troop, and Mrs. Lord examiner in the history of the American flag.

The girls of Troop 23 celebrated Armistice day by taking charge of Sunday school services at the St. Marcus Evangelical Church, where they meet. After the congregation had sung "America, the Beautiful," the troop color guard entered and the girls gave their pledge of allegiance to the flag. Scout Vera Fulsom read Scriptures, and Capt. Lorenzen spoke on "Girl Scouting." "The Star Spangled Banner," "Come Where the Lake Lies Gleaming," and "The Scout Hymn," were sung by the girls. The program was concluded with a prayer by Lieut. Melva Russler.

Although not yet officially registered as Girl Scouts, the Sunflower Troop of St. Timothy Episcopal Church is practicing the "Service for others' ideal. The girls have just completed dressing six dolls, which are to be sent to an orphanage in Honolulu, as a Christmas good turn, and are now filling a basket to be delivered Thanksgiving to some needy family. The dolls were judged recently at a party, Leonore Schisler and Rosemary Gregg winning first prize for the best doll.

Seven girls already have passed their tenderfoot tests. They are Ruth Caldewe, Dorothy Fillingham, Louise Geltz, Namol Rath, Maxine Wells, Nellie Black and Leonore Schisler. The troop hopes to be able to register soon.

Troop Activities

North District.

The North District is leading at present in the returns from the sale of Merit Badge Exposition tickets, having a majority both in the number of tickets sold and in the number of troops having reported on them. Field Executive Wright urges remaining troops to make their returns at once.

Troop 3 of the Grace Hill Presbyterian Church will hike today to the Lions' Den Reservation, where 10 boys will take the cooking merit badge tests. The troop plans to challenge Troop 161 next month to a contest in signalling, first-aid, knot-tying, basketball, wrestling and boxing.

Troop 72, under Assistant Scoutmaster Howard Ayres, will hike to the Lions' Den Wednesday, and camp there the rest of the week.

A troop paper, "The Trooper," has been started by the scouts.

Thirteen scouts of Troop 92 of the Samuel Cupples School took an overnight hike to the Lions' Den Nov. 13.

Troop 197 was returned winner in a three-cornered meet with Troops 1 and 2, Overland, Nov. 6, contests being held in various scout activities.

Twenty-five scouts and Scoutmaster Arthur Frank and Mrs. Frank of Troop 122, of the Sherman Park Community Center, took an all-day hike to the woods west of Clayton a week ago today, leaving at 6:30 a. m. and arriving at the camp in an hour and a half. The day was spent on tests, each boy passing at least three. Five first-class scouts earned merit badges in cooking. This troop usually takes a hike every five or six weeks.

Troop 230 of Bellefontaine is planning a parents' and friends' night for next Friday evening. L. L. Hotchkiss, activities director of the St. Louis Council, will speak.

Troop 237 of the Pierre Laclede School is seeking a scoutmaster. The Troop Committee met last Friday to make plans for the new year.

South District.

A Fathers' Club was organized at a meeting of Troop 34 Monday evening. A committee, consisting of Messrs. Weissenborn, Bolz, Schaumberg, Werder, Koerner, Houston, Odlen, Baum and Falkenheimer, was appointed to formulate a policy for the club.

Deputy Commissioner L. A. Lang took charge of the meeting of Troop 97 a week ago Friday evening, Scoutmaster Welsh being unable to attend. Tests were passed and games played.

Scouts of Troop 215 visited Troop 143 Monday evening, joining in the program and in the games. Scoutmaster Brauer of 143, who is taking the scoutmasters' training course, give a short talk on the course. Two new scouts have joined 143.

Robert Higgins was elected senior patrol leader of Troop 155 a week ago Friday. Fred Oesterle was elected junior assistant, and Thomas Brown scribe. New patrol leaders are as follows: John Weidknecht, moose patrol; William Tubbs, silver fox; William Tremen, tiger, and Hugh Johnson, pine tree patrol. The meeting ended with an interpatrol contest, which was won by the Pine Tree patrol, with a score of 79. The troop will celebrate their second birthday Dec. 3 with a Parents' night.

Troop 217 was given a place of honor at the annual Fathers' and Sons' dinner of the Southampton Presbyterian Church a week ago Friday, the scouts and Scoutmaster George Flanagan being present in uniform. Roy de Statebler, president of the Employed Boys' Club of St. Louis, emphasized the value of scout training not only for boys, but for men. Scoutmaster William Kroeger of Troop 8 told of the days of the first scout troop in St. Louis. Members of Troop 8 were also present.

West District.

Troop 2, which won a first prize of $25 for their booth at the merit badge exposition, is using the money to buy leather-working and wood-carving outfits. Part of each Friday evening meeting is devoted to handicraft projects, and the boys are also spending their spare time in a workshop fitted up at the home of Scoutmaster E. B. Langenberg.

W. V. Weir has become scoutmaster of Troop 17 of the First United Presbyterian Church of University City.

An out-of-door program, scheduled for Troop 70 of the Jewish Community Center, last Thursday evening was canceled because Scoutmaster Schuler was unable to attend.

F. R. Gourley has become assistant scoutmaster of Troop 79 of the Union M. E. Church. He is taking the scoutmasters' training course at the Bryan Mullanphy School.

Frank Gollub's Owl Patrol last Wednesday evening took charge of the second meeting of a series that Troop 30 is holding to enable each patrol to gain leadership experience. A demonstration and talk on lariat throwing was given, and several new games taught. The Owls are leading in an interpatrol contest. Stanley Lopata is leading the individual contest.

The Flynn Park School of University City is organizing a troop of scouts, with a nucleus of six boys now in other troops in the city and 12 others of scout age. S. C. Reeves, west district executive, spoke to the boys of the [illegible] grade on the subject last [illegible]

F.O.B. DETROIT FOR COUPE

Startling Contrast between Chrysler "50" and Other Fours

The Chrysler plan of Quality Standardization differs from, and is superior to, ordinary manufacturing practice and methods, because it demands fixed and inflexible quality standards which enforce the same scrupulously close limits — the same rigid rule of engineering exactness—the same absolute accuracy and precision of alignment and assemblage—in the measurement, the machining and the manufacturing of every part, practice and process in four lines of Chrysler cars—"50", "60", "70" and Imperial "80"—so that each individual car shall be the Supreme Value in its own class.

Coupe - - $750
Roadster - 750
(Rumble Seat Extra)
Coach - - 780
Sedan - - 830

All prices f. o. b. Detroit, subject to current Federal excise tax.

Consider the prices of the Chrysler "50"—the Coupe $750, Roadster $750 (rumble seat extra), the Coach $780, the Sedan $830.

Then, if you will picture the Chrysler "50" on the one hand, and the only four remaining four-cylinder cars of large production on the other, the amazing difference between them will make your choice an astonishingly simple matter.

In beauty of appearance and furnishings, compactness, full size, family roominess, you will need no one to point out to you that the Chrysler "50" is quite alone in its field, that there really is no comparison.

This despite the fact that 60 per cent of all cars made are fours.

Since the Chrysler "50" is the product of the revolutionary Chrysler engineering and manufacturing plan of rigid inflexible Standardized Quality for all four Chrysler Cars, it is evident that the "50" cannot help but yield its 50 miles per hour, 5 to 25 miles in 8 seconds, 25 miles to the gallon—indefinitely—under conditions which would incapacitate any other four or, for that matter, any ordinary six.

Place them side by side in your mind's eye—these five cars—and then, even though you may not have realized it before, it becomes perfectly obvious that—at its price—plain common-sense logic makes the selection of Chrysler "50" inevitable.

Wilson, in Spi... H...

Closing Scenes in War President's Life Described by Friend Who Recites His Wrath Against France Over Occupation of Ruhr and His Gleeful Revision of Cabot-Lodge Limerick.

THIS is the concluding installment of "The Political Education of Woodrow Wilson," a book by his confidant, James Kerney, who was director of American information in Europe during the World War.

By JAMES KERNEY,
Editor and Publisher of Trenton (N. J.) Evening Times.
(Copyright, 1926.)

DESPITE his shattered health Woodrow Wilson never completely abandoned the hope that he might again become the standard bearer of his party. Being human he loved the glory and power of the White House. In no circumstances would he permit his intimates to commit him to any other candidacy. And he confidently expected to dictate the paramount issues in the 1924 presidential campaign, which explains much of the nervous anxiety that existed, until Wilson's death, among Democratic candidates and chieftains, particularly those practical folks who felt that the debacle of 1920 had provided a decent burial for the League of Nations.

When Wilson came home from Paris on the first trip in February, 1919, he manifested real concern over the grave after-war problems, political and industrial, that the country must face. He was interested in George L. Record's government ownership and land theories, and it is part of the history of the time that, despite the all-engrossing peace program, he seriously talked over with Tumulty the possibility that Record might have the right solution for our domestic problems. Wilson was plainly anxious over the unrest of the workers everywhere.

Met His Equals on His Trip to Paris.

But home problems were not for Wilson just then. His eyes were in the "ends of the earth," and he was battling for his 14 points and the four supplementary articles, upon the basis of which the armistice was signed. They were a magnificent addition to his Utopia. They thrilled the world, especially the weaker nations, because they issued from the most influential of rulers. But in Paris he met quite his equal in Clemenceau and Lloyd George—the latter having urged Wilson to come to Europe, knowing that if he could be got to confer in person trading would be sure to ensue. Wilson traded many things in order to keep his League of Nations intact. But the trading ceased as soon as he returned to the old environment of Washington.

Wilson's obsession for his own exclusive brand of an international conscience, and his failure to follow through with a definite post-war domestic program, mired the Democracy. He had gone far politically but had wrecked the party.

Wilson, like Lincoln, was in many respects one of the best politicians of his time. But he was a Wilson politician. His was no party leadership but party dictatorship. When he got ready he made a complete reversal of policy without any thought of its effect on the party's fortunes.

Party chieftains were plainly worried at the disintegrating Democracy. But Wilson would not heed the rumblings. The confusion of his great emotions, his iron will, his human ambitions, and his historical studies produced a strange complex that frequently found righteousness at war with itself. Surpassing all other honors he had ever coveted was that of setting up the glorious kind of world that was to come with his League of Nations.

Clashed With Bryan on Details of League.

To the consternation of the leaders of Democracy, gathered for their annual Jackson day dinner at Washington, Jan. 8, 1920, he sent a letter proposing as "the clear and single way out" that the League issue should be submitted to the people "to give the next election the form of a great and solemn referendum."

Bryan boldly opposed the Wilson position, telling the Jackson day diners that "the importance of Article 10 has been very much magnified," and urging that the treaty be ratified with such reservations as the Senate might suggest. Article 10 was Wilson's personal contribution to the League of Nations covenant. In public addresses and statements Bryan continued his course of criticism, although frequently praising Wilson as a man.

The differences between Wilson and Bryan over the covenant became an issue in the Nebraska primaries to choose delegates to the Democratic National Convention at San Francisco. Bryan won, and as a delegate to the convention offered a League of Nations plank at variance with Wilson's position. He fought for it, futilely, without emotion.

"You cannot call me an enemy of Woodrow Wilson; it was my treaty plan he took to Paris," Bryan declared in one of his oratorical flights at the convention.

Wilson, in Spite of Shattered Health, Never Abandoned Hope That His Party Would Return Him to White House

Closing Scenes in War President's Life Described by Friend Who Recites His Wrath Against France Over Occupation of Ruhr and His Gleeful Revision of Cabot-Lodge Limerick.

To His Last Hour He Hoped to Write Democratic Platform and Be Offered Renomination in 1924 — Considered Himself World's Leader in Liberal Thought—Recommended Tumulty for Senate.

PRESIDENT WILSON IN HIS DAYS AT PRINCETON AND AT THE END OF HIS CAREER.

THIS is the concluding installment of "The Political Education of Woodrow Wilson," a book by his confidant, James Kerney, who was director of American information in Europe during the World War.

By JAMES KERNEY,
Editor and Publisher of Trenton (N. J.) Evening Times.
(Copyright, 1926.)

DESPITE his shattered health Woodrow Wilson never completely abandoned the hope that he might again become the standard bearer of his party. Being human he loved the glory and power of the White House. In no circumstances would he permit his intimates to commit him to any other candidacy. And he confidently expected to dictate the paramount issues in the 1924 presidential campaign, which explains much of the nervous anxiety that existed, until Wilson's death, among Democratic candidates and chieftains, particularly those practical folks who felt that the debacle of 1920 had provided a decent burial for the League of Nations.

Surpassing all other honors he had ever coveted was that of setting up the glorious kind of world that was to come with his League of Nations.

Clashed With Bryan on Details of League.

To the consternation of the leaders of Democracy, gathered for their annual Jackson day dinner at Washington, Jan. 8, 1920, he sent a letter proposing as "the clear and single way out" that the League issue should be submitted to the people "to give the next election the form of a great and solemn referendum."

Bryan boldly opposed the Wilson position, telling the Jackson day diners that "the importance of Article 10 has been very much magnified," and urging that the treaty be ratified with such reservations as the Senate might suggest. Article 10 was Wilson's personal contribution to the League of Nations covenant. In public addresses and statements Bryan confined his course of criticism, although frequently praising Wilson as a man.

The differences between Wilson and Bryan over the covenant became an issue in the Nebraska primaries to choose delegates to the Democratic National Convention at San Francisco. Bryan won, and as a delegate to the convention offered a League of Nations plank at variance with Wilson's position. He fought for it, futilely, without emotion.

"You cannot call me an enemy of Woodrow Wilson; it was my treaty plan he took to Paris," Bryan declared in one of his oratorical flights at the convention

"I have helped him to become immortal."

On the eve of their departure for San Francisco several of the leading aspirants for the presidential nomination visited Wilson in his private apartments at the White House. None, however, was given any encouragement, and it was the common belief that he confidently expected that the convention might at least tender him a renomination.

There was never such a party distaster. Wilson's doctrine of personal government and his increasing stubborness in ignoring the Cabinet had produced a great revulsion among the voters. He was naturally irascible and subject to fits of bad temper. And he did many strange things. Soon after the San Francisco convention he summarily demanded the resignation of Postmaster-General Burleson who had been most loyal. It required considerable strategy to get Wilson to recall the peremptory order for Burleson's retirement. Up from somewhere within rose a jealous obstinacy which ruled him when it least ought to have done so. He could not help it. He was made like that. He did not, however, give any of his associates a chance to know just what he was brooding over.

Three days after the election Bryan, in an interview at Chicago, made the startling suggestion that Wilson resign, on condition that his successor, Vice President Marshall, agree to appoint the Republican President-elect, Warren G. Harding, as Secretary of State, and then himself resign, thus bringing Harding at once into the Presidential office, as the proper spirit of accepting the result of the "great and solemn referendum" for which Wilson had asked. Wilson paid no attention to the suggestion or the outcome.

After the repudiation of the Democrats and the League of Nations, Wilson, on March 4, 1921, took up his residence in a luxurious home in S street where he quietly resided for his three remaining years. He had been in public life exactly 10 years, the shortest public career of a President. Every other occupant of the White House had put in a long period of hard training, either in political jobs or the army. None had ever made the quick spectacular rise of Wilson.

Accounted Himself the Liberal Leader.

It was my privilege to spend the afternoons of October and December of 1923—he died February 3, 1924—with Wilson at his Washington home. On the occasion of these visits he made clear his belief that the liberals of the world were looking to him to lead them. Whatever historians may say, there can never be a doubt of his own intense conviction that his place was to fight what he was fond as terming the spiritual battles of humanity and democracy. It was a passion with him.

At the instance of Judge Charles F. Lynch of the Federal bench I had earlier suggested that in view of his physical breakdown he might find an easy way to emerge from his retirement and give effectual voice to his ideas by standing for the United States Senate from New Jersey — not a particularly new thought. After his retirement from the presidency John Quincy Adams was elected to the lower house of Congress where for 17 years he attracted attention and distinction by his fight against the slaveholders' Andrew Johnson, seven years after his retirement from the presidency, was elected to the United States Senate from Tennessee in 1875 and served during one short session till his death in July of that year.

We talked the senatorial situation over from all angles; the fact that Gov. Silzer did not want to run; the possibility that the independent newspapers and State forces that had put over Wilson's first political program and stood by him in his later fights, would line up again; the chance that even the solidly intrenched party machine would accept him.

Senator Frelinghuysen, piqued at his own defeat at the polls the previous year, had opened up a savage attack on his old Republican colleague, Senator Edge, whom he was seeking to destroy, regardless of the effect on the Republican party. The factional split promised well for the chance of electing a Democratic Senator. There had frequently been public discussion of having men who had served as President occupy places in the United States Senate so that the country might have full benefit of their ripe judgment. The idea at first struck his fancy.

Considered Senatorship, Dreamed of Presidency.

The idea at first struck his fancy, and at our meeting Oct. 23 he asked me to go to New York and canvass the ground with Norman Davis and Bernard M. Baruch, who, he said, "are my present political advisers."

But while appearing ready to consider the Senate as a remotely possible outlet for leadership his thoughts seemed plainly elsewhere. He was bitter in his expressions of contempt for the Senate itself and at one point he said, with a flash of the old-time vigor:

"There is only one place, you know, where I could be sure of effectively asserting that leadership."

That was the nearest I ever heard him come to a declaration of candidacy. But, as was the case of 1920, his intimates knew that he had not given up all hope that the 1924 convention might at least tender him a nomination. It was always difficult for men who have attained great place to retire voluntarily. As Bacon put it, they are "impatient of privateness even in age and sickness, which requires a shadow."

"I am going to try and look at myself as though I did not exist," he said, "to just consider the whole thing in an impersonal way. From the messages I get I realize that I am everywhere regarded as the foremost leader of the liberal thought of the world, and the hopes and aspirations of that liberal thought should find some better place of expression than in the Senate. There is only one place, you know, where I could be sure of effectively asserting that leadership.

Bitterly Contemptuous of the U. S. Senate.

"Outside the United States the Senate does not amount to a damn. And inside the United States the Senate is mostly despised. They haven't had a thought down there in 50 years.

"You know and I know that I have a temper, and if I was to go to the Senate, I would get into a row with that old Lodge, who no longer counts for anything.

"The Senate would hardly provide the place for liberal leadership that the world is seeking so sadly. Think of the people of Poland and of Czecho-Slovakia and the other countries whose freedom we gave them—they know that they owe their very national existence to me, and they are looking to me to lead them!

"When I think of that fine old fellow, Jan Smuts, for whom I have the greatest affection, and the others of liberal tendencies who are looking to me, I feel that I should do my part. My present political advisers are Bernard Baruch and Norman Davis. I am going to ask you to see them in New York and talk the situation over and get the benefit of their views. Try and see them together. Perhaps we can yet find some way out."

During our conversation Wilson repeatedly emphasized his determination to prevent any temporizing with his League policies. The 1924 Democratic candidate, he declared, would not be agreed upon until the national convention was two or three days old. Meanwhile he expected to lay before the delegates a program of principles that would bring vindication at the polls. There was to be no backing down.

It was impossible to pin him down to writing anything, however. Frequently he spoke of finding a way of assisting liberal thought, but aside from a remarkable radio speech in November, he did nothing.

We talked of many other things. When I entered the library he was seated in a big chair by the fireplace. He was most cordial in his words of welcome, but remarked sadly:

By him stood the ever-faithful Edith Bolling Galt Wilson, mistress of the home, whose life and activities for four years had been devoted to the incurable invalid. After the exchange of greetings, Mrs. Wilson retired and I took a seat beside the crushed form.

Bruised and faded, he was still clinging to his rainbow. There would be flashes of hope that the vision of freeing mankind from storms and sorrows would yet come true, then sad periods of dejection. The hair was thin and white, the jaw drooped. He mostly looked straight ahead, not directly at you. A twisted half-smile occasionally softened lines carved deep by struggle and suffering. The pallor of long confinement was on the cheek.

Gone was the upstanding figure that a dozen years earlier had so blithely and confidently met Smith, Nugent and me in the lovely old mansion at Princeton. Gone, too, was the simplicity of those happier times. The spacious rooms and formal furnishings of the S. street house were in marked contrast with the cozy atmosphere of the Princeton home.

His spirit appeared to be badly shot that October day. The morning newspapers had printed official denials of one of those periodic news-ticker rumors of his death. I think the visit of David Lloyd George on the previous afternoon had been a bit of a disappointment, too. According to the former President about all Lloyd George appeared to want to hear was a repetition of some of the limericks with which Wilson had regaled the European statesmen at Paris and Versailles.

Self-Confidence His Strength and Weakness.

We shifted the conversation to old times in New Jersey. His mood mellowed a bit. He smiled at the news that Nugent had again captured the Essex County Democratic organization.

"Nugent is a strange fellow, and while we had some powerful disagreements I always had a sneaking feeling of regard for him," Wilson declared. He was likewise keenly interested in the fights that George Silzer as Governor had been making in New Jersey.

When the time came for his afternoon automobile ride I took my leave, assuring him that I would go to New York at an early date and talk over the Senatorship, as well as the situation in general with Baruch and Davis.

"I hope God will bless you and your family with good health and every happiness," he said as we shook hands in parting.

During the 13 years since Wilson had come conspicuously into public life I had, from a friendly seat on the side lines, been given an occasional glimpse of most of his confidential advisers. I doubt if any of them ever had his complete confidence. It was not the Wilson way. At Princeton he had been both the best loved and worst hated member of the faculty. In his public career it was the same. His supreme self-confidence was perhaps his biggest handicap as well as his most outstanding virtue.

Suggested Tumulty or W. M. Daniels for Senate.

A few days later I received from him a letter dated Oct. 30, 1922, suggesting Tumulty for the Senatorship as a man "whose political training has been more varied than that of any other man I know," and one who "would make some of the reactionary Senators sit up and take notice of the arrival of modern times and circumstances."

Despite the unhappy estrangement Wilson never lost his admiration for Tumulty's public experience and service. Wilson likewise suggested Winthrop M. Daniels.

Nov. 1, 1923, the day after the receipt of this letter, Baruch took me to the home of Davis in New York, where he spent several hours discussing the whole situation. The feeling of both men was that the former President would be merely hurrying his death by becoming a candidate for any office. That had been my own feeling as I walked down town from the Wilson home in Washington. The suggestion of the names of Tumulty and Daniels was, of course, not practical. Neither had lived in New Jersey for a decade.

When I went back to see Wilson on Dec. 7 he was in better spirits. His eye was bright, his mind fairly flashed with sharp things, and he had some of the snap that characterized the earlier days at Trenton and Washington. He reclined in a big steamer chair, wrapped comfortably in blankets, on the upper sun porch of his home. It was as balmy as springtime in Paris and we chatted for nearly an hour.

He felt that the reception that had been given his Armistice day radio speech showed the swing of the pendulum back in his direction. And he did not hesitate to say so. When I reminded him that there was something of an international furore over his radio reference to the "sinister climax" of France and Italy as having "made waste paper of the treaty of Versailles," he fired back, in a spirited voice: "I would like to see Germany clean up France. And I would like to meet Jusserand and tell him that to his face."

The French tactics in the Ruhr had especially aroused his contempt, and the remark was, of course, an expression of his disgusted attitude at what he then regarded as the French bad faith, ingratitude and avarice, in view of America's generosity in winning the war.

When Marshal Foch made his triumphal tour of America in October and November, 1921, Wilson had not seen him. The former President was conviently ill on the day that Foch visited the S street home in Washington, although he had been motoring the previous day, and was able to be at Arlington for the burial of the Unknown Soldier a few days later.

Wilson was plainly disgusted with the French politicians when he talked with me in December. None among them, he said, save Louis Loucheur, had told him the truth. Stanley Baldwin's recent defeat was a good thing, not only for England, but for its effect on Poincare, "who is a bully," he added.

The death of Bonar Law had saddened Wilson very much. He felt just then that the topsy-turvy world was never so hard driven for wise statesmen; statesmen not devoted to self or nation but to mankind.

Throughout his political career Wilson had conflicting emotions about British methods. At times he appeared to be strongly pro-British as Page. At other times he was quite vehement in his denunciation of British intrigue.

England, with its talent for high politics, with the cleverest diplomats never sleeping on the job, was then shrewdly maneuvering America out of the chance of being the strongest Power in the world at the disarmament conference. But Wilson appeared to feel that somehow and in some way his own scheme for saving civilization would yet prevail and America would get proper recognition.

But he had no faith in existing Republican regime.

Wilson's View of Hughes and President Coolidge.

"His master's voice has spoken," was his breezy comment on President Coolidge's message to Congress of the previous day. The message did not breathe one human hope, he said, but it would insure the renomination of Coolidge by the business crowd. Of the administration's World Court idea he said:

"They don't know where they're drifting. Hughes is at sea and they have no program."

The Republican stupidity, he declared, would give the Democrats their great chance, and he meant to see to it that there was no surrender to the "pocketbook brigade."

He was much disappointed at the enthusiastic way so many leading Democrats appeared to be abandoning liberal principles and ideals in what he termed their anxiety to get their income taxes reduced.

He despised the traffic in prestige by those who had won the great prizes of governmental office. Happily for him he passed on before learning that the oil revelations had involved members of his own official household. There is no secret about the resentment he felt at the officials of his administration who resigned before their time was out, in order to earn big fees. His prestige was not for sale in any market.

It was an impossible task to pin him down to writing for publication. He did virtually none of it after he got into official life. There was a great deal of discussion between us on that last December afternoon regarding the method by which he was going to win adoption for his program for political regeneration. But he reached no decision. When I suggested that it would be desirable for him to draft an article for some friendly magazine, to be followed by others that might be broadcast through one of the newspaper syndicates, he replied:

"The kind of writing you suggest for me is the particular kind in which I have had no practice, and the kind least suited to what I believe to be my best literary method. I shall have to find—and no doubt I shall find—other means of assisting liberal thought."

"Do you think President Harding died of overwork?" he inquired at one turn in the conversation, and there was an approving nod of the Wilson head when I suggested that Presidents were "more apt to die of over-fretting."

He was much interested in a recent speech that I had heard Alexander Meiklejohn, former President of Amherst, deliver at the Nassau Club at Princeton, in which the faculty got some refreshingly frank views on the relationship of alumni and trustees to educators. Wilson told me that Meiklejohn had recently come to see him and had talked over his hope of starting a genuinely independent and liberal college in America.

"Why start a new one? Why not buy up one of the old ones? They're all for sale. Princeton was sold two or three times under my nose," was his reply to the Meiklejohn suggestion, as Wilson related it to me.

He got a lot of fun out repeating the revised version of the old Boston quatrain, "where the Lowells talk only to Cabots and the Cabots talk only to God."

"You recall," he said, "how that Jewish family of Kabotchike tried to change their name to Cabot, and how the Cabots went to court seeking an injunction, and so the limerick had to be made over?" And then, with a merry twinkle, he repeated the revision:

I come from good old Boston,
The home of the bean and the cod;
Where the Lodges can't speak to the Cabots
'Cause the Cabots speak Yiddish, begod.

There was some yarning. With considerable glee he repeated a couple of Alice Roosevelt Longworth's best stories about President Coolidge and Gen. Sawyer. When I rose to go he cordially urged me to "come back soon." It was my good fortune to have enjoyed a most happy relationship with him from the beginning.

Wilson never had a chance to put into concrete form the great dreams he was dreaming in his closing months and which he had discussed with me a few weeks before the end came. He passed off still hungering not only for the leadership of his own party but for the leadership of the liberal thought of the world.

Breaking with intimates appeared inevitable with Wilson. His temper was difficult to keep in check and he forgot the feelings of others when he had his own purpose to serve. These ruptures came when Wilson was in mental anguish and bordering on his last great affliction.

Pleased by Friendly Attitude of Public.

As a sick man Wilson became a sincere object of friendly interest among the people of Washington, and he thoroughly enjoyed the adulation accorded him while motoring over the highway. The applause that invariably greeted his Saturday night visits to the theater, as well as when his pictures were thrown on the screen, added much to his happiness.

He got a thrill out of the rollicking performances of knock-about comedians and never tired of the moving pictures. He had never mingled much in the White House days, being suspicious of social attentions. He would not accept honorary membership in the Metropolitan Club or the Chevy Chase Golf Club. He had no free-and-easy Bohemian friends such as were wont to gather at the popular Archie Butt's rendezvous in the Roosevelt days. There were no gossiping substations in the Wilson regime. Until his second marriage he rarely boarded the Mayflower, the luxurious yacht maintained for presidential use.

"We live in our visions," Wilson truly said of himself."

He passed away at a time when the world was still racked by the bitter personalities the World War had aroused. The verdict of history, at which he so diligently aimed, will not be hurried.

—that's the new Chandler message!

The New Standard Six Sedan
$995
f. o. b. Cleveland

THOUSANDS of people seem to have the impression that Chandler is a high-priced car—simply because Chandler looks expensive, and because so many Chandlers are owned by families of wealth.

This is all very complimentary to Chandler, but let's get the facts straight. The new prices of the 1927 Chandler closed models now start as low as $995 and do not go above $1795, f. o. b. factory. The latter price is for the new Chandler Big-Six 7-passenger Sedan!

The New Metropolitan Big-Six Sedan
f. o. b. Cleveland

And these new Chandler models are the finest—the smartest—the best-performing Chandlers ever built—all equipped with Chandler's "One Shot" system of centralized chassis lubrication; an air cleaner; an oil purifier; 4-wheel brakes; thermostatic water control; self-adjusting spring shackles—a list of advantages as long as your arm.

Don't jump at buying a car until you take a trial spin in a Chandler.

QUART OF WATER CLEANS KIDNEYS

Take a Little Salts if Your Back Hurts, or Bladder Is Troubling You

No man or woman can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Eating too much rich food creates acids, which excites the kidneys. They become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood. Then we get sick. Rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness often come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidney, or your back hurts, begin drinking a quart of water each day, also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, and in a few days your kidneys may act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush and stimulate the kidneys; also to help neutralize the acids in the system, so they no longer cause irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby often avoiding serious kidney complications.

Home-made Remedy Stops Cough Quickly

Finest cough medicine you ever used. Family supply easily made. Saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant—children like it, and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid, too, for bronchitis, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract and paintable guaiacol, famous for healing the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

be sent all Suburban District leaders when the new date is selected.

Troop 85, Clayton 2, and Webster Groves 2 are due to register this week.

L. L. Hotchkiss, activities director of the St. Louis Boy Scout Council, addressed the Webster Groves Rotary Club at their noon luncheon at the First Congregational Church last Friday. An Eagle, a Life and a Star scout from Webster troops also took part in the program.

Troop 85, which has a registration of 100, is working to register 100 per cent this week. 80 members having signed. This troop, under Scoutmaster Bell, is one of the largest in this section of the country.

Troop 1, Valley Park, is now being organized under the leadership of Charles C. Scholl, cashier of the bank at Manchester. The boys interested in the troop have met several times to expect to register at an early date.

The boys in the district of the Central School, at Price and Bonhomme roads, are considering the organization of a troop at the school.

Arthur Hunter has resigned as scoutmaster of Troop 5, Webster Groves, as business affairs are keeping him out of the city most of the time.

Fifty members of the Men's Club of the Emanuel Episcopal Church entertained 55 of the 56 scouts of Troop 8, Webster Groves, at a supper last Wednesday evening. The missing scout was ill. Bush Haworth, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A., and Scoutmaster R. A. Williams spoke. A new four-piece troop orchestra played, and Scout Jimmie George, with scout members of the church choir, led the singing. R. W. Williams, president of the Men's Club, presided.

Troop 11, Webster Groves, took an overnight hike last Saturday and Sunday, spending the night in the woods in lean-tos built by the scouts, despite the cold, rainy weather. Twelve tests were passed, 10 by the Owl patrol, which, as a result, added heavily to its score in an inter-patrol contest being carried on by the troop.

The committee of Troop 14, Webster Groves, of the Webster Sunday School, will be hosts to the entire troop at the U. S. Marine Band concert at Washington University next Wednesday.

MOVIE MADE OF SCOUT HIKE

Taken of Troop 11 Trip to Farm Near Florissant.

Many troops have books of photographs of their activities, but Troop 11 of the new Y. M. H. A. introduced a new departure a week ago Sunday by taking moving pictures of a troop hike to Nelson's farm, near Florissant, and showing them at their meeting last Wednesday. Views were taken of the scouts on the way to the camp, and at the camp, building fires, cooking, making nature study, and passing tests. The camera is the property of Acting Scoutmaster S. L. Wisebart, and it is planned to use it to keep a record of the troop's outstanding performances.

STORY RECORDS WALES AS APOLOGIZING FOR HIS TITLE

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The Prince of Wales once humorously apologized for his royal title, according to one of several new stories about him in Maj. F. E. Verney's book, "H. R. H. — a Character Study," which has just appeared. The Prince, as a junior midshipman on the battleship Hindustan, was found by a Lieutenant in the wardroom, sacred to the ranks of sub-Lieutenants and upwards.

"What's your name?" demanded the Lieutenant, "and what the deuce are you doing in the wardroom?"

The Prince slid to his feet—"Wales, sir," said he. "The Captain brought me in here. I hope you don't mind frightfully."

"W-h-a-t? You cheeky young devil; get out of this before I kick"—— He paused and took a good look at the offender. "Dammit! I believe you are Wales."

The Prince grinned apologetically. "Sorry, sir; I believe I am, too—"but I can't help it."

Madame Olga Warren, American soprano, is announced for a song recital at Sheldon Auditorium on Thursday evening, Dec. 9. This is Madame Warren's introduction to St. Louis. Leo C. Miller will be at the piano.

EX-KAISER'S SON OPPOSES RESTORATION OF MONARCHY

Prince Adalbert's Offer of Services to Republic Caused Quarrel With Father.

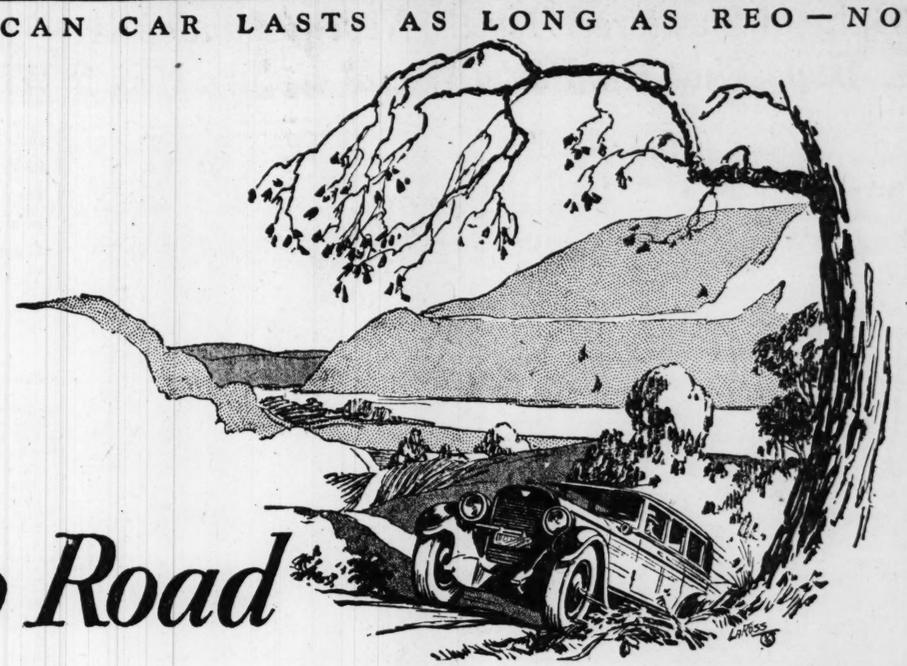
By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 20.—The Hohenzollerns are far from united in favor of the restoration of the monarchy. Prince Adalbert, third son of former Emperor William, shortly after the revolution in November, 1918, wired President Ebert, placing his services at the disposal of the republic.

"Unlike Prince Henry (the Kaiser's brother), I consider it my duty," he said, "to support the newly elected government with every means at my disposal."

The bitter quarrel that ensued between the Prince and his father because of this declaration has never been entirely adjusted. The Prince also resented his father's remarriage.

NOT ONE AMERICAN CAR LASTS AS LONG AS REO—NOT ONE



The Reo Road

That carefree, comfortable highway whose end is three years farther on

There's a highway in every Reo . . . just as there is one in every automobile.

It's the same highway for all cars in some ways . . . it begins at the dealer's door and ends at the junk-pile . . . it runs South, East, North and West as the drivers of the highway choose.

But the kind of road you find, the kind of travel you enjoy, the cost of going, and the end of the road are different.

So the man who wants his highway more pleasant and of lower cost, who desires to enjoy the scenes along the road or keep his mind free for the duties of the day, buys a Reo.

The Different Reo Road

Reo owners find a different highway built into their Reos . . . a highway whose end is three years farther on than that of the average American car.

A highway whose twists and turns are more easily followed because Reo's full balloon tires are forced to obey more quickly, with less effort, with fewer turns of the steering wheel than are found on ordinary cars.

A highway more comfortable through Reo's generous long, long springs, lighter weight, deep upholstery and seats whose width and height assure freedom from fatigue on even the longest rides.

No Other Road So Free From Care

The Reo road is a pleasant road, for Reos are so built that they seldom need repairs—any garage man along any road knows that.

And when they do need repairs—for every automobile needs maintenance some time—those who follow the Reo road find that the Reo is so designed that repairs can be made more quickly than on ordinary cars so that less time is lost . . . and many repairs are cheaper.

Any Reo man will gladly show you why Reos so seldom need repairs—how Reo saves time and money when repairs must be made. See one today.

Exceptional? Yes . . . Uncommon? No!

J. H. Williams, of Chicago, bought a Reo that had already traveled over 100,000 miles. He drove it 32,645 miles with a total repair expense of less than $50.00. At last reports that Reo was still keeping on going . . .

Matt Gardner, of Ohio, ran his car only 31,000 miles and it cost him $8.95 for repairs. V. G. Kennedy, actor, whose home port is New York City, bought Model S, 95,787, when it was five years old and had covered over 100,000 miles. He added enough more of the Reo road to make the total mileage 256,102.

Exceptional records? Yes, for the ordinary car or the extraordinary car. Uncommon? Not for followers of the Reo road.

Try the Reo Road Yourself

Drop into a Reo dealer's today. Ask him to take you out for a spin on the Reo road—the pleasant highway whose end is three years farther on than that of the average American car. See Reo's distinctive good-looks for yourself. Try out its comfort and handle its easy controls. Then you'll know why Reo owners prefer the Reo road.

SEVERAL things brought about the closing of the American Theater for a couple of weeks with some more dark time to follow. Among the attractions booked into the Market street house for this month were Eddie Cantor and Leon Errol. Although Florenz Ziegfeld did not know it until the last minute Cantor had little intention of going back on the stage this season. Enormous offers from motion picture producers to act before the screen and to make personal appearances in the cinema houses made it easy for Cantor to forget the stage shows and then, with his nights free, came the opportunity for him to become a radio star at another enormous salary. Cantor did just what "you would have done.

Errol, for some unknown reason, decided that he would take a trip to Europe this month. He has already made more than a year's stage salary in the movies and that field is open to him whenever he comes back.

A third show booked into the American this month was the successful musical comedy "Tip Toes." This piece went into Chicago for a run of eight weeks after which it was to come here. Five weeks was enough in the windy city and the piece has closed its tour.

Poor business is not confined to the "legit" houses, however. The picture theaters the country over are feeling the effect of the amusement depression and while at the local film palaces the receipts have not fallen off as badly as they have elsewhere the weekly intake is far from the expectations of the managers.

MANY explanations are offered for the slump the most common one being that the time payment automobile and its upkeep is largely responsible. The entertainment provided by the radio, however, is probably the largest factor on keeping people away from the showhouses. Take, for instance the program which was thrown into the air and heard by, in all probability, more than 10,000,000 people last Monday night when the newly formed National Broadcasting Co. For four hours radio listeners were entertained by Mary Garden, Will Rogers, Titta Ruffo, Harold Bauer, Weber and Fields, the New York Oratorio Society, the New York Symphony, Goldman's Band, a light opera company and three dance orchestras.

Where and how could a stage attraction be got together to present such an array of entertainers. Certainly it would not be possible at $50 a seat yet the audience of ten million listened in for nothing at all and was pretty well satisfied. It does not seem likely that students of the box office need turn to automobiles or any thing else to find out why business is bad.

Stage Throughout Country Is in State of Depression

Local Theaters Continue Dark for Want of Attractions. Picture Houses Also Hit and the Enormous Radio Programs With World Famous Stars Is Blamed for Bad Business.

COMMENT was made in these columns last week on the fact that the St. Louis legitimate theaters were dark. They still remain without dramatic attractions and from all over the country come reports of a theatrical depression which is causing the managers no end of worry. Even in New York the lack of patronage is being felt, there being empty seats in the theaters where some of the biggest hits are housed. The musical comedy "Sunny" at the New Amsterdam theater, for instance, which had been doing around $45,000 a week suddenly dropped to $30,000, a figure at which it cannot continue profitably. Here in St. Louis week before last the pretty and pleasing "Dearest Enemy," with its original cast and a long record of success in New York played to less than $9000 for the nine performances at the American Theater.

SEVERAL things brought about the closing of the American Theater for a couple of weeks with some more dark time to follow. Among the attractions booked into the Market street house for this month were Eddie Cantor and Leon Errol. Although Florenz Ziegfeld did not know it until the last minute Cantor had little intention of going back on the stage this season. Enormous offers from motion picture producers to act before the screen and to make personal appearances in the cinema houses made it easy for Cantor to forget the stage shows and then, with his nights free, came the opportunity for him to become a radio star at another enormous salary. Cantor did just what you would have done.

Errol, for some unknown reason, decided that he would take a trip to Europe this month. He has already made more than a year's stage salary in the movies and that field is open to him whenever he comes back.

A third show booked into the American this month was the successful musical comedy "Tip Toes." This piece went into Chicago for a run of eight weeks after which it was to come here. Five weeks was enough in the windy city and the piece has closed its tour.

Poor business is not confined to the "legit" houses, however. The picture theaters the country over are feeling the effect of the amusement depression and while at the local film palaces the receipts have not fallen off as badly as they have elsewhere the weekly intake is far from the expectations of the managers.

MANY explanations are offered for the slump the most common one being that the time payment automobile and its upkeep is largely responsible. The entertainment provided by the radio, however, is probably the largest factor on keeping people away from the showhouses. Take, for instance the program which was thrown into the air and heard by, in all probability, more than 10,000,000 people last Monday night by the newly formed National Broadcasting Co. For four hours radio listeners were entertained by Mary Garden, Will Rogers, Titta Ruffo, Harold Bauer, Weber and Fields, the New York Oratorio Society, the New York Symphony, Goldman's Band, a light opera company and three dance orchestras.

Where and how could a stage attraction be got together to present such an array of entertainers. Certainly it would not be possible at $50 a seat yet the audience of ten million listened in for nothing at all and was pretty well satisfied. It does not seem likely that students of the box office need turn to automobiles or any thing else to find out why business is bad.

THE Monday night radio program was a remarkable one and the effect on the theaters in the east and middle west was immediate. So sudden was the slump in business in New York that evening that a national theatrical magazine sent a telegram to every large "legitimate" theater and picture house in the country asking for a report on business and whether or not the managers believed that the radio offering had kept show patrons at home. The answers were what might have been expected. Theater managers in the cities always talk about their business in big figures for publication. They are always "standing them up" or "holding them out" and so the replies which the magazine got were to the effect that business was normal throughout the country in the larger towns. The showmen of the smaller cities, who are not so accustomed to press agent methods and whose nightly business is reasonably familiar to their show-going public, were more frank and reported their receipts off about 15 per cent. They were probably conservative.

As a matter of fact, right here in St. Louis, last Monday night was one of the worst Monday nights the picture houses have experienced in a long time although the report went to New York—for publication—that business was normal.

THE public is interested, naturally, in who pays for the radio programs, and why. Monday nights' offering was in the nature of a gift to radio fans as an advertising stunt by a new concern formed, frankly, for advertising patronage. National advertisers will be invited, nay urged, to take certain hours at the broadcasting studio to tell the large audiences about their wares. The cost to those who seek this medium for publicity will be great and this income will go to pay, in part, for the special artists engaged in addition to performers supplied by the advertisers themselves—the Aunt Bambino's Pancake Flour Quartet, the Sheep Lined Underwear Co.'s dance orchestra and the like.

Last Monday night's program is officially reported to have cost

"Second Thoughts -- on -- First Nights"

By Alexander Woollcott.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.

THE week just closing was made distinguished by the revival of Shaw's "Pygmalion" at the Guild Theater—a goodish revival, marked by the brilliant performance of Lynn Fontanne in the role which Mrs. Patrick Campbell played when the comedy was new in America a dozen years ago.

This is the play about a latter day Galatea, a draggle-tail, yowling flower girl picked up out of the Convent Garden market and made into a Duchess by a master of the minuet for the vowels and consonants. It is Shaw at his second best but even Shaw at his second best sets such a bracing pace for the average mortal that, in comparison, our walks with most playwrights seem as exhilarating as a turn down the avenue with a two-year-old companion.

SO swift is the headlong current of this age that we are already looking upon the living Shaw as if we were posterity. Already his earlier plays have the sobriety of classics and they recur like classics in the programs of New York.

In recent seasons old plays of his have thus kept on for him in stray corners of the world and his faithful America sends him a not untidy sum every year. This revenue has amounted in some recent seasons to as much as $75,000, which sum is here crudely mentioned if only to suggest that the award of the Nobel prize to Bernard Shaw the other day had he accepted the cash, which he did not, as well as the honor, would have added a drop in the bucket of one whom the world of common people had already enriched.

His right to that award seems to me incontestable. His receiving it was less remarkable than the immense calm with which the world received the news that he had received it. A few short years ago and there would have been fearful editorial snorts at a tribute to so disturbing a fellow. But eventually the panting world catches up with its great men, and Shaw at 70 is canonized by universal applause. Or almost universal. When the award was announced this week, reporters scurried about town for expressions of opinion. Prof. Brander Matthews was disturbed in his retreat on Morningside Heights. "Shaw doesn't deserve it," said the professor, as far as I could learn from the interview, then lapsed into moody silence.

"PYGMALION" was swept into success in the spring of 1914 by the wave of excitement caused in London when Mrs. Campbell, as Eliza Doolittle, uttered the famous elaculation, "Not bloody likely." By thinking back over some of the expressions I have heard when (unavoidably) I have been in low company, it is quite possible for me to think of a word or two which could produce a like agitation if spoken today on the New York stage. But I could not print such words in these chaste columns.

For reasons permanently obscure to the American mind, your Englishman regards the epithet "bloody" as outlawed, and when

Bright Program For "Pop" Concert At Odeon Today

Innovation Will Be a Demonstration of Orchestral Instruments — John Kiburz, Flutist, to Be the Soloist.

ST. LOUIS music lovers will hear the "Merrymaker's Dance," "Pastoral Dance" and "Country Dance" from Edward German's "Nell Gwyn" suite, on the program of the orchestra's "Pop" Concert at the Odeon at 3:15 p. m. today.

On today's program John F. Kiburz, solo flutist of the orchestra, is soloist and will play the "Concert Piece for Flute and Orchestra" by Mme. Cecil Chaminade. An innovation of the program is a demonstration of orchestral instruments, to familiarize the audience with them and with their part in the orchestral ensemble. Ganz has introduced it into the "Pop" because of the interest in the demonstrations of the Children's Concerts, the first series of which is all subscribed, while the second subscription list is rapidly being filled.

Two numbers familiar to Municipal Opera goers, appear on the program today. They are Flotow's "Overture to Martha" and Victor Herbert's "March of the Toys" from "Babes in Toyland."

In detail the program is:

1. March, "Pomp and Circumstance" ..... Edgar
2. Overture to "Martha" ..... Von Flotow
3. Concert Piece for Flute and Orchestra ..... Chaminade
4. Demonstration of Instruments.
5. Three dances from the "Nell Gwyn" Suite ..... German
6. "March of the Toys" from "Babes in Toyland" ..... Herbert

BEHIND THE SCREENS

"WHAT PRICE GLORY," the William Fox picturization of The stage play by Laurence Stallings and Maxwell Anderson, after a wait of two years for the spoken drama to close throughout the United States, finally came to the screen for its world premiere at the Carthay Circle Theater, Los Angeles, last Friday and will have its New York opening at the Sam H. Harris Theater tomorrow. Victor McLaglen, a veritable soldier of fortune, gold prospector and one-time prize fighter who once fought Jack Johnson, has the role of Capt. Flagg. Edmund Lowe, well-known screen star, is Sergt. Quirt. Dolores Del Rio, a Mexican girl, who is fairly new to the screen, plays Carmaine. Ted McNamara and Sammy Cohen are the Privates Kiper and Lipinsky, respectively. Others in the cast include William V. Mong as "Cognac Pete," Phyllis Haver, Leslie Fenton, Barry Norton and Elena Juardo. The film was seven months in the making and employs a cast of thousands.

Ken Maynard this week began work in Burbank, Cal, on "Somewhere South of Sonora." Kathleen Collins is playing opposite Maynard.

The supporting cast in Harry Langdon's "Long Pants," now being filmed at the First National studios in California, has been completed and includes Gladys Brockwell, Al Roscoe, Alma Bennett and Frankie Darro.

Paul Ellis, newcomer to the films, who a few months ago was a bullfighter in Mexico City, has been engaged to fill the role of an impetuous lover in Corinne Griffith's new film, "Purple and Fine Linen," which went into production last week. Ellis will have the third principal male role in the new picture. The other two are to be filled by John Bowers and Hobart Bosworth. Ellis is a native of Argentine.

Neil Hamilton is the latest name added to the cast of "The Music Master," screen version of the David Belasco—David Warfield stage play. "The Music Master" has gone into production in New York under the direction of Allan Dwan. Alec B. Francis portrays the role made famous by Warfield. Lois Moran is the young girl in the story and others in the cast are Leo Feodoroff, Armand Cortes and Marcia Harris.

King Baggot has been signed to direct a screen version of "The River," a novel by Patrick Hastings. Production, with Doris Kenyon and Lewis Stone in the leading roles, is scheduled to start at First National's Burbank studios about Dec. 5. The title of "The River" will be changed.

Millard Webb is to direct "Here Y'Are, Brother," the Dixie Willson story, in which featured roles will be played by Lewis Stone, Lloyd Hughes and Billie Dove. June

Screen Comedy Pair Splits After Making Two Films

Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton, of Whom Much Was Expected, Fail to Hang Together—From the Undertaking Parlor to the Screen.

WHILE no one will admit just what the trouble was the much heralded combination for screen comedy purposes of Wallace Beery and Raymond Hatton has come to the parting of the ways. Paramount expected great things of this teaming up of funny men. They made one picture, "Behind the Front," which was a mild success, and followed it with "We're in the Navy Now," which started a 10-day engagement at the Missouri Theater last Wednesday. Then something happened. Both stars are said to be excessively temperamental and trouble has been brewing almost from the moment that their first film was started.

A third picture, "Casey at the Bat," was ready to go into production when suddenly the announcement came from Hollywood that Ford Sterling, and not Hatton, would work with Beery when the film got under way. Whatever caused the break, it is certain that the failure of the two stars to stick together caused many a heartache in the Famous Players-Lasky offices. An expensive cast was gotten together for "We're in the Navy Now" and plans had been made for topnotch productions for the pair in the future.

All of the leading players in "We're in the Navy Now" came to the screen by way of the legitimate stage. Beery has a ponderous record in "legit," having played throughout the East and Midwest in vaudeville, stock and musical comedy. Therefore, he came to the screen already a veteran and easily hurdled the barriers of comedy at a time when motion pictures were a novelty rather than an institution.

Hatton began his stage career at the age of 14. He developed his talent by playing in stock companies and entered screen work more than 10 years ago, having been before the camera ever since.

Chester Conklin, appearing as the transport captain of "We're in the Navy Now," played stock and served an apprenticeship in a circus, clowning. He finally found himself stranded in Los Angeles, took a $3 a day job as a comedy cop and—the rest you know.

Even Tom Kennedy has had a taste of stage life. Following his rise to eminence as a promising contender for heavyweight prize ring honors, Tom took a short "flyer" in vaudeville.

Lorraine Eason, feminine lead, played on Broadway for two seasons. Florenz Ziegfeld took Miss Eason out of musical comedy and put her in the "Follies."

Donald Keith first appeared in amateur theatrical productions while still at college. Later, Keith scarcely reached his twenties when he was won over to the cinema.

Edward Sutherland, who directed "We're in the Navy Now," is likewise a graduate of the "old school." He joined the picture colony as an actor but soon switched to directing.

MOTION PICTURES have drawn its sponsors from some fields which, by no wide stretch of the imagination, could be linked up with art. There are harsh critics who say that the fact that former fur trimmers, chauffeurs, motormen or buttonhole workers who got into the game when it was young are responsible for the bad taste so frequently displayed on the screen, but the former tradesmen, who had the foresight to believe in the future of the infant industry, can, for the most part, snap their fingers and point with pride at their accomplishments. In their bringing up they were never taught that pointing was rude and that pride goeth before a fall.

The natural assumption would be that the last place in the world to find a sense of humor would be an undertaker's parlor.

Yet it was from the funereal atmosphere that the motion picture business obtained one of its successful directors of comedy, Richard Wallace, who handled the megaphone on "Syncopating Sue," Corinne Griffith's comedy starring vehicle showing at the Ambassador Theater this week.

Wallace, who started his business life as an undertaker, decided to resign from that field and become a vaudeville actor.

As an actor Wallace, who was born in Sacramento, Cal., played in vaudeville skits in the West and then tried his hand in the picture game. Going to Hollywood, he aligned himself with Mack Sennett, the "father" of screen comedy, and got his first insight into picture making as a film cutter.

A few months in the cutting room and Wallace was entrusted with more important duties. He co-directed one comedy with the late William Desmond Taylor and followed this up with the direction of several series of short comedies.

He directed Buck Jones and Eileen Percy in a number of pictures, going back to Sennett to direct Ben Turpin in a series.

Later on the Hal Roach comedy lot Wallace was the directorial genius of the Clyde Cook comedies, and a series of two-reelers featuring such film luminaries as Claude Gillingwater, Theda Bara, Gertrude Astor and Ethel Clayton. His last picture for Roach was

"Turandot" a Triumph On First Presentation As Metropolitan Opera

New York Music Lovers Captivated by Crashing Magnificence and Teeming Color of Posthumous Puccini Work.

BY RICHARD L. STOKES.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.

"SLEEP! Forget! Liu—poetic spirit!" So the compassionate voice of the chorus breathed a benediction upon that steadfast maid, slain by her own hand. As the mourners wound from the stage, a hush fel throughout the Metropolitan Opera House. It was the most eloquent tribute in all the fulminating homage which saluted the American premiere of "Turandot," last Tuesday night.

For at this point in the score there slipped forever from the grasp of Giacomo Puccini the mellifluous pen which had sung of Tosca, Mimi and Cio-Cio-San. As in the tragic bas-relief of Daniel Chester French, death stayed the hand of a maker of beauty in the full flush of his master-work.

That, I believe, will prove the rank of "Turandot." It is not merely that the composer deserted the intimate miniatures of his previous operas and undertook for the first time a heroic canvas. The familiar Puccini again tunes his lay in the music for the slave girl, Liu. But on the whole, there is a revolution of style.

This is no less than an abandonment of traditional Italian melody for the more dramatic and close-fitting song-speech of Bayreuth. One by one are the Etruscan lyricists engulfed in the vortex of Richard Wagner's genius. Future commentators will have reason to define "Turandot" as a work of the later Puccini, as "Otello" and "Falstaff" are creations of the later Verdi.

A Popular Triumph.

How other audiences will in time regard this defection of the prince of modern operatic melodists lies on the knees of the gods. Last night's gathering was as captivated by the score, with its energy, teeming color, sharp expressiveness and unfailing sense of the theater, as it was by the crashing magnificence of the stage spectacle. The curtain calls after each act passed enumeration, and in the air tingled that thrill of rejoicing which bespeaks a popular triumph.

The curtain rose upon the walls of the great violet city of Pekin, with the Temple of Heaven wavering aloft in the distance. Beneath the bastions milled a throng dressed in all the exotic hues of Chinese porcelain—peacock blue, green jade, amethyst, rose, the blossoms of plum and peach, oxblood, cream and lacquer red. Among them appeared ancient Timur, dethroned King of Tartary; his son, Prince Calaf; and their devoted attendant, Liu.

From the ramparts a mandarin chanted the death sentence of the Prince of Persia. He had failed to solve the three enigmas which Princess Turandot, a hater of men, proposed as a test for her suitors. Executioners rushed upon the walls, and to a savage chorus sharpened a gigantic knife upon a grindstone. Towards the glow of the rising moon—the hour of execution—every line on the stage swept up like a tide.

The doomed Prince, rapt in ecstacy by memories of Turandot's beauty, paced young and dreamful to his fate. The crowd, won to his favor, pleaded for mercy. But Turandot, white and cold as stone, came forth on her balcony, and with a single imperial gesture dispatched the youth to the scaffold. As his last cry of "Turandot!" shrilled from behind the scenes, Calaf, maddened by the sight of the Princess, struck upon a gong three blows which enrolled him in the fatal list of wooers.

A Resplendent Spectacle.

The first scene of Act II, was a pavilion, and before it wistfully chanted Ping, the Grand Chancellor, Pang, the General Purveyor, and Pong, the Chief Cook, of their distant homes, with blue lakes surrounded by bamboo, comely forests and fair gardens.

The thunderous second scene revealed a gigantic staircase before the palace, leading to a towering throne on which sat the Emperor Altoum, his pallid gown arranged in massive folds like marble. His aged voice drifted down in words like ghosts. Beneath were hundreds of men and women—a vast and resplendent spectacle. It was the hour of Prince Calaf's trial.

Princess Turandot, her face gleaming white beneath a golden veil, swept upward to the foot of the throne. On her head was a crown of gold and rubies, and over the staircase spread the train of her ebon dress, brocaded with dragons in bronze and silver, and lined with deep rose.

What is it, she demanded, that each night is born anew, to fade away at the dawn of day? Prince Calaf pondered, and then cried joyously: "Hope!" Turandot recoiled, but smiled, descended several steps and with pointed finger menaced the Prince. In a voice icy with malignance, she put the second enigma. What is it that spurts like a flame, and yet is not a flame?

The orchestra told of the suitor's perplexity, of the surmises buzzing in his brain. The mob reminded him that death is the issue. At last he cried: 'Blood!" Turandot's dismay and wrath confessed his success. Throwing off her veil, she strode down to face him. What is it, she sneered, which gives thee fire, and from thy fire lee begets?

Upon the bewildered suitor every line of the anxious throng focused itself. Smitten to his knees by peril and uncertainty, he buried his face in his hands, while the Princess hovered above him like a creature of prey. Then he sprang to his feet with the triumphant reply: "Turandot!"

The rest of the play tells how the magnanimous Prince promised to release Turandot if she discovered his name before morning, how Liu was dragged before her, and stabbed herself rather than reveal the secret, and how Turandot, won by Calaf's kiss, melted into the soft, luminous translucence of a white jade goddess.

For this chinoiserie in three acts of five scenes, the Metropolitan provided a setting of most opulent splendor. The mighty scenes were designed by Joseph Urban, and the hundreds of costumes had a blended richness testifying to a taste not altogether common in operatic productions. The designers were Gretl Urban and B. Brunelleschi. Maestro Tullio Serafin was in charge of the musical preparation. Giulio Setti trained the chorus and Wilhelm von Wymetal's masterly hand was shown in every detail of the multitudinous stage direction.

As Princess Turandot, Mme. Jeritza, fair and regal, conveyed something of the inscrutable calm and aloofness of the Orient, and sang with power above the great chorus and clamoring orchestra. The role of Prince Calaf should establish Giacomo Lauri-Volpi's reputation as a dramatic tenor. Max Altglass was the Emperor, George Cehanovsky was a Mandarin, and Louise Lerch and Dorothea Flexer were two tuneful maids.

Two New Singers Heard.

There were two newcomers—Pavel Ludikar, a basso, who sang the part of Timur with a tremolo on which one could play seesaw, and Martha Attwood, soprano, whose lack of appeal and glassy high voice burdened the fine role of Liu with a handicap which the direction would do well to remove before the opera is again presented. Giuseppe de Luca, Angelo Bada and Alfio Tedesco played Ping, Pang and Pong in Italian buffo style—a disturbing note of incongruity.

There were also a few flaws of direction. The apparition of Turandot's executed suitors was so managed as to appear a crude and stupid pantomime, instead of an eerie, menacing portent. The executioner who appeared with the severed head of the Prince of Persia was too visibly raised by an elevator. And the riot at the beginning of the first act, like most stage battles, was not convincing.

But on the whole "Turandot" was so sumptuously and brilliantly mounted, the singing was so excellent, and the direction such an exploit of organization, that the Metropolitan might well pique itself upon a triumph. This opera should prove a signal reinforcement of its repertory. It would be an ideal work with which to open the season of 1927-28.

LOEW'S BEGINS SERIES OF SUNDAY ORCHESTRA CONCERTS

Directing an orchestra of symphonic proportions, Don Albert will inaugurate Loew's State's Sunday concerts at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon, when 65 men respond to his conductorship at that theater and an hour's concert will present six numbers with "Wee Willie" Robyn as the soloist. The concerts will be continued weekly.

Robyn, the soloist of the first of Loew's concerts, is familiar to listeners-in over Station KSD, rebroadcasting Station WEAF.

The program for the initial concert will be:

GROUP III.

"PRESENTING—" WILLIE ROBYN, Tenor Soloist.

"SCENES PITTORESQUE." (J. Massenet.)

(1) Marche.
(2) Scene Du Ballet.

"THE CRACK REGIMENT." Patrol. (Theo. Moses Tobani.)

Lawson Reid, who a dozen years ago was touring the country as the "boy organist," has been engaged as organist at the new St. Louis Theater, and beginning today, Sunday, will give recitals at every performance. Reid, who studied under Minor C. Baldwin, noted London organist, has been a professional recitalist since he was 14 years old, and until recently was with the Balaban and Katz enterprises in Chicago.

Helen Traubel, St. Louis Singer, This Week's Symphony Soloist

IN the brief three years since she made her debut as a symphonic soloist with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, Helen Traubel, the young St. Louis soprano, who is to be soloist of the regular programs of the orchestra at the Odeon Friday afternoon and Saturday evening of this week, has bridged almost at a bound the gulf between an unknown artist-pupil and a recognized concert artist of high standing.

Born in South St. Louis, she began to study while a high school pupil, with Mme. Meta Karst. After years of training came an engagement as soloist of a "Pop" concert with the orchestra. That paved the way to her engagement as a regular soloist when she sang the soprano in the Mahler Fourth Symphony in G major, with the orchestra three years ago. She appeared in New York in 1925 as soloist under Rudolph Ganz at the New York Stadium concerts. In the meantime, she had, for a second time in that first professional year, appeared as a soloist with the St. Louis Orchestra in a regular program, substituting at a few minutes' notice when the late Joseph Schwarz, who recently died of heart trouble in Europe, had his memorable encounter with some barking dogs and was unable to fill his engagement with the orchestra.

That spring she was soloist on tour with the St. Louis Orchestra, singing for the full five weeks. The Stadium engagement, under Ganz, was repeated the following season under the baton of Frederick Stock, conductor of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. This season Miss Traubel is engaged to appear with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra in Carnegie Hall.

Helen Traubel is at her best in German song, and in her repertoire is the solo in the Mahler Symphony, and Isolde's "Love-Death," from "Tristan and Isolde," the two offerings which Ganz has provided on this week's program.

Ganz will also present on the program, and for the first time in St. Louis, the "Morceau" Symphonique" of Cesar Franck. This work is a symphonic interlude excerpted from "La Redemption." Franck, a simple, humble, pious believer in a day of scientific agnosticism, devoted himself to making music for "the greater glory of God," and did it so well that he is credited with founding the modern French school of music.

The concert opens with Weber's "Euryanthe" overture, played in commemoration of the centenary of the composer's death. The detailed program follows:

1—Overture to "Euryanthe" ..... Weber (In commemoration of the Centenary of the composer's death.)
2. Morceau Symphonique (First Time in St. Louis.) ..... "La Redemption" ..... Franck
3. Prelude and "Love-Death" from "Tristan and Isolde" ..... Wagner
4. Symphony No. 4 in G Major ..... Mahler
I. Bedachtig.
II. In gemachlicher Bewegung.
III. Ruhevoll (poco adagio).
IV. Sehr behaglich.

FLONZALEY STRING QUARTET IN CONCERT DECEMBER 4

The Flonsaley String Quartet will give its annual concert at Sheldon Auditorium, Saturday evening, Dec. 4, which is an open Symphony date, under the auspices of the St. Louis Chamber Music Society, which organization will on March 29 sponsor a second concert by the New York String Quartet.

The Auxiliary Committee of the society, Mrs. Rosalind Day, chairman, is made up of professionals and lovers of chamber music and consists of P. G. Anton, Miss Emmy Anton, Mrs. J. B. Foley, Miss Clara Blattner, Miss Agnes Gray, John Halk, Ottmar Moll, Miss Clara Meyer, Leo C. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Nussbaum, Silvain Noack, Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Olk, William Oberkircher, Miss L. V. Tussey, Earl Rosenblum, C. Temple Schrickel, Eugene Hahnel, Selma A. Vogelsang. Anyone is eligible to membership on the Auxiliary Committee of the society, whose purpose is to develop interest in the two concerts for this year.

MORDKIN BALLET TO COME FOR THREE PERFORMANCES

Mikhail Mordkin, Russian dancer, with his company of 50 and an orchestra of 20, will give programs of classic ballets and novel divertissements at the Odeon on the evenings of Dec. 9 and 10, and on Saturday afternoon, Dec. 11. Each performance given here will be entirely different from the others, with the exception that the "bow and arrow" solo, executed by Mordkin, will be given at all performances.

Two things new in Russian ballet presentation will be offered in the engagement here. The first of these is the introduction of incidental songs into the performance, while the dancers are dancing. The second novelty will be the announcing of the subject and story of each ballet pantomime just before it is performed.

Caliapin Coming in "Barber of Seville."

Feodor Caliapin, famous Russian bass, who will appear here on New Year's eve at the Odeon, with his own operatic company, presenting "The Barber of Seville," Rossini's operatic adaptation of the French comedy by Beaumarchais. Caliapin will act as stage director of his company, in addition to playing the role of Don Bartolo in the opera.

W. U. PLAYERS TO GIVE 'ARMS AND THE MAN'

The Little Theater of Washington University will present George Bernard Shaw's three-act play, "Arms and the Man," Dec. 8 and 9 at the Artists' Guild. The light opera, "The Chocolate Soldier," which has been given many times in this city, was taken from this drama of Shaw's.

The leading woman's role, Raina, will be interpreted by Marian Epstein, while other women's roles will be played as follows: C... rine, Henriette Neuman; L... Wilma Schwindler. The ... the cast are: Bluntschli, R... Lackatell; Maj. Petkoff, E... Bahn; Nicola, J. Gruner; ... E. Stone.

U. S. CALLED LAND OF VENUSES

Industrial Efficiency and Autos Also Amaze Germans.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 20—"Those beautiful American girls!" are a constant source of amazement to the German people. More than a dozen prominent men and women, asked to give their impressions of the United States on their return to Germany, mentioned the girls as one of their three principal objects of admiration. American industrial efficiency and the large number of automobiles were the other two.

A fashion magazine recently asked, "Where does one fix the greatest number of modern Venuses?" it answered, "Positively in the United States."

"Raggedy Rose," Mabel Normand's "come-back" vehicle.

ANNA Q. NILSSON, whose film, "Midnight Lovers," is at the Grand Central and West End Lyric, and who is one of the blonde beauties of the screen, did not reach stardom in the cinema by way of the stage. When she first came to this country from Sweden she found work in this land of fabled luxury first as a servant, and only after long, bitter months of hardship, the more lucrative profession of modeling for such artists as Penrhyn Stanlaws, Harrison Fisher and James Montgomery Flagg, who glorified her statuesque beauty on a million magazine covers.

It was only a step then into the movies, but there was a long period of work as an extra girl around Hollywood before success came. Immediately after the completion of "Midnight Lovers," in which she was starred with Lewis Stone, the actress sailed for a visit with her parents in the little town near Stockholm.

"Sweden is making remarkable progress in its film production," said Miss Nilsson on her return. "I talked with several of the best known producers, directors and actors while I was in Stockholm, and they point with pride to the number of Swedish actors and directors whose genius has been recognized over here—Victor Seastrom, Dorothy Seastrom, Einar Hansen, Greta Garbo, Greta Nissen, Sven Gade and others.

"But Sweden is just making its first feeble grasp at picture production. They have neither the money nor the multitude of talented screen artists to work with. They probably won't for many years to come.

"Naturally, there are some very fine things being produced abroad. I saw 'The Waltz Dream' while I was there, and thought it was very artistic and ambitious.

"But when I read that critics were declaring these foreign films incomparable with our own, I want to say that what I saw, what I heard, what I experienced during my trip abroad this summer proved conclusively, to me at least, that America is the undisputed leader in the picture world, both from the standpoint of quality of production and artfulness of acting, and what a tremendous public is looking to her for entertainment.

"When a critic can say that nothing has ever been produced in America that could equal 'Variety,' I am inclined to think he is emotionally impulsive.

Miss Nilsson goes on to give a long list of American-made movies which she considers far better than anything Europe ever turned out—in her judgment. But while her judgment will not be entirely accepted everywhere, she made one telling point in her talk.

"Don't forget," she said, "that it is the hundredth, often the thousandth, picture made abroad we get over here. The other 99 or 999 are even more trashy than the most criticised American screen play."

"THE GREAT CARLO BERNARDI," as he was known for years in vaudeville, where he reigned as "Tamer and Subjugator of Wild Beasts of the African Jungles," is at it again—treading the vaudeville boards once more. This time, however, no audience applauds his daring before the jaws of Numidian lions; only a clicking camera watched his efforts. No longer is he known by the old name either—but by the more authentic if less euphonius cognomen of Charles Bernard Murphy.

Murphy's in the movies now. The famous lion tamer of olden days acts as chaperone for the wild animal act in Norma Shearer's picture, "Upstage," which is on view this week at Loew's State. He exhibits a trained bear and other dumb actors, handles a cage of tigers, and otherwise goes back to the days before the footlights.

"Upstage is a drama of vaudeville life with Miss Shearer in the role of a vaudeville actress and Oscar Shaw, well-known vaudeville dancer, in the leading male role. Most of the action takes place "Backstage" in a vaudeville theater. Murphy is one of several professional vaudeville players appearing in the backstage sequences. Among other noted vaudevillians appearing in the rehearsal scenes are Rolfe Sedan, once a vaudeville dancer and now a comedian of the screen, the Rosas, a feminine acrobatic team, and Luigi and Luigi, accordionists.

Behind the Screens

Mathis has written the continuity on this production.

Reports from Hollywood indicate F. W. Murnau, German director of "The Last Laugh," is making excellent progress on "Sunrise," his first American production for Fox Films. After a month on location at Lake Arrowhead, Cal., in the San Bernardino Mountains, he has brought his company back to Hollywood to begin work on interiors and outdoor sets constructed at Fox Hills.

Philo McCullough and Jerry Miley are the latest additions to the cast of "Easy Pickings," a screen version of the crook melodrama of the same title which George Archainbaud is directing for First National. They will be the principal supporting players in the cast which is headed by Anna Q. Nilsson and Kenneth Harlan in the featured roles.

The supporting cast of John Barrymore's first United Artists picture, "The Beloved Rogue," based on the life and loves of Francois Villon, France's fifteenth century beggar-poet and patriot, is announced by Barrymore, who plays the part of Villon himself, as follows: Conrad Veidt, Marceline Day, Henry Victor, Mack Swain, Slim Summerville, Otto Matiesen, Lucy Beaumont, Lawson Butt, Bertram Grassby, Jane Winton, Rose Dione, Martha Franklin, Nigel de Brulier and Dick Sutherland.

Robert Schable, character actor, has been signed by Gloria Swanson to play the role of Picquard, manager of the Paris Opera Comique, in "Sunya," Miss Swanson's first United Artists picture, which is being made in New York. Schable formerly was a stage actor and for 10 years he played with John Drew.

Mary Pickford's next film will be a comedy, and Sam Taylor is going to direct it. He is the man who made half a dozen Harold Lloyd comedies and who just finished a comedy with Mary's brother, Jack, featured. Story conferences are being held at the Pickford-Fairbanks Studio, with Taylor and his staff sitting dowrt with Mary Pickford, to decide which of four considered stories shall be filmed as the next picture. Miss Pickford plans four pictures.

Joseph M. Schenck announced this week that he has signed the Duncan Sisters for a series of special pictures to be made for United Artists release, under the supervision of John W. Considine Jr., who supervised the productions of Rudolph Valentino. Schenck said "Topsy and Eva," their stage success, would be the Duncan Sisters' first co-starring vehicle. The picture will be made at the Pickford-Fairbanks Studio, Hollywood.

After "shooting up" practically every county in Southern California, the Bebe Daniels, "Stranded in Paris" company has returned to the Paramount West Coast Studio to plunge into the final sequences for the photoplay. Those supporting Miss Daniels in the cast of the photoplay are James Hall, Ford Sterling, Iris Stuart, Mabel Julienne Scott, Helen Dunber, Tom Ricketts and Ida Darling.

Florence Vidor has arrived in New York from California and is preparing for the stellar role in "Afraid to Love," which Frank Tuttle will start soon at the Paramount Long Island studio. Wyndham Standing has been cast for the leading role opposite Miss Vidor. In addition to Standing, who supported Thomas Meighan in "The Canadian," Miss Vidor's supporting cast bears the names of Philip Strange, seen recently in "The Ace of Cads"; Charles Byers, at present appearing with Lois Wilson in "New York"; Charles Slattery and Warner Baxter.

Pola Negri will be starred in "Vanity Fair," Trackeray's immortal classic of English society. Miss Negri will, of course, have the part of Becky Sharp in the production. A later role for Miss Negri will be that of one of the greatest stage figures of all time, the exquisite and tragic Rachel, the "woman who rose from the gutter to the stars." Greater than Duse and Bernhardt in her own day, she thrilled audiences on both sides of the Atlantic 75 years ago while her personal life was ever more dramatic than the roles she portrayed behind the footlights. Miss Negri now is working on "Barbed Wire," a screen translation of Hall Caine's novel of back currents of the war, "The Woman of Knockaloe."

HEAVY, ALERT GUARD AS NEW BANK OF ENGLAND IS ERECTED

Plans for Structure to Replace Famous Old Building Are Kept Secret.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The historic bank of England building has been practically demolished to make way for a new structure, and all the bullion and valuables removed to Finsbury Square. Only the outer walls of "The Old Lady" of Threadneedle Street" remain intact, but the site is more carefully guarded now than at any time in its long history, which goes back to 1694.

Special precautions are being taken to prevent prospective robbers getting the idea of the bank's future internal arrangements.

Plans of the interior of the building to be erected are known to only 20 persons and each one of these especially selected artisans do not know what the other is doing. Workmen's entrances are guarded, and every man carefully scrutinized on arriving and leaving. Detectives are everywhere about inside the old walls and at night there is a constant patrol of armed watchmen.

At every few yards of the ground on which the new bank of England will be built, alarm bells have been fixed so that any foreman can summon help within 30 seconds.

GOITRE

A new treatment for goitre has been developed by the W. T. E. Laboratories, 963 Y. M. C. A. Bldg., Battle Creek, Michigan, which many believe will prove to be the long-sought specific for this unsightly and dangerous disease. Many of the largest and most hideous goitres begin to recede almost from day. They gradually get smaller, and in many cases are entirely gone in a few weeks. It is equally efficient in cases of toxic and so-called inside goitre. The treatment is harmless and anyone can use it with perfect safety at home.

A 68-page illustrated booklet on the Cause, Dangers and Non-Surgical Treatment of Goitre, issued by the Laboratories, fully explains the new treatment and will be mailed free to any interested sufferer.

SECOND THOUGHTS ON NEW YORK FIRST NIGHTS

Mrs. Campbell uttered it with elegant precision in the third act of "Pygmalion," there ensued a state of mind in the audience nicely compounded of the vapors and the fantods. In America, of course, this violation of the proprieties was received with a calm that almost rang in one's ears.

THERE were stormy scenes between Mrs. Patrick Campbell and G. B. S. when "Pygmalion" was new—echoes of violent altercation which are reflected in some of those extraordinary letters of his to her which, with her odd notions about privacy, she blandly published in her memoirs a few years ago. He was particularly incensed when she added a few speeches to give the comedy the air of a conventional romantic ending — a profanation piously avoided by the Guild.

It had always taken all Shaw's strength to keep actors and producers from cutting his plays; the outrage of adding something to them drove him from the theater in a two weeks' sulk. His elaborate sequel to "Pygmalion," which he appended to the published text, was an elaborate "What Happened After" invention, conceived, one suspects, entirely as a sassy retort to Mrs. Campbell. His annoyance when he discovered that she had never taken the trouble to read it led to his denunciation of her as a Mountain of Illiteracy.

IN speaking of Helen Hayes in these dispatches last week, I made one unaccountable error for which I am roundly (and squarely) brought to task in the following letter:

I always enjoy your articles. I read you incessantly and recommend you to my friends. I think as a critic you are excelled by few and equaled by none. Furthermore, I think that personally you have a charm, a wit and a SAVOIR FAIRE that has endeared you to thousands, nay hundreds!

Consequently, I cannot stand idly by and see you err. The most perfect diamond has a tiny flaw somewhere, they say. When you say that it was in "Seventeen" that Miss Hayes was told to go upstairs and wash her face, you are in error. It happened in "Clarence." I stand ready to make a wager in keeping with my modest circumstances on this point.

I hope that you revel in health. I hope your weight in proportion to your height is correct; that your nerves are even and that you are entirely free from any symptoms of Rigg's disease, acne, diphtheria, mitral regurgitation, acute melancholia, milk leg, diabetic coma, gangrene, cancer, whooping cough or dementia praecox. I speak as a victim of all these maladies.

Your friend and well wisher,
FRANK SULLIVAN.

I am happy to state that I am comparatively free from these ailments but, in that prepostrous transfer of Helen Hayes from the program of "Seventeen," I think the touchingly solicitous Mr. Sullivan would be entitled to detect the first symptoms of an impending mental collapse.

SOME errors are simply unaccountable. Thus I find it impossible to work out in my own mind any hypothetical set of circumstances that would account for Charles Edward Russell's muddle of dates in his seemingly painstaking biography of Julia Marlowe which has recently appeared in the bookstalls. He pays considerable attention to her debut on the stage in one of those juvenile "Pinafore" companies which launched so many careers.

This momentous debut took place, he says, in Vincennes, Ind., and he fixes the time as the fall of 1876, at which time, as it happens, the words and music of that infernal nonsense, "Pinafore," had not yet been spun to enchant the world. It could not very well have been produced in Vincennes, enterprising at that old community ever was, prior to 1878, for it was not until May of 1878 that even London heard "Pinafore" for the first time. Chivalry has often compelled the annalists of the stage to shift a date until some years later: it is the more difficult to account for the pranks of a biographer who places Miss Marlowe's debut two years before it could possibly have happened.

RADIO PROGRAMS HIT LEGITIMATE AND PICTURE HOUSES

$50,000, of which $25,000 went to the performers, who were able to make their few minute appearances before the microphone in various sections of the country without having to assemble at a central station in New York.

It is not hard to imagine also that a radio concern might get a million radio fans throughout the country to subscribe $5 a year apiece toward a yearly program. Think what sort of weekly entertainments could be given with a $5,000,000 bank roll. The picture show magnates may do well to get together and talk things over. And just in passing let it be remarked that William Fox is building another 4000-seat motion picture theater in St. Louis where, even under the most favorable conditions, the city is already "overseated."

THE Shubert-Rialto reopens tonight with a repeat engagement for two weeks of the magnificent war movie, "The Big Parade." Following this, on Dec. 5 will come Mrs. Fiske in a revival of "Ghosts." According to the present bookings the Grand avenue house will then turn out its lights again to reopen on Christmas night with "The Greenwich Village Follies." Other shows scheduled to come to the Shubert-Rialto after that are "Rose Marie," "Blossom Time," "The Vagabond King," "The Student Prince." "The Passing Show," from the Winter Garden; "Princess Flavia," which is a musical version of "The Prisoner of Zenda;" "A Night in Paris" revue, "A Lady's Virtue,' with Mary and Florence Nash;' "The Dybbuk," in English—it has been seen here in Yiddish—Helen Hays in "What Every Woman Knows" and Al Jolson in "Big Boy."

FOLLOWING "LeMaire's Affairs," which is reported to be an elaborate revue with Sophie Tucker, Ted Lewis and Lester Allen as the stars, which comes to the American next Sunday night, that house will present the farce, "The Cradle Snatchers," which had a long and profitable run at the Music Box Theater in New York. The New York company, headed by Mary Boland, is scheduled to appear with the piece here.

ALLA NAZIMOVA, the exotic tragedienne of stage and screen, will be at the Orpheum this week in a new playlet, written for her by Edgar Allen Wolff. The sketch affords Nazimova the role of a defiant gypsy, who murders for love, but repents when she learns the consolation of religion.

THE Empress Theater will at today's matinee begin the presentation for the week of Thompson Buchanan's comedy, "A Woman's Way." The production will be featured by the return to the National Players as leading woman of Leona Powers, who last season was with the organization in that position. With Miss Powers also comes Lorraine Bernard, who will be the second woman of the company, replacing Frances Gregg. Nell McFee is a new "juvenile."

THE new St. Louis Theater, which next Tuesday will be one year old, and which is celebrating the anniversary, played to 2,792,000 persons in the past 12 months, or an average of 53,000 a week, according to an announcement of the management. This is said to establish a world's record for a continuous vaudeville-picture house, with only three shows a day. The prices of these admissions ranged from 15 to 65 cents, and, until the mezzanine prices were reduced to the lower floor scale, to 85 cents. No sworn statement accompanies these figures and 53,000 a week is a lot of people, even for a theater seating 4100 as the St. Louis does.

ALMA PETERSON SOLOIST FOR APOLLO CLUB CONCERT

Alma Peterson, dramatic soprano of Chicago, will appear as soloist for the opening concert of the St. Louis Apollo Club, to be held at the Odeon Tuesday night. Miss Margaret Carlisle, also of Chicago, will be the accompanist for Miss Peterson.

Charles Galloway, director of the Apollo Club, promises to present for this opening concert the largest male chorus of voices that has appeared in St. Louis for a number of years. According to Director Galloway, at least 80 members of the club will sing, and among these 80 voices will be heard some of St. Louis' best known singers, many of whom are not only singing over the radio, but also appearing regularly in church choirs throughout the city.

Of special interest will be the song by the club, "Out Where the West Begins," by Gaines, who, in this work, introduces an incidental flute solo, which will be played by John K. Kiburz, and an incidental tenor solo, which will be sung by Benjamin G. Syman.

Paul Friess, a well-known St. Louis pianist, will be the accompanist for the club for each of its numbers, which will include, in addition to "Out Where the West Begins,"

Up and On ..... MacFarlane
(Incidental solo by Mr. Jos. Kelly.)
a) The Redman's Death Chant—
b) The King and the Singer.. Bliss
a) Allah's Holiday ..... Friml
b) Promis' Lan' ..... Burleigh

The concert next Tuesday will be the ninety-seventh the club has given in St. Louis since it was organized 33 years ago.

The club's officers for this season are: L. E. Young, president; Phil A. Becker and Emil Borgmann, vice presidents; Scott R. DeKins, secretary-treasurer; Chas. Galloway, musical director; George Ravold, librarian and stage manager.

Holy Name Society to Give Play.

The annual entertainment of St. Mark's Holy Name Society, consisting of a three-act farce comedy and a dance, will be given next Tuesday and Thursday evenings at St. Mark's Hall, Page boulevard and Academy avenue.

610 BROADCASTERS OPERATING IN U. S.

Seven New Stations Licensed and Two Dropped From Government's List.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—A net increase last week of five broadcasting stations in the United States has been reported by the Department of Commerce, bringing the total number of broadcasters to a new high record of 610. Seven new stations were licensed during the week and two were officially dropped from the government's rolls.

Of the seven newcomers, only one chose to go above the class A bands for a wave length, station KGDI, of the Northwest Radio Service Co., at Seattle, which will operate on 416.4 meters, a channel already in use at WCCO, Minneapolis-St. Paul; WCRW, Chicago; and WBBR Rossville, N. Y. The location of the plant, however, is expected to prevent serious interference with the other users of the wave length.

Of the remaining six new stations, two are in the district of New York, WLBE, owned by J. H. Fruitman, of Brooklyn, operating on 222.7 meters; and WICC, the Bridgeport Broadcasting station at Bridgeport, Conn., operating on 285 meters. The other newscomers are WLBC, D. A. Burton, Munice, Ind., 222.7 meters, WFBE, the Garfield Place Hotel Co., Cincinnati, O., 232.4 meters; WOMT, the Kikadow Theater, Manowoc, Wis., 234.1 meters; and KGDJ, R. Rathert, Cresco, Ia., 202.6 meters.

The stations officially dropped from the government's lists were WCAP of the Chespeake and Potomac Telephone Co., at Washington, which abandoned its broadcasting activities in August, and WFBE, a low powered station operated by the Van De Walle Musel and Radio Co., at Seymour, Ind., which also gave up its activities several weeks ago.

In addition to the seven new broadcasters, three additional stations changed their wave lengths, one to conform with the government's system of wave-allocation

610 BROADCASTERS OPERATING IN U. S.

Seven New Stations Licensed and Two Dropped From Government's List.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—A net increase last week of five broadcasting stations in the United States has been reported by the Department of Commerce, bringing the total number of broadcasters to a new high record of 610. Seven new stations were licensed during the week and two were officially dropped from the government's rolls.

Of the seven newcomers, only one chose to go above the class A bands for a wave length, station KGDI, of the Northwest Radio Service Co., at Seattle, which will operate on 416.4 meters, a channel already in use at WCCO, Minneapolis-St. Paul; WCRW, Chicago; and WBBR Rossville, N. Y. The location of the plant, however, is expected to prevent serious interference with the other users of the wave length.

Of the remaining six new stations, two are in the district of New York, WLBE, owned by J. H. Fruitman, of Brooklyn, operating on 223.7 meters; and WICC, the Bridgeport Broadcasting station at Bridgeport, Conn., operating on 285 meters. The other newcomers are WLBC, D. A. Burton, Munice, Ind., 223.7 meters; WFBE, the Garfield Place Hotel Co., Cincinnati, O., 232.4 meters; WOMT, the Kikadow Theater, Manitowoc, Wis., 254.1 meters; and KGIM, R. Rathert, Cresco, Ia., 232.4 meters.

The stations officially dropped from the government's lists were WCAP of the Chespeake and Potomac Telephone Co., at Washington, which abandoned its broadcasting activities in August, and WFBE, a low powered station operated by the Van De Walle Musical Radio Co., at Seymour, Ind., which also gave up its activities several weeks ago.

In addition to the seven new broadcasters, three additional stations changed their wave lengths, one to conform with the government's system of wave-allocation and the other two to obtain a higher and more desirable channel. The minor change was that of KFPY, at Spokane, Wash., which moved from 273, to 272.6 meters, and the other changes were those of WCAM, the Camden, N. J., city station was jumped from 236.1 to 236.9 meters; and KSO, Clarinda, Ia., which jumped from 241.8 to 405.2 meters. The latter channel has been in use for almost three years at stations WOR, Newark and KHJ, Los Angeles.

So far 89 new stations have been licensed since July 1, and 79 changes made in wave lengths, an average of approximately 4.66 new stations every week and almost the same average of weekly wave jumpers.

Damrosch Before Microphone

Picture shows how Walter Damrosch, conductor of the New York Symphony Orchestra, presents his every other week music drama lecture-recital from KSD.

COLLEGE SONGS MEDLEY BY THE JOLLY BUCKEYE BAKERS

The quartet of the Jolly Buckeye Bakers, which will be heard from KSD in a half-hour program Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock, has sung on the concert platform in many of the large cities of the country.

In their program Tuesday evening will be found, among others, "Sweet Genevieve," "When the Corn is Waving, Annie Dear," "Sweetest Story Ever Told" and "Perfect Day." These melodies will have a background by an instrumental trio. One of the feature selections will be a medley of college tunes.

DAMROSCH RECITAL ON OPERA, 'SIEGFRIED'

Will Broadcast Interpretation of Wagner Work From KSD in Balkite Hour.

Walter Damrosch, dean of American conductors, will be heard in another of his Wagner lecture-recitals from KSD in the Balkite Hour at 8 o'clock next Saturday evening, when his subject will be the opera "Siegfried."

Damrosch, who is perhaps recognized as the leading authority on Wagner in this country, originated this type of lecture-recital with marked success some years ago. Seated at the piano, he reelites the text of the Wagnerian opera, using a translation of his own which preserves much of the picturesque force of the original. So attractive have been these previous presentations that the listeners have almost forgotten there is no orchestra, no singing and no stage properties. A brilliant pianist, Damrosch plays the score on the piano, interspersing explanatory comments on the opera.

Damrosch is enthusiastic over his opportunity to broadcast regularly, and these radio lecture-concerts will bring the works of Wagner to thousands of people who have little or not acquaintance with them.

Damrosch has had an interesting and spectacular career as a musician, and has occupied the unique position of succeeding his father as conductor of the New York Symphony Orchestra, a position which he has held for four decades. When he was but 19 years of age he was elected conductor of the Newark (N. J.) Harmonic Society, and there began his life work. After the death of his father, he became the conductor of the New York Oratorio and the New York Symphony societies.

BETTY CROCKER TO TELL HOW TO PREPARE TURKEY DINNER

"Before and After Taking" would be a logical title for the three talks which Betty Crocker, nationally known home service specialist, will broadcast from KSD this week. In the talks Monday and Wednesday further suggestions for the preparation of the Thanksgiving dinner will be given, while in her Friday talk, which is the weekly cooking school lesson, she has selected "After the Holiday" for her subject.

In her Monday talk Miss Crocker continues the plan for the holiday meal, laying stress on preparations which could be made two or three days before Thanksgiving and relieve the congestion of last-minute duties. Recipes are also given for some of the dishes which might be called accessories to the main meal.

Miss Crocker will devote her talk Wednesday to the preparation of the turkey, the dressing and the trimmings.

GOOD STRING ENSEMBLE AND TENOR ON WDAF MONDAYS

The A. & P. Gypsies, a really excellent string ensemble, with John Barnes Wells, the tenor, as soloist, may be heard every Monday night at 8 o'clock, from WDAF, Kansas City, 365-6-M. The Gypsies will feature a "Medley of Popular Songs" tomorrow evening. Wells will sing "Beauty's Eyes" (Tosti) and the Negro spiritual, "Steal Away" (Brown). The complete program will be: "William Tell" (Overture), Von Suppe; The Old Refrain (violin solo), Kreisler; Serenade d'Amour, Blon; Selections from "The Serenade," Victor Herbert; Evolution of Dixie; Tango Havana; Orientale, Cui; Dolly Dances, Poldini; Medley of popular songs; Foxtrot, "Cross Your Heart."

Signals Affected by Temperature.

The strength of radio signals is affected by temperature influences It has been found that whenever the temperature rises along the signal path, there is a tendency for the signal to drop, and conversely, a falling temperature tends to produce a stronger signal, though these temperature effects are often masked by other unknown influences.

WJZ AND WGY TO BROADCAST FOURTH CONCERT FRIDAY NIGHT

The fourth of a series of concerts broadcast by WJZ and WGY at 9 o'clock, Friday night, will present, in addition to the Baldwin String Quartette, Erne Balogh, pianist, and Blanche Anthony, soprano. The plan of these concerts is to emphasize music of accepted value and not the artist. The program in detail follows: Fifteenth Rhapsody, Liszt; Five Pieces for Children, based on original Hungarian Melodies, Bartok; Concert Study, Schlozer, played by Mr. Balogh; "Ah, For's e Lui," from Traviata," Verdi; "Songs My Mother Taught Me," Dvorak; "The Little Damzel," Novelle; "Children of the Moon," Warren, sung by Miss Anthony; Quartette in A Minor (Variations—"Death and the Maiden"), Schubert, played by the string quartette.

BELLE BAKER TO SING IN EVEREADY HOUR TUESDAY

The wise-cracking patter and snappy songs of Broadway and the melancholy songs of the Southern mountain districts will weave their contrasting colors into the Eveready Hour to be broadcast next Tuesday evening, Nov. 23, from Station WEAF and its associate stations.

Belle Baker, of vaudeville fame, will supply the Broadway color. Vernon Dalhart, who is widely known for his renditions of "The Prisoner's Song," will sing the mountain songs.

The regular Eveready Hour singers and orchestra will provide the musical miscellany.

Every rural schoolhouse in Connecticut is to be equipped with a receiving set.

Theory Is They Will Be Unable to Support Themselves, Due to Congestion.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Relief is in sight from the interference due to congestion of stations regardless of congressional action this winter. Government experts who have analized the situation are confident that the present large number of stations will not continue in operation, even if the Government does not step in and demand a new deal.

This opinion is based on the law of supply and demand and the theory that most of the stations will not be able to support themselves.

The influx of new stations is accredited by experts to the desire of their owners to share in the supposedly large sums of money being spent for advertising via radio. Although there has never been definite proof that any station in the United States has made money from selling time, well established belief is that it is a profitable business.

According to an analysis, most of the radio advertisers are national in their scope and seek primarily to obtain national audiences. Except for one or two chain groups, most of the stations are in a position to serve only a given community. This eliminates them from the plans of the national advertiser, unless they are linked in a chain. While it is true that there is a certain amount of local advertising that may be placed on the air, it is not considered sufficient to support a powerful station.

The belief is that after experimenting several months with broadcasting and discovering that it is not a profitable undertaking, many of the newly licensed stations will give it up as a bad bargain.

This theory, of course, cannot be made to apply to stations owned by large companies which seek only to advertise themselves and do not depend on selling time for support. There are also a number of schools, colleges and churches which broadcast without hope of remuneration.

Successful tests have been made of two-way radio telephone communication on freight trains for the exchange of messages between conductor or brakeman in the caboose and the engineer or fireman on the engine. The train was made up of 100 cars.

WORLD WIDE SHORT WAVE TESTS WRITE NEW CHAPTER OF THE ROMANCE OF RADIO

Messages Shot Half Way Around Earth on 32.79 Meter Channel—Freaks of Skipping and Dipping Reported.

By William Dinwiddie.

There are probably 20,000,000 people in the United States who nightly listen to radio broadcasting programs, but only to a few thousand enthusiastic radio fans, designated in the professional field as "amateurs," has been granted the rare privilege of following the marvelous development of world-wide communication on short wave lengths. They have been able to do this as owners of low wave receiving sets, usually built by themselves.

Mystery About Tests.

The average receiving set, as is well known, only covers the broadcasting band between 550 and 200 meters. But below 200 meters, running all the way down to 15 meters, there is a veritable maelstrom of electrical vibrations filling the ether. These are "put on the air" by thousands of amateurs talking to one another, and by great radio corporations engaged in commercial transmission of messages, news and broadcasting programs, the latter being re-broadcast from stations of higher wave lengths for the public.

The big radio corporations have been slow to herald their wonderful achievements in low wave transmission; in fact, they have been known to surround extensive international tests with mystery and secrecy. It was months before the ever alert "amateur" awoke to full knowledge that successful low wave transmission was being carried on between North and South America.

Revolutionary Discovery.

Prior to the introduction of the short wave method, the most powerful radio stations in the world were at times completely blanketed from South America by a seemingly impenetrable wall of tropical static. Eureka! The short wave transmitter, working way down on 30, 40 or 60 meters, solved the difficulty. Any one with a short wave receiver can listen every night, if he wishes, to a volley of 200 words a minute, in dots and dashes, from high-speed transmitters on the Atlantic coast. They are sending and receiving simultaneously thousands of commercial messages. The speed is too high to read these messages by ear, and they require a special device to make the dots and dashes visible to the eye so that they may be read.

Short wave transmission constitutes a chapter of real romance in the radio industry. Individual, powerful long wave broadcasting stations have cost millions of dollars, and their annual operating expenses run to hundreds of thousands. Almost overnight the discovery was made that with inexpensive baby stations, whose motor generators consumed an insignificant horsepower, messages could be transmitted consistently and with certainty half way around the world day or night. The discovery is revolutionizing the radio industry.

How Tests Were Made.

During the past 18 months, the radio engineering department of the General Electric Co. has carried on an extensive series of investigations of short wave propagation. The interesting results from these investigations have just been made public by M. L. Prescott of the company's engineering department. Prescott says that the 54-acre developmental laboratory, equipped, as it is with several transmitters adaptable to operation over a wide range of frequencies and employing various types of antenna systems, has proven itself an invaluable aid in this series of investigations.

Most of the observations were made by field men sent out by the company. These observers had receiving equipment capable of covering the frequency band (the wave length) under investigation. The field observers, with apparatus in a truck, made a series of trips, each time starting from Schenectady and following a uni-directional course away from the transmitting station.

The first of these trips was made in a westerly direction to Buffalo and intermediate points. On this trip comparative signal characteristics were obtained on four different frequencies (wave length) ranging from 192 KC (15 meters) to 7170 KC (109 meters). Following this, a similar trip was made at Malone, N. Y., and a little later a third trip was made in an easterly direction, ending at Boston.

The last trip of the special observers was to Lake City, Fla., 1000 miles southwest of Schenectady. In order to investigate signal characteristics at distances greater than those which could conveniently be covered by the field men in a truck, another observer boarded a steamer bound for Panama and made observations en route.

Amateurs Lend Aid.

Throughout this series of tests, additional reports were received from all parts of the world from individuals who by accident or intent heard the transmissions. These outside reports showed the possibility of utilizing co-operative observers for a future test.

The data obtained by the General Electric field men were from a decidedly restricted area, so any generalization of results was difficult. It was felt by the engineers that simultaneous observations by a great number of especially instructed listeners located in representative parts of the world would yield information of value.

Negotiations were begun with the American Radio Relay League to enlist the aid of several hundred of its members. An agreement was reached without difficulty. Two thousand letters explaining the proposed test were sent to amateurs. About 500 replies were received, expressing a willingness to assist in observing the test transmissions. To each of these men the Radio Engineering Department sent detailed recording instructions, especially prepared log sheets and a schedule of transmissions.

Transmissions were made each week in April from Wednesday noon to Thursday noon, and from Saturday noon to Sunday noon. For the benefit of the expert "amateur" we give the list of transmitters used in these tests. They were:

Station.	Frequency.		Power.
*2XAW	20.000 KC	(15 Met.)	0.6 KW
*2XAD	11.370 KC	(26.4 Met.)	1.0 GW
†2XAF	9.150 KC	(32.79 Met.)	10.0 KW
*2XAO	5.970 KC	(50.2 Met.)	10.0 KW
†2XK	4.580 KC	(65.5 Met.)	10.0 KW
†2XK	2.750 KC	(109 Met.)	10.0 KW

Control—*Self-excited. †Crystal.

Considerable labor was involved in getting the information contained in these reports into workable form. Additional data such as the distance, direction and zone of each observer, together with the weather conditions had to be coded and appended to each report. These completed and coded reports were then given to key-punch operators who transferred the information to statistical cards. These cards form a permanent record of each observation.

Results of Tests Summarized.

What actually happened during tests of the six different short-wave lengths used is given in full below for the benefit of the expert amateurs. For those interested from a less technical viewpoint, it may be said that the General Electric Co. seems to have found that a 32.79 meter wave can be propagated readily halfway around the world. The second best received programs were those transmitted on 50.2 meters. Apparently the poorest of the six channels was that of 15 meters, with the 109-meter band running it a close sec-

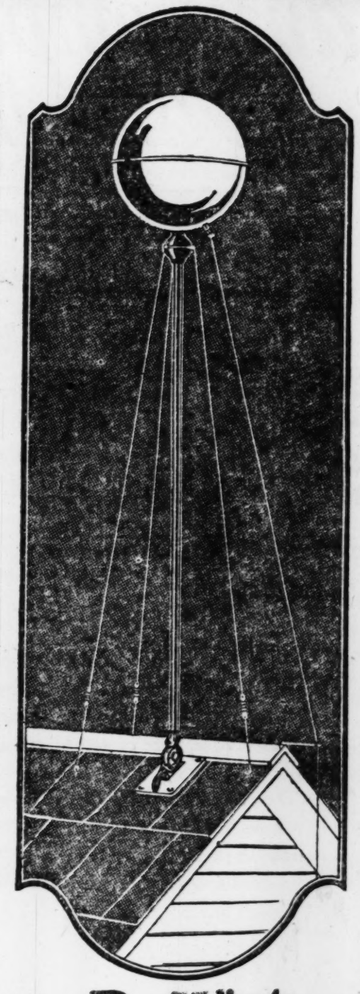
Give Your Radio Set a Fair Chance!

You will never know how good your radio set is until you try a Super-Ball Antenna—the marvelous new invention that is making new history in radio reception.

This new Antenna will actually make your radio produce results you never thought possible. It will increase the selectivity, clarify the tone, and minimize static. It is non-directional, easy to install, will not corrode—and it lasts a lifetime!

Marvelous Results—From Your Present Radio Set

The Super-Ball Antenna receives all wave lengths—and serves with any make of receiver. It rejects a large part of the interference which long aerial wires collect. Furthermore, it is much more responsive to distance than wire aerials. Its condenser assures full volume at all times.



And here's another remarkable feature—Super-Ball Antennas may be placed as close as 10 feet apart, and still give perfect reception. Thus, whether you live in a house or a large apartment building, there is no interference between your Super-Ball Antenna and your neighbor's.

Known the World Over

Under all conditions, the durability and absolute reliability of the Super-Ball Antenna have been proved. It has achieved an international reputation—has given complete satisfaction in the service of every user.

Radiola 20 has been tried, tested perfected

Radiola 20, with Radiotrons. Single controlled on near stations; with verniers for accuracy on distance . . $115
RCA Loudspeaker 100 . . $35

NEVER has there been so fine a set at so moderate a price. Never has there been a supply of Radiolas great enough to stand the strain of fall and Christmas demand. Put these two facts together and you will order your Radiola 20 NOW to be sure of getting the RCA Radiola you want, this year.

The Radiola 20 is one of the outstanding achievements of RCA—the proud product of famous engineers. RCA, General Electric and Westinghouse have cooperated to make it finer in tone—sturdier in build—dependable in operation. Plug in the RCA Loudspeaker 100—and match this combination against any competitor—at any price. The real way to let your ear judge is the method the experts use. Listen to the Radiola 20 for at least ten minutes. Then switch to an ordinary set, and the difference shows up sharply because you have accustomed your ear to finer tone.

Radiola 20 has many newly developed refinements—and they have all stood the "road test" of experience. They are proved and perfected.

One outstanding feature is a special "amplification" that gives this set the added distance reach of more tubes! It is extremely sensitive.

It is twenty times as selective as the ordinary radio set.

Its tone quality is unexcelled. A power tube assures clear, true tone even at big volume.

It can be operated either with batteries—or battery eliminators.

Radiola 20 is one of the biggest values in radio today. Such quality at a moderate price has made "unreal" radio obsolete forever. Hear it—and you will be satisfied with nothing else in radio!

TRADE NOTES

The Steinite Laboratories, which make Steinite eliminators, receiving sets and other radio apparatus, has enlarged its factory at Atchison, Kan., to employ 1000 workers and turn out 35,000 to 50,000 receivers in the 1926-27 season. It is headed by Fred W. Stein.

The distributorship of the Aristocrat double-duty speaker has been taken by the McGraw Electric Appliance Co. This speaker combines a cone with a lamp, and utilizes the table as a sounding board.

The A. S. Aloe Co. has just opened a new radio display room at 513 Olive street. The display is arranged so that a visitor is not confused, but is allowed to form an accurate opinion of the possibilities in selection of a set.

The Daven Radio Corp. directors have voted to purchase the controlling interest in the stock of the Port Manufacturing Co., manufacturers of the Daven Bass Note circuit. The business will be conducted as in the past by the Port Manufacturing Co. but under supervision by the Daven Co.

ELSIE JANIS, MIMIC, TO BE IN EVEREADY HOUR PROGRAM

Elsie Janis has been engaged for an Eveready Hour program to be broadcast from KSD in December. An adaptation of Miss Janis' stage mimicry to radio broadcasting is being prepared.

Elsie Janis is one of the best known of American stage stars. She is a native American and since the late nineties has played in musical comedy and vaudeville successes. During the war she spent several months with the American Expeditionary Forces in France, entertaining American soldiers and their French and British compatriots.

Miss Janis' first stage appearance was as "Cain" in "The Charity Ball," in 1897. A year later she went into vaudeville. After five years of vaudeville work she had attracted such favorable attention that she was starred in "The Belle of New York," in 1904. Her next appearances were in "The Fortune Teller" and "The Vanderbilt Cup." At the close of her engagement with the latter, in 1908, Miss Janis went under the management of Charles B. Dillingham, first in "The Hoyden" and later in "Fair Co-eds" and "Slim Princess." Her first notable appearance after the war was in her own production called "Elsie Janis and Her Gang."

SEPARATE SETS FOR CITY AND RURAL USE DESIGNED

Two separate models of the Priess "Straight Nine," one for urban use, the other for suburban and rural use, have been designed. The city model is to furnish the utmost in selectivity; the country model is broader, but what it lacks in selectivity is made up in power and ability to reach out.

PIANO RECITAL WGN FEATURE

George Seaberg, pianist, will be the feature artist this week on WGN each afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The recital will last for half an hour. Seaberg is a young Chicago artist, who is making a name for himself as a concert pianist. His program follows: Nocturne, Respighi; Reflections on the Water, Debussy; Etude Op. 15, No. 6, Bortkiewicz; On Wings of Song, Mendelssohn-Liszt; Hungarian Rhapsody No. 11, Liszt.

Steinite New 7-Tube No-Battery Radio

FRED W. STEIN

The Set You Have Wished for a Thousand Times. Think of the Joy of plugging into the light socket and saying goodbye forever to Batteries and most of your Radio troubles. Picture to yourself a Radio as musical as a Grand piano, and that costs 1¢ an hour to operate. No wonder everyone who hears it wants one at once. Many say "I can't believe it." You will hardly believe it yourself till you hear it. Think of the real pleasure of a radio that always brings in stations on the North American Continent, requiring no aerial for stations five hundred miles away, with a range of 3000 miles on outside aerial. So simple and highly selective a child can attach and operate it. Uses No Batteries of any kind.

No wonder this is a present day Radio wonder. And the price, $125.00! The immense volume of our big new factory makes it possible. Volume, Volume, Volume is responsible for the way Steinite products have swept the country. And, without tremendous volume and our low-profit-policy this set should sell for $300 or more.

What may you expect in naturalness, volume, and lack of distortion. You have perhaps heard the latest type Phonographs that have employed some electrical and radio principles. You may expect the same truthful reproduction and fidelity of tone of this marvelous economical 7-TUBE STEINITE NO-BATTERY RADIO.

When I say "no batteries" of any kind, I mean just that, and no chemical rectifiers. Nothing to charge, no rugs and furniture to ruin with solutions. No worry during ever as to whether it will reach out for distant stations. Absolutely nothing needed to complete the set but tubes.

1¢ An Hour To Operate

Plug into the light socket and know your operation cost will not exceed 1¢ an hour for radio pleasures. Think of the expense alone, before you buy a battery type set. The new 7-tube no-battery Steinite radio will pay for itself. From the way orders are coming in no one here can tell what sales on this popular set will run to. You at least want to know all about it, want to study this marvelously refined Fred W. Stein circuit; want to try it ten days at my absolute risk, then write your own guarantee as to its performance. Do this any way before you buy any set.

Think of the finest set you ever heard of at any price and you will know what to expect of the 7-Tube Steinite No-Battery type at the unheard of price of $125.00. Only two controls to operate and set logs perfectly. Tremendous volume. Tone pure, full and round. Selectivity to a high degree, and range of 3,000 miles. Cabinet, solid mahogany, beautifully finished in 2-tone walnut or 2-tone mahogany. An elegant furniture setting that will harmonize with any home environment.

WRITE TODAY for complete description of this marvelous new instrument explaining the new circuit. Do This Today. Just send name—no cost—no obligation. You've always had in mind a radio free from battery trouble—IT'S HERE. We allow you to write your own guarantee after a free ten day trial in your home. This is the test to which you should put any radio before buying. Write now while this ad is before you.

Wonderful new Loud Speaker

You've no idea what a difference the Acme makes!

I THOUGHT I was getting the best possible reproduction out of my set. But I found I really had no idea how clearly it could reproduce music, until I got your new Acme Loud Speaker. It certainly makes a surprising difference..."

The wonderful new Acme Loud Speaker successfully reproduces voices and music in your own home as clearly as they were originally created in the broadcasting studio. It reproduces the voice of the singer in all its thrilling, tender beauty. It brings out the different personality in each voice, so that you can tell one voice from another. It recreates orchestral music so clearly that you can hear each instrument playing. It reproduces low notes and tones as clearly as high notes and tones. You hear the bass and treble, harmony and melody.

All this was not done in a moment, Acme engineers worked five years and made 256 experimental speakers, before they arrived at the new Acme Enclosed Free Edge Cone and Acme Reproducing Unit, which together are responsible for this great increase in radio enjoyment.

See this new Acme at your dealer's

TRY OUT this new Acme for yourself. See if all we have said about it is not true. Compare it with others in the dealer's store. Drop in at your dealer's today and hear this remarkable new speaker. Made by Acme Apparatus Co., Pioneer Radio and Transformer Engineers and Manufacturers, Cambridge, Mass., U. S. A.

Acme K-3 Enclosed Single Free Edge Cone Speaker, (shown above). Diameter of cone, 11 ins. Green bronze metal case. Price: $18.50

Acme K-1 Enclosed Double Free Edge Cone Speaker. Diameter of cone, 14 ins. Tan metal case. Price: $25.00

Acme Enclosed Free Edge Cones and Acme Reproducing Units, (Designed for use exclusively with the free edge cone) eliminate resonance and preserve the tones, pure, round and clear. A fixed edge cone, to produce the same results, would have to be three times the diameter, too clumsy for your living-room. High notes are reproduced toward the center of the cone; low notes, toward the edge. The laws of vibration make it possible to produce low notes with a small cone, provided the edge is free and enclosed, and provided the reproducing unit is especially designed for use with a free edge cone.

WGN DECISION SAID SET UP PRIORITY

Establishes Precedent to Courts in Future Over Interference.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Continuance by an Illinois court injunction forbidding broadcasting station WGES from interfering with the programs of WGN viewed by legal officials of the Government as the first step toward establishing a code of opinions to guide the courts in acting on the actions of radio stations throughout the country.

The decision, it was pointed out, is based not on any Federal law but establishes a precedent for the guidance of courts in future cases of ether interference.

Continuing the injunction, it was understood, means, unless the decision is overruled by a higher court, that broadcasting stations operating at a frequency within one of the cycles of a station previously in operation in the same city or within a radius of 20 or 40 miles may be required to move to some other wave channel. Thus, it is said, if there is established a rule of priority for broadcasting stations operating the same limited time of transmission.

The next step toward developing a set of legal opinions is expected to set geographical limits of interference between the signals of stations. It is not likely that any of this question will be taken to court for some time.

At least a fourth of the problem of interference, it is believed, could be eliminated by stations in Chicago, New York and other congested broadcasting areas taking steps against nearby interfering stations and forcing them to adopt other channels. Interference with phone calls of distant stations then would be automatically lessened.

It is understood that two or three other Chicago stations plan to bring suits against stations that have recently come on the air. These, under the Federal radio laws which forbid malicious interference by any radio station with the signals of another station, has not been tested in court by broadcasters. It will be difficult, it is explained, to bring out a clear-cut case of "malicious interference."

The extent to which the number of broadcasters in Chicago and New York could be reduced should the courts grant other injunctions similar to that given WGN, at the request of all of the old established stations operating at frequencies or separations of more than 40 kilocycles has not been accurately estimated. But it is understood that many small plants would be required to curtail activities or move their stations to wave bands outside the present broadcasting channels.

MEETING OF RADIO BILL CONFEREES POSTPONED

Congress Seems Convinced Permanent Law Cannot Be Enacted This Season.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Meetings of the joint congressional committees entrusted with consideration of radio legislation, that were expected to be held in Washington this week, have been postponed, probably until the opening of Congress next month, it is learned.

Although never officially announced, it was understood that plans for pre-December conference of the committee were being made in that an agreement between the House and Senate might be reached by the time Congress was ready to get down to business in December. The prediction that this would be the case was made by Senator Dill, sponsor of radio legislation in the Senate, at the radio industries banquet in August.

Failure to arrange for such meetings is understood generally to mean that Congress as a whole is unconvinced that passage of permanent radio legislation is impossible at its coming session and that a substitute temporary measure will be put through.

WGN DECISION SAID TO SET UP PRIORITY RULE

Establishes Precedent to Guide Courts in Future Suits Over Interference.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Continuance by an Illinois court of injunction forbidding broadcasting station WGES from interfering with the programs of WGN viewed by legal officials of the Government as the first step toward establishing a code of law, opinions to guide the courts in ruling on the actions of radio stations throughout the country.

The decision, it was pointed out, is based not on any Federal law but establishes a precedent or guidance of courts in future tests of ether interference.

Continuing the injunction, it is understood, means, unless the decision is overruled by a higher court, that broadcasting stations operating at a frequency within 40 kilocycles of a station previously in operation in the same city or within a radius of 30 or 40 miles can be required to move to some other wave channel. Thus, it is said, there is established a rule of priority for broadcasting stations operating the same limited zone of transmission.

The next step toward development of a set of legal opinions is expected to set geographical limits of interference between the signals of two stations. It is not likely that a test of this question will be taken to the court for some time.

At least a fourth of the present interference, it is believed, can be eliminated by stations in Chicago, New York and other congested broadcasting areas taking action against nearby interfering stations and forcing them to adopt other channels. Interference with sixth-zone of distant stations then would be automatically lessened.

It is understood that two or three other Chicago stations plan to bring suits against stations that have recently come on the air. Thus the Federal radio laws which forbid malicious interference by one radio station with the signals from another station has not been tested in court by broadcasters. It will be difficult, it is explained, to make out a clear-cut case of "malicious interference."

The extent to which the number of broadcasters in Chicago and New York could be reduced should courts grant other injunctions, similar to that given WGN, at the request of all of the old established stations operating at frequency separations of more than 40 kilocycles has not been accurately estimated. But it is understood that several stations would be required to cease activities or move their signals to wave bands outside the present broadcasting channels.

MEETING OF RADIO BILL CONFEREES POSTPONED

Congress Seems Convinced Permanent Law Cannot Be Enacted This Season.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Meetings of the joint congressional committees entrusted with consideration of radio legislation, that were expected to be held in Washington this week, have been postponed, probably until the opening of Congress next month, it is learned.

Although never officially announced, it was understood that plans for pre-December conference of the committee were being made so that an agreement between the House and Senate might be reached by the time Congress was ready to get down to business in December. A prediction that this would be the case was made by Senator Dill, sponsor of radio legislation in the Senate, at the radio industries banquet in August.

Failure to arrange for such meetings is understood generally to mean that Congress as a whole is convinced that passage of permanent radio legislation is impossible at its coming session and that a substitute temporary measure will be put through.

Representative Wallace E. White of Maine, author of a radio bill now before the conference committee, said he had received no notice of a conference committee and that it appeared unlikely that the conferees would get together before Congress convened.

HANDS FOR RADIO BRIDGE GAME FROM KSD TUESDAY

Mrs. Edward Goldsmith of Danville, Ill., and P[illegible] H. Seymour of Chicago are two of the experts who have prepared the hands for the auction bridge game to be broadcast from KSD on Tuesday evening at 9 o'clock. Milton C. Work and Wilbur C. Whitehead collaborated in preparation of the game.

The hands which will be held by the players for the sixth radio bridge game will be as follows:

Mrs. Goldsmith (dealer), "South," holds: Spades, K J 10 7 6 5; hearts, 3 2; diamonds, A J; clubs, K J 9.

Paul H. Seymour, "West," holds: Spades, 9; hearts, K Q J 10 5; diamonds, 7 4 3 2; clubs, 6 4 2.

Milton C. Work, "North," holds: Spades, 8 spot 3; hearts, 9 7 4; diamonds, K Q 10 6; clubs, A Q 10 7.

Wilbur C. Whitehead, "East," holds: Spades, A Q 4 2; hearts, A 8 spot 6; diamonds, 9 8 spot 5; clubs, 8 spot 5 3.

Everything Quiet Before Mike.

Artists and speakers before a microphone are not permitted to cough, sneeze, clear their throats or scrape their feet. Everything must be quiet.

OPERA, 'LUCIA DI LAMMERMOOR' FROM KSD TOMORROW NIGHT

The sextette from "Lucia" will against be on the air tomorrow evening when at 9 o'clock the WEAF Grand Opera Co. will repeat the tabloid version of the grand opera, "Lucia di Lammermoor," from KSD.

The principal roles will be taken by the following soloists: Lucy, Genia Zielinska, soprano; Alice Vera Nadine, contralto; Sir Edgar, Giuseppe di Benedetto, tenor; Lord Ashton, Ferruccio Corradetti, baritone; Raymond, Nino Ruisi, basso.

VIKINGS' PROGRAM FEATURES GRIEG AND POET, BJORNSON

Another Norwegian program will be offered by The Vikings from KSD at 7 o'clock Tuesday evening in honor of the poet, Bjornson.

The program will open with a brief character sketch which will reveal the human side of this great Norwegian poet. The second portion of the program will be a reading of "Bergliot," for which Grieg wrote a musical background. Many regard "Bergliot" as the most inspired of Grieg's compositions.

WORLD WIDE SHORT WAVE TESTS WRITE NEW RADIO CHAPTER

ond. Reception of the signals on 26.4 meters was marked by long skips and signals dispatched on this length were better received outside the United States than at ditsances under 3000 miles. In the tests on 50.2 meters it was explained that no skipping was noted by the signals at this point. The useful day range was set at 1100 miles and the signal strength at night was found to be good up to and possibly beyond 2650 miles. Transmissions on 65.5 meters were found to be unreliable beyond 1600 miles.

15-Meter Transmissions.

Prescott explains results from the tests as follows: "A very small percentage of the reports received were on the 20,000 KC transmission. No report were received on the daylight period within a radius of 900 miles from the transmitter, indicating an apparent skip distance of this magnitude. However, observations made by field men previous to the tests of April, gave an apparent skip distance of 600 miles. This discrepancy has been attributed to seasonal variation and the type of radiator employed. A skip distance of 1000 miles was indicated for the night period. In the region beyond the day and night skip distances the signal was consistently erratic in its behavior.

26.4-Meter Transmissions.

"About 900 observations were made on this transmission. These indicated a day skip of 100 miles, which at night increased to 450 miles. These limits, however, are not sharply defined, varying considerably from day to day. Although the signal characteristics beyond the limits of the day and night skips were not as erratic as those on 20,000 KC, the reliability was still low at a distance of 3000 miles. Beyond the region of uncertainty, the signal became more reliable and more consistent in its behavior.

"It was noted that at 2650 miles the night signal audibility is low and down gradient, which might lead to the erroneous conclusion that the useful range was not greater than 3000 miles. As a matter of fact, reports from observers in New Zealand and Australia indicated better reception than that at most points in the United States.

32.79 Meter Transmission.

"The great popularity of this transmission was largely due to the fact that previous to the April tests, it had become well known through its broadcasting of the WGY programs. Fifty per cent of all reports received were on this station (2XAF). These reports contained about 5000 observations. Analysis showed the day skip distance to be 100 miles. As was observed on the higher frequencies, this distance increased at night, becoming 400 miles.

"The limit of the day range for this transmitter could not be established definitely due to insufficient reports beyond 2650 miles. Reports on the night transmission were received from all parts of the world indicating fairly consistent high average strength for the maximum distance obtainable, i. e., one-half of the earth's circumference.

50.2 Meter Transmission.

"The day and night audibility characteristics of 5970 KC (50.2 M) transmission indicate that no skip distance existed at this frequency. The useful day range of this transmission was definitely shown to be 1100 miles. The curve of night audibility indicates that at 2650 miles the signal strength was still good, about R-7. The analysis showed that reports from distances greater than 2100 miles were so erratic as to make it impossible to determine the absolute useful limit of the night transmission.

65.5 Meter Transmission.

"The attenuation of the day signal of 4580 KC (65.5 M) transmission was not great. At 1050 miles the strength was still fairly high, indicating that satisfactory reception might be had for 200 or 300 miles further. Actually, this was not true, because fading, static, and other factors which prove detrimental to good reception, caused the signal to become unreliable at points further than 1000 miles from the transmitter. The night audibility curve shows only slight attenuation at all distances to 2650 miles. This condition is similar to that existing in the case of the 5970 K. C. transmission. Again, erratic reports make it impossible to fix accurately the limit of the night range. Accordingly, the region beyond 1600 miles must be considered as an unreliable zone.

109 Meters Transmission.

"This frequency behaved more in conformity with those of the broadcast and commercial channels than did any of the other frequencies used during the test. Day and night audibilities were quite rapidly attenuated, the former reaching a lower useful limit at 400 miles, while the latter was sufficient to furnish a satisfactory signal for 1000 miles. It will be observed that these audibilities were less at 70 miles from the transmitter than at several of the more remote points. This 'dip' was evidenced by the observations made previous to those of April, thereby strengthening the belief that it is characteristic of this frequency."

Insane Woman Calmed By Song in Native Tongue

Patients Delighted as Singer and Violinists Test Power of Music as an Alleviator of Pain.

An experiment conducted by the Board of Religious Organizations to test the benefit of music in hospitals has revolutionized ideas of institution executives and thrilled its sponsors, but made its biggest hit with the patients it was intended to soothe.

At the city infirmary Miss Sylvia Walden of the St. Louis Philharmonic Orchestra handed her $2000 violin to an aged musician and watched his old eyes kindle as he played a passage of the "Poet and Peasant." Mrs. Mildred Doland, soloist of St. Michael and All Angels Episcopal Church, and Miss Walden played and sang for scores of mentally afflicted at city sanitarium and peace came to distraught faces. In the severest test of all, in a fracture ward in city hospital, pain-racked bodies ceased their tossing.

The test was arranged by Mrs. Isa Maude Ilsen of New York, head of the Association for Music in Hospitals, who was called here by Mrs. Richard Dudley of the Board of Religious Organizations.

Initial results Tuesday were such that the board announced Mrs. E. A. Porter and Mrs. Mattie Wassell would proceed at once with training musicians for regular visits to St. Louis hospitals.

Quieting an Insane Woman.

Such emergencies as they must be trained to meet were dramatically exemplified at City Sanitarium. An Italian woman with delusions of persecution began to imprecate the "Americanos." Mrs. Ilsen asked Mrs. Doland to sing something in Italian to soothe her.

The patient glared at the singer, and in the midst of the song broke out again in a menacing undertone but presently the clear voice and familiar tongue seemed to quiet her. As the song ended she arose and went to her room.

There was a stir in the women's medical ward at City Hospital, where the musicians paid for their first visit, when they entered and without preliminary Miss Walden began to play. The singer accompanying her threaded the long rows of beds, singing first a flippant dance song, then a bit of sentiment, then a coquettish something about "I ain't got nothin', don't want nothin 'cept you." Many smiled and all except one seemed pleased. She was the one that Dr. E. A. Scharff, Superintendent of the hospital, paid particular attention to. It was his theory that music which would please and help some patients in a big ward would annoy and excite others. This woman had lain without a change of expression. But as the musicians departed, she was one of the most enthusiastic in her applause.

Dr. Scharff carefully took the reactions of each patient. The only complaint was, "They didn't play long enough."

"But wait," said Dr. Scharff, "until they try the fracture ward, where the patients are in acute pain."

Patients in Pain Enjoy Music.

A woman, whose whole body seemed rigged up in an ungainly apparatus, just inside the door of the fracture ward, turned her head painfully, lifted a towel from her forehead, saw the violin and pleaded, "Please play for me." Beside her another tossed and fretted in fever, but quieted as she listened to the music.

"Won't you sing 'My Old Kentucky Home'?" asked a convalescent, and sang it with Mrs. Doland. A woman on the other side of the ward motioned to Mrs. Ilsen. Her hearing had been impaired, and Miss Walden went very near to play for her. The more powerful tone caused another woman to stir.

"Is it too loud for you?" asked a visitor, testing Dr. Scharff's objection. "Oh, no," was the reply. "I've got a little headache today, but it's all so lovely I don't mind."

In a screened bed, as the more critical cases are kept, a woman was moaning when the musicians entered. When they left one tiptoed back to see her. She was fast asleep.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients. It is known as Wyeth's Sage & Sulphur Compound, and can be obtained at all drug stores for only 75 cents a bottle.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger.

Captivating

MISS MILDRED CAMPBELL

Girls whose beauty captivates the imagination and holds admiration everywhere they go, usually have peach-blow complexion, like that of Miss Mildred Campbell, of 1811 Atlantic Ave., Brooklyn, New York. She says: "It was hard for me to find a face powder which tones in with my skin in texture and color, but Black and White Face Powder is simply perfect! By mixing two tints I get a shade exactly harmonizing with my type, and this lovely powder is so fine and soft, it seems like part of my complexion."

Whatever your type, you can get the tint most flatteringly becoming to you in the exquisitely textured Black and White Face Powder, which dealers everywhere are recommending and selling at 25c a package.

If your dealer doesn't have the Black and White Beauty Creations you want, send his name to Plough, Dept. G-121, Memphis, Tenn., and you will receive free a copy of the Birthday and Dream Book, containing many interesting facts on beauty, dreams and fortune telling.

POINCARE IN FRENCH SECRET CODE IS 'LITTLE WHISKERS'

Premier Orders Change When He Discovers That and Other Diplomatic Titles.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—The French foreign office has just changed its private code for secret diplomatic correspondence, because of an astounding discovery made by Premier Poincare.

"Who is this person 'Tata' referred to in this dispatch?" the premier asked a young attache.

"Tchicherin, Monsieur Le President," was the reply. "And Kiki?" the premier continued. "That's our code word for Trosky." Then followed the translation of Moumouche, Fanfan, Choute, and Mouche—all of them nicknames in vogue in the protocol.

"When you refer to me in code dispatches," asked M. Poincare, "what name do I draw?" The young attache blushed, and finally blurted: "Barbichon." Barbichon means in France "The Little Bearded One," or "Little Whiskers." The premier never cracked a smile. The next day, however, M. Briand, the foreign minister, received the following note:

"Dear Lulu: Please ask your young collaborators henceforth to choose their code names from Greco-Roman mythology rather than from among their little girl friends. Ever yours, Barbichon."

BREAKS ANY COLD IN A FEW HOURS

"Pape's Cold Compound" is Pleasant—Gives Instant Relief

A dose taken every two hours until three doses are taken will end grippe misery and break up a cold.

It promptly opens clogged-up nostrils and air passages in the head, stops nasty discharge or nose running, relieves sick headache, dullness, feverishness, sore throat, sneezing, soreness and stiffness.

Don't stay stuffed-up! Quit blowing and snuffling: Ease your throbbing head! Nothing else in the world gives such prompt relief as "Pape's Cold Compound," which costs only thirty-five cents at any drug store. It acts without assistance, tastes nice, causes no inconvenience. Be sure you get the genuine. Don't accept something else.

Miami

It's June Here Now!

Another "season" has already started in this tropical vacation land. The customary early arrivals are here and are finding Miami the same healthful, enjoyable pleasurable spot of former years. Their comfort and convenience, in housing or in play, show no effect of the September storm.

Miami is ready, as usual, to entertain in the manner that has won this city renown as the "World's Greatest Winter Resort." Within the year a quarter of a billion dollars has been spent in building, enlarging, extending, making Miami a greater city; adding to its attractiveness, increasing its utilities, providing more accommodations, creating new sources of entertainment or making more easily enjoyed those features which have made this city famous.

Every summertime sport is available here throughout the winter—surf bathing in a sea warmed by the Gulf Stream—golf on eleven sporty courses—polo on fine palm-bordered fields—tennis, on fifty fine courts—motoring over 1200 miles of daintiless highways—fishing in the Angler's Paradise—boating over multi-hued waters.

In addition there is the fast Spanish game of Jai Alai and greyhound racing all the season. Horse racing (45-day meet, mid-January to March). Dancing in scores of ball rooms, supper clubs, gay casinos, and pavilions of oriental splendor.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a mild laxative, a vegetable compound of Egyptian Senna with pepsin and desirable aromatics, and so appreciated that it is now the largest selling preparation of its kind in the world, over 10 million bottles being used annually. The formula is on every package.

Three Rules of Health

Always keep a bottle of Syrup Pepsin in the family medicine chest. Give it to any one from infant to grandparent, for it is safe, and the cost is less than a cent a dose. Give it for constipation, torpid liver, indigestion, biliousness, headaches, colds and other evidence of bowel obstruction. Dr. Caldwell, who was a practicing physician for 47 years and who originated this formula, had three rules of health that he found very effective among his patients, which you can follow with great benefit: Keep the head cool, the feet warm and the bowels open.

RAIN OF MUD SWEEPS FRANCE

Hailstones Also Damage Casinos in Southern End of County.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—With the skies raining mud, and large hailstones breaking thousands of windows on the Riviera, Southern France had a taste recently of the climatic disorders that have been sweeping over the world. The damage is estimated at 150,000 francs in broken glass and several score of people cut and bruised by the hail.

The rain of mud was the first since 1892. This phenomenon happens when an especially violent sirocco, or hot wind, from North Africa, heavily laden with fine particles of sand, reaches France at a low altitude and passes under the rain clouds. The rain then carries the dust to the earth. Mud deposits an inch deep have been discovered in some sections.

The Casinos of Nice were the heaviest sufferers from the hail. The entire glass front of the Baccarat rooms of the Municipal Casino was smashed by the storm. The fire department was forced to work all night in an attempt to bail out the gaming rooms. A thousand windows in the Jetee Casino on the sea front were broken.

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 279 N. Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

"My wife and children thought I was dying when, after an attack of acute pains in my stomach, I became unconscious. It was right after our Sunday dinner. They say I looked like dead and guess I had a pretty close shave. I had been having more or less stomach trouble and bloating with gas for past two years and could get no permanent help. Talking with a friend about my attack, he advised me to try MAYR'S. I have not had any gas or stomach trouble since taking it eighteen months ago." DESERTER DOTY'S 'HARD LABOR' IS SEWING TROUSERS

American in French Military Prison Says Homesickness, and Not Cowardice, Prompted His Flight.

HIS HEROISM PRAISED BY COMMANDANT

"Model Prisoner and Fine Boy," Says Captain, and "Clare" Expects to Win Early Freedom.

By the Associated Press.

ALBERTVILLE, Savoie, France, Nov. 20.—Hopeful that his deserter's sentence of eight years in the gloom of a French military prison will be terminated before it runs its course, Bennett J. Dotty of Biloxi, Miss., who was "Gilbert Clare" of the Foreign Legion remains cheerful and seemingly courageous.

Two "worries" were confessed to a correspondent of The Associated Press. His fingers are too slow in sewing army trousers, the "hard labor" to which he was sentenced, and he's afraid the folks back home will think cowardice, instead of homesickness, prompted his flight from warfare in the arid Syrian desert.

Is a Model Prisoner.

Doty was sentenced by a French courtmartial at Damascus, on August 16 last, to the military penitentiary here for his attempt to leave the French Foreign Legion when serving on the soil of an alien land. There, under the name of Gilbert Clare of Memphis, Tenn., he had fought the Druse rebels in the campaign before Soueida and the mountains of the Houran.

Perched high in the Alps, in the shadow of Mont Blanc, the military penitentiary of Albertville, overlooking a beautiful valley surrounded by snow capped peaks, has a forbidding and gloomy aspect.

"Clare is a model prisoner," said Captain Besancon, commandant of the institution. "His army record is splendid and he is a fine boy."

A little thinner and somewhat paler, clothed in a nondescript prison uniform, long brown coat, flap cap, wooden shoes, Clare presented a sharp contrast to the proud soldier whom the correspondent had visited in the citadel at Damascus last June.

"Morale" Not Impaired.

His morale is unimpaired, however, and he greeted his visitor with evident pleasure.

"Not so bad for a man who was reported executed last June," he replied to an inquiry as to his health.

"You boys better go and walk in the sun," said the Alpine Chasseur, a little "Blue Devil" with fixed bayonet, patrolling the inner court. Within high walls and in a narrow strip of sunshine, the American Legionary and the correspondent walked back and forth for an hour, while the sentry studiously looked the other way.

Clare relished an American cigarette.

"Yes I get plenty to eat," he said. "A big bowl of soup in the morning; a piece of meat, one pound of bread and a plate of vegetables at noon; another quart of soup at night. It isn't the Ritz Hotel, but I can't kick. It might have been daisies by the roots!"

Makes Three Pair a Day.

"What about the hard labor?" he was asked.

Clare laughed outright. "Hard labor! Hard labor!" he repeated. "Do you know what I do? I am sewing trousers for the army. Some 'midinette.' I never did my own mending when I was in the Legion, simply couldn't handle a needle. And now I have to turn in three completed pairs of trousers a day. The best I can finish up is one pair and one leg and I am steadily falling behind. It worries me. The needle is harder on the fingers than the trigger of the rifle.

"Gee, but it feels funny to be doing woman's work. I certainly didn't expect this when I enlisted. I wanted to meet Mister Abd-el-Krim. I thought they were going to send me to Morocco, but they found me another war just as good."

"'Twas nothing, we couldn't very well run away from those birds," was all he would say of the deed that won for him the Croix de Guerre.

Captain Besancon later produced Clare's citations for valor.

Denies Was Afraid.

"I hope they don't think I ran away because I was scared," Clare said suddenly. "I don't know what came over me. We hadn't been gone three hours before I knew we had pulled a boner but it was too late to turn back. Palestine certainly did look to me like the Promised Land that evening."

Clare feels some anxiety about the disposition which will be made of him when, in conformity with Premier Poincare's program of economies, the military penitentiary here is closed Dec. 31.

"I am worried lest I be sent to some civil prison with a lot of sneak thieves, pickpockets, burglars or hold-up men," he said. "I have committed no crime against society and I don't want to be penned up with real jailbirds."

Expects Early Freedom.

Capt. Besancon informed Clare he would probably be sent to a military prison either at Bordeaux or Marseilles.

"I have confidence in the sense of justice of the French Ministry of War," the prisoner said. "I can hardly think they will let me rot eight years in prison. I risked my life several times for their cause and I feel sure that when this ballyhooing has subsided, they will edge me out of this quietly!"

"Soup is ready, Clare," said the little Blue Devil sauntering up.

The big steel and iron gate swung noisily upon its heavy hinges and Clare disappeared into the somber prison. Leaning his face against the bars Clare shouted as a farewell: "This is great life, if you don't weaken."

THE BEGINNING WAS THE END IN HIS CASE

United Railway Employe Tells How It All Came About.

Mr. O. T. Tucker, well-known employe of the United Railway Company, residing at 1721 Dolman street, St. Louis, Mo., says that he thinks Herb Juice is worth $20 a bottle of anyone's money, as when he began using it that was when his trouble began to end, and to show his faith in this medicine he gave the following signed statement:

MR. O. T. TUCKER.

"Prior to taking Herb Juice, which was recommended by a friend," said Mr. Tucker, "my entire system was in such an upset condition that I was about disgusted with everything, and how could I help from being when my stomach was in such a condition that I could not set down and enjoy a good meal, but instead had to be very careful about my diet, and even then I was in constant misery from gas and indigestion. I was always constipated; live sluggish and I was troubled a great deal with weak, dizzy spells. Worrying over my condition had about made a nervous wreck out of me, and to make things worse I simply could not sleep soundly or get a good night's rest. I saw a lot in the paper about Herb Juice and when a friend told me how much good it had done him I said 'Well, I will try it also,' and to my great relief it proved to be just the medicine for my condition. In just a short time the bowels were acting regular and then my other trouble began to leave. Stomach is now in fine condition, eat just what I want and never have a sign of my former trouble. Sure is a wonderful feeling to be able to sleep soundly all night and awake feeling refreshed and ready for a hard day's work. As I said before Herb Juice was well worth $20 per bottle to me, and I feel as though it is one medicine I can safely recommend to anyone."

Don't fail to see the Herb Juice man, direct from the Herb Juice Laboratories, who has established headquarters at Walgreen's drug store, 514 Washington avenue, and learn more of this great medicine that has relieved thousands of people right here in St. Louis. The great Herbal Extract remedy called Herb Juice, now selling at the rate of more than a million bottles yearly.

OLD Y. M. C. A. CARDS GOOD AT NEW BUILDING

Unexpired Memberships May Be Redeemed— Many Innovations Are Introduced.

Holders of unexpired memberships in the old Central Y. M. C. A., who may have thought they were out of luck since that building at Grand boulevard and Franklin avenue burned Jan. 14, 1921, may redeem their memberships in the new $1,500,000 downtown "Y" at Sixteenth and Locust streets.

If a member had $2 worth of his paid-up membership still to run in the old Central, he may obtain membership in the new "Y" for as long as the $2 will pay for. The time will be somewhat shorter because men members of the old "Y" paid $15 a year, while in the new one men between 21 and 24 pay $18 a year, and above those ages, $24.

That fee covers all membership and athletic privileges, including use of the two gymnasiums and swimming pool. The pool, will be heated to 74 or 76 degrees. A popular fallacy that the frigidity of some Y. M. C. A. pools was the way a hard-boiled physical director liked it was dispelled by the new director here, Claude A. Neavles. He explained that temperatures were kept down to discourage bacteria, but that a new chlorination process in this pool took care of that and enabled the temperature to be six or eight degrees higher.

Those desiring to use only the lounge, reading room, cafeteria and the like, without athletic privileges, may take a "basic membership" for $5 a year. Business men may join a Business Men's Club, with special concessions of privacy, Turkish baths and other inducements, for an initiation fee of $10 and $50 a year.

Privacy for each type of member is a principal feature of the new building. Boys have a separate entrance, separate clubrooms and locker rooms, and will have use of gyms and pool at separate times from older members. Another entrance and another set of clubrooms are for boys who work.

Residents, rather than transitory guests, are sought for the six floors of "residence halls." In an emergency a member may obtain lodging there for the night but no inducement is offered, and the rate will be proportionate to the weekly rate of $4 to $6.75 a week.

LUDENDORFF FLED IN DISGUISE TO ESCAPE REVOLT IN 1918

Former Finnish Minister Who Engineered Coup Says Dead Man Was Impersonated.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Nov. 20.—A story of how Gen. Erich Ludendorff fled from Germany when the revolution impended in 1918, in the guise of a then recently deceased Finnish diplomat, is told by Dr. Edward Hjelf, former Finnish minister to Berlin.

Ludendorff, fearing for his life at the hands of revolutionists, quit the army and appealed through the foreign office to Dr. Hjelf for protection. Dr. Hjelf said he obtained for the general a diplomatic passport in the name of Ernst Lindstrom, "counsellor of the ministry." He then prescribed that Ludendorff shave off his mustache and dress himself in a smart business suit, felt hat and colored horn-rimmed glasses. That would make him look exactly like the late diplomat, Lindblom, whose death was not generally known and whose name, though well known, would certainly be mistaken by border authorities for "Lindstrom," slovenly written.

Dr. Hjelf said he engineered Ludendorff's escape with the knowledge and consent of the Finnish Minister of War. He asserted that the general was particularly pleased when the diplomatic automobile which drove him to the northern border did not fly the red flag, the diplomatic emblem of Finland at the time. But Ludendorff, once over the frontier, went to Sweden instead of Finland.

CHRIST PAINTING RAISES STORM

Jesus Portrayed With Money Changers in Skull Cap.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Portrayal of Jesus Christ in a skull cap has raised a storm of comment among art critics who have seen W. Roberts' picture, "Christ and the Money Changers in the Temple," which is on exhibition at the new Chenil Galleries.

The Biblical story is depicted in a modern manner. There are the 12 money changers, but, unlike the popular impression of these Biblical characters, they are attired only in black loin clothes. All are clean shaven and carry the very latest thing in ledgers and cash books under their arms. Christ stands, a distorted figure, hairless, wearing a sleeveless Cambridge blue costume, his head is covered with a skull cap. In his clenched hand is a knout with which he is driving out the usurers.

CHARGES IDLE WOMEN TEACH REPUGNANCE FOR REAL WORK

Lady Rhondda, English Business Leader, Also Says They Put Too Much Emphasis on Sex.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 20.— Lady Rhondda, England's leading business woman, believes that there are too many idle women among the smart set and that their ideas, especially those on sex, as a whole, are "unhealthy."

Lady Rhondda, writing under the pseudonym of "Candida," in "Time and Tide," a feminist weekly review, which publication she controls, says: "The number of idle, useless women has increased enormously in 60 days, and not only that, but their influence has increased enormously."

It is contended that there is a smart set or its equivalent in every town and every suburb which spends its time playing afternoon bridge, motoring, playing tennis and otherwise idles away day after day, with the sole idea of "time killing."

"There is danger that this unhealthy, immoral and corroding attitude toward life may spread through the community." Lady Rhondda asserts, and charges the women of leisure with teaching men and young women to dislike work, to value material comfort, personal adornment and social advancement and to judge people purely on how they dress.

"People of this class put entirely too much emphasis on the sex problems and the importance of sexual attraction," declares the Viscountess.

Child Gets Sick, Cross, Feverish if Constipated

Look at tongue! Then give fruity laxative for stomach, bowels

"California Fig Syrup" can't harm children and they love it

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign the little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Fig Syrup" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious, "fruity laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside cleansing." Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," then see that it is made by "The California Fig Syrup Company."

over the past twenty years. Think how many laxatives have come and how many have gone.

And through it all, Pluto Water has remained America's standard physic! The reason? Just this: Pluto Water quickly rids the system of germ-laden waste. Whereas slow-acting cathartics leave the poison germs to breed over night, Pluto Water works in 30 minutes to two hours. Safe, harmless, won't gripe. Physicians prescribe Pluto Water. Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

When Baby Complains.

There are many ways a baby has of expressing any pain or irregularity or digression from its normal condition of health and happiness. A short sharp cry, a prolonged irritated cry. Restlessness, a constant turning of the head or of the whole body, fretful. In these and other ways a baby tells you there is something wrong. Most mothers know that a disordered stomach, or bowels that do not act naturally are the cause of most of baby's sufferings. A call for the doctor is the first thought, but in the event of any delay there should be ready at hand a safe remedy such as Fletcher's Castoria.

Castoria has been used for baby's ailments for over 30 years and has merited the good will of the family physician in a measure not equaled by any other baby's medicine because of its harmlessness and the good results achieved.

And remember this: Castoria is essentially a baby's remedy and not a cure-all for every member of the family. What might help you is too often dangerous when given to a babe.

Fletcher's Castoria safely relieves

HOOVER TO DETAIL WATERWAY PLAN IN 2-DAY CONVENTION

Secretary Will Be Principal Speaker at Tomorrow's Opening Session at Hotel Statler.

PROGRAM CALLS FOR $100,000,000 A YEAR

James E. Smith, Veteran Champion of Movement, Presiding Officer, Outlines Demand on Congress

Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, advocate of a national policy of development of water resources for all uses, will be the principal speaker at the opening session of the Mississippi Valley Association convention at Hotel Statler tomorrow.

The convention, the eighth annual gathering of the association, which is interested primarily in waterway transportation, will be in session tomorrow and Tuesday. About 1500 delegates from business, civic and agricultural organizations are expected.

Secretary Hoover, in an address before the Columbia River Basin League, in Seattle, Aug. 21 last, outlined his program for orderly development of the major drainage systems of the United States, for purposes of transportation, irrigation, power, flood control and reclamation. The plan included the Mississippi River and its chief tirbutaries, the Great Lakes, intracoastal waterways, the Columbia and Colorado rivers and the Great Valley of California.

He said the program could be carried out by Federal expenditures of $200,000,000 a year, supplemented by the expenditures of states, local communities and hydro-electric companies. The Federal Government, he said, is now spending about $65,000,000 a year on isolated waterway and reclamation undertakings, so that the added cost would be $135,000,000 a year. The result, he said, would be "economic well-being measureable only in billions."

Discuss Program in Congress.

Discussion in the convention will bear on the action to be taken by Congress, at its session beginning Dec. 6, on the proposed program for completion of the nation's river and harbor system within five years. In this connection, Congressman Cleveland A. Newton of St. Louis, leader of the waterway forces in the Lower House, will be an important figure in the gathering.

James E. Smith of St. Louis, veteran leader of the waterway movement among business men, will preside at both sessions tomorrow. At the opening session Dean William Scarlett of Christ Church Cathedral will deliver the invocation, and Mayor Miller will give the address of welcome. Secretary Hoover is scheduled to follow the Mayor, and the other speaker of the morning will be R. W. Dunlap, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture.

In the afternoon the speakers scheduled are Representative S. Wallace Dempsey of Lockport, N. Y., chairman of the House Rivers and Harbors Committee; Major-General Edgar Jadwin, chief of engineers, United States army, and Congressman Newton.

Tuesday morning Newton will preside, and the speakers will be Brigadier-General T. Q. Ashburn, chairman of the Inland Waterways Corporation, and President Smith of the association. Smith will present his annual report, and this will be followed by a general discussion, with speeches from many delegates, the discussion to continue after luncheon.

Will Elect Officers Tuesday.

The sessions will be held in the sixteenth floor ballroom of the Statler, and a buffet luncheon will be served after each morning session. Officers will be elected by the association Tuesday, and the new and retiring officers will meet in Parlor A of the Statler, on the mezzanine floor, at 6:30 p. m. Tuesday.

President Smith, in announcing the expected scope of the convention, and the demand to be made on Congress, said:

"Waterway development long ago passed beyond the scope of any individual, organization, group of men or organizations. It is a national problem, which all who have given the subject any study will agree will sooner or later demand solution in the form of early completion over a definite period of years.

"Congress is ever an uncertain quality. There will always be opponents to waterway development as long as there is competition for water transportation. Congress, however, reflects the opinion of the public, and the people of this country are behind waterway development as they never have been before. They have seen its benefits demonstrated in cold figures; they have learned through the lessons of the war the national asset which inland waterways properly developed can be made.

"The people of this country, unless all signs fail, want a national waterway development program carried into execution—they want a transportation system not dependent upon any one unit. They want a transportation system which will include all means of transportation properly co-ordinated."

Illinois Evangelist Coming.

Iri R. Sidwell, Illinois evangelist, will begin evangelistic services tomorrow night at University Christian Church, Kingshighway and Enright avenue. Services will be held each night, except Saturday, for two weeks.

SHAW ESTATE BUYS $275,000 FOR DELMAR BLVD. SITE

Deal Represents Profit of $50,000 to Company That Retains Lease on Union Boulevard Corner.

KEY PACKING CO. BUYS ENTIRE BLOCK

Purchase Was Preliminary to Plans for Building Large Plant on Broadway.

By Berry Moore.

A record operation, obviously engineered by an adept in his line, was concluded yesterday with the sale to the Shaw estate of the fee to the northeast corner of Delmar and Union boulevard, controlled by the Keystone Investment Co., of which Charles E. Richardson is president.

The site has a frontage on Delmar of 223 feet by a depth on Union boulevard of 150 feet. A corner owner and lessor, with an frontage of 100 feet on Delmar, comprising 10 stores and 32 apartments, occupies the corner. A three-story commercial building occupies the east 123 feet of the Delmar frontage.

The entire site is held by the Keystone Investment Co., under a 99-year lease, executed by Arthur Morey, vice president of the Commonwealth Steel Co., the former owner and lessor with an option to purchase at a stipulated price. Acquisition of the fee was subject to the 99-year lease, which the Keystone Investment Co. has retained, with the Arthur Morey conveying the title fee in order not to merge the fee and leasehold.

Profit of $50,000.

The purchase price provided for the lease, it is understood, was $225,000, while the price paid by the Shaw estate was $275,000, representing a profit of $50,000 to the Keystone Co. The Keystone still has a potential profit in the leasehold with the buildings, which have a high rental valuation, and as they are on one of the corners in the West End.

Morey, who had acquired the fee at a relatively low valuation through the John S. Blake & Bro. Real Estate Co., only a short time since surrendering control under the 99-year lease to the Keystone Co., also received a generous profit on his investment.

The lease provides for a net annual rental of $15,000 for the first five years, $16,000 for the second five years, and $17,000 a year for the remaining 89 years, at which the Shaw estate will receive title to the owner of the fee.

The construction of the corner building was started with a loan from Miller & Co., and was refinanced when the concern went into receivership on a loan of $220,000 arranged by Sam Hamburg Jr. The owner of the leasehold virtually owning the buildings, will receive the rentals and pay the less the ground rental.

The Shaw estate comprises the extensive real estate holdings of the late Henry Shaw, including the Botanical Gardens, and finally Tower Grove Park, which he bequeathed to the city. They are carried in the name of the Missouri Botanical Garden Association, which has trusteeship of the properties. Surplus funds of the estate are restricted to gilt-edged improved real estate. The Union and Delmar fee or site was purchased as a permanent investment. In this operation, involving an unrepresented profit, is expected to yield a renewed speculative interest in this section; which has been listed by Le Grand Jones, Inc., handling the negotiations in connection with Cornet & Zeibig, the former agents for the Keystone Investment Co., and the latter for the Shaw estate.

Enlarged Packing Plant.

Another city block was acquired by the Krey Packing Co., in connection with plans for a large meat packing plant. This acquisition has a frontage of 332 feet on Broadway, 416 feet 4 3-5 inches on Pitzman street, 523 feet 9 inches on Prescott, and 320 feet on Prescott street. It was purchased from the Krey Realty Co., of which John Krey was president, through the Mercantile Trust Co. It adjoins the block running from Broadway to Prescott, and from Newman to Rutgers street, owned by the Hirsch Estate, purchased the week before through Jerry D. Headley, president of the Heimenz Realty Co.

The two blocks, 6600 and 6700 Broadway, have an aggregate frontage on Broadway approximating 700 feet. The amount involved in the acquisition of these two blocks has not been disclosed. Plans for the new plant were announced exclusively in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch. John H. Bresch acted for the Krey Packing Co. in both purchases.

The week's chief residential transactions involved the purchase by Aaron Waldheim of the residence of Edward A. Wagner, president of the Wagner, Grant Bell Real Estate Co., at 5925 Lindell boulevard recently completed and the purchase of 16 Portland place, the residence of Dwight F. Davis, Secretary of War, by Andrew W. Johnson, vice president of the International Shoe Co. Description of these homes are given elsewhere.

WOOLF BROTHERS INC. TO OPEN STORE HERE

Exclusive Men's Furnishings Shop of Unique Design Ready for Trade Tomorrow.

Woolf Brothers, Inc., the largest company in America devoted to the retailing of exclusive men's furnishings, has announced the opening of a St. Louis store at 816 Olive street Monday.

The store is unusual in a number of respects. The Olive street show windows are of unique design, being constructed on what is known as the shadow-box principle, which entirely eliminates reflections in the glass. No glass appears at the sidewalk line, as is customary, but instead an open front of wrought iron, handsomely finished. The glass extends back from the upper edge of this in concave form so that at its base it is set back several feet from the actual front.

A system of black glass reflectors set in the recess thus formed helps to eliminate the reflections, and merchandise placed in the windows appears to be exposed.

Red Numidian marble is incorporated in the decorative scheme of the show windows. Facing on the lobby side of the store are five additional show windows of standard type, finished in walnut.

The interior of the new store appears like the lobby of a club. The walls and ceiling are paneled in walnut, hand-carved and hand-tooled in Gothic design. At the south end is a large Gothic fireplace of carved walnut, framed in red Numidian marble. The lighting fixtures are of cast bronze. Combined yellow Kasota and pink Kasota stone, diagonally laid, form the floor on which a number of Oriental rugs are placed.

Next to the fireplace is a broad half-circle staircase leading to the mezzanine, where the men's clothing and custom shirt departments are located.

Woolf Brothers, Inc., have been in business for 60 years and now have stores in Wichita, Kan.; Tulsa, Ok.; Lawrence, Kan., and Columbia, Mo., in addition to Kansas City stores.

The new store will be managed by Drane Wilkinson, former owner of the Wilkinson Clothing Co. The lease on the store was closed by Isaac T. Cook & Co., Inc., agents for the Paul Brown Building.

AARON WALDHEIM BUYS LINDELL BLDV. HOME

Aaron Waldheim has purchased the residence at 5925 Lindell boulevard from Edward A. Wagner. The consideration was not announced. Negotiations were handled by the Wagner-Grant-Bell Real Estate Co., of which Wagner is president.

The house is English in design and has 17 rooms and five baths. When plans for the house were announced, cost of construction was estimated at $125,000. Waldheim purchased the house for a home. The house was built by Wagner, who has occupied it since its completion several months ago. Waldheim now lives at 4522 Lindell boulevard. He was represented in the transaction by Sam Hamburg Jr.

EPSTEIN & SON INSTRUMENTAL IN SALE OF KINGSHIGHWAY LOT

J. I. Epstein & Son report they have been instrumental in the sale of lot 14, block 4, Kingshighway Hills, on which will be erected a four-family apartment. This will be the first building to be started in the new South Kingshighway subdivision.

Streets, sidewalks, sewer, gas, water and electricity will be installed prior to the completion of the building.

J. I. Epstein & Son also report negotiating lease of five years on the first floor of 1124 Washington avenue to the New York Manufacturing Corporation of New York City. The lessor was represented by Martin-Breitt company.

MERCANTILE COMPANY SELLS PROPERTY AT 1303 SPRUCE

The Mercantile Trust Co. reports the sale of 1303 Spruce street to the Union Service Co. for the account of the N. O. Nelson Manufacturing Co. Zeibig represented the Union Service Co.

The Mercantile Trust Co. also reports the sale of the lot on Locust street east of Compton avenue, formerly known as 3148 Locust street, for the account of Hugh Campbell to Miss Hannah Reynolds. Cornet & Zeibig represented the owner and the Mercantile Trust Co. represented Miss Reynolds. This property will be used as additional space for the Modern Plate and Window Glass Co.

OZARK ATHLETIC CLUB TO BUILD

"Out where the West begins," in the district bordering Forest Park, it is planned to erect the new Ozark Athletic Club, the exterior design for which is reproduced in today's group of building pictures. A more detailed account of the plans for the new club appears on page 12B of the editorial section of today's Post-Dispatch.

SEVERAL LEASES EXECUTED BY MULLIN-WALTERS REALTY CO.

The Mullin-Walters Realty Co. reports an active week in downtown commercial leases. Sigmund S. Trattner has leased the second floor in the seven-story-and-basement building at 1107-09 Washington avenue for a term of years. He will use it for office, factory, salesroom and sampleroom for ladies' millinery. The George P. Poulson Co., millinery, has leased part of the first floor in the building at 123 Washington avenue. James G. Leonardos has leased the double store at 6242-44 Delmar boulevard for a restaurant. John Holzinger has leased the two-story building at 1546 Menard street, the first floor for a grocery store and the upper for living quarters. The European Hair Store closed a lease on the building at 708 North Broadway.

MARTIN & BREITT REPORT MAKING 3 BUILDING LEASES

Martin & Breitt have leased the storeroom at 1124 Washington avenue to the New York Manufacturing Corporation, which is a new company entering St. Louis.

Sidney Mohlman & Co. closed a lease on the building being completed at 1108 Locust street.

The property was purchased last February by Charles A. Niemeyer. Work on the new building was then started. Martin & Breitt handled the lease.

Martin & Breitt also report having leased the third floor of the Dolph Building, Seventh and Locust streets, to the Riggs Optical Co., formerly known as the Genevia Optical Co.

Lamson Co. Leases Store on Grand.

Henry R. Weisels Co., Inc., reports having closed a long term lease on the corner store, together with two offices in the Olivia Building, at the northwest corner of Grand boulevard and Windsor place, to the Lamson Co. The premises will be used as a sales and display room of "Ice Maid" refrigerators.

20 SALES OF LOTS IN NEW ELECTRA PARK SUBDIVISION

More than 20 sales of lots were reported at Electra Park on Goodfellow avenue in the northwest industrial district during the week. This subdivision was placed on the market only a week ago and was platted as available for sites of employes in the big industrial plants adjacent.

The tract is in close proximity to the site of the proposed $5,000,000 plant of the General Electric Co.

FRED W. SCHERZER JOINS RENGEL-WEBER REALTY CO.

Fred W. Scherzer, former manager of the Eden publishing house and engaged in the real estate business for the last seven years, has joined the sales force of the Rengel-Weber Realty Co. on the South Side.

BERGFELD REALTY CO. REPORTS SALE OF DUNCAN AV. TRACT

The George F. Bergfeld Realty Co. reports the sale of a large tract of industrial property on the south side of Duncan avenue, 150 feet west of Vandeventer avenue, having a frontage of 75 feet and depth of 500 feet, to S. Seidel, of the S. Seidel Coal and Coke Co.

The firm also reports the sale of 6911 Waterman avenue, a two-story brick residence of eight rooms, and garage for two cars, to G. E. Bramon for Laura F. Kane.

Well Company Adds 4 Departments.

Ralph Well, president of the Well Clothing Co., announced yesterday that the firm planned the addition of four new departments, men's hats, men's furnishings, boys' hats and boys' furnishings. These four new departments are to be under the direct supervision of Carl L. Kamke, who comes from Mandel Bros. of Chicago.

PHARMACY COLLEGE TO HAVE NEW BUILDING

Campaign to Raise $300,000 Fund for Institution Will Open Nov. 30.

A campaign to raise $300,000 for the erection of a new building for the St. Louis College of Pharmacy on a recently purchased site at Euclid avenue and Parkview place will open Nov. 30, it was announced by authorities of the college yesterday.

The new building, a three-story brick structure, will cost approximately $200,000, and an additional $75,000 will be spent for equipment. Present plans include lecture halls and laboratories on each of the three floors, with a modern drug store incorporated in the first floor plan. The store, while open to the public, will also be the "class room" for the instruction of students in store arrangement, window displays and the practical problems of their profession. In addition to the three lecture halls there will be a large assembly hall suitable for meetings of the Alumni and Retail Druggists' Associations.

A feature in connection with the proposed new college building is the medicinal plant garden recently started in Shaw's Garden. Students will be required to study the so-called "drug weeds," which they will use later in the college laboratories and prescription rooms.

The St. Louis College of Pharmacy was established in 1864 and has been conducted at its present location, Twenty-first and Locust streets, for the last 34 years. The present enrollment is 230 students.

The building fund campaign will be conducted among alumni of the college, the Retail Druggists' Association and manufacturers of drugs and chemicals. It is the plan of the Building Committee to start construction in January and it is expected the new institution will be ready for occupancy at the opening of the fall term next year.

DWIGHT F. DAVIS RESIDENCE SOLD

Andrew W. Johnson Purchases Home in Portland Place.

The residence of Dwight F. Davis, Secretary of War, 16 Portland place, has been purchased by Andrew W. Johnson, vice president of the International Shoe Co. The price paid has not been disclosed. Albert T. Terry & Co. handled the negotiations.

The house was built about 15 years ago from plans by Jameson & Spearl, architects, and is on an elaborate scale throughout. It has a lot 150 by 200 feet.

The building is unique in that its hall runs from the front to the rear with a very large living room to the east. The first floor comprises a large dining room, music room, library, pantry, maids' dining room and kitchen, and the second floor seven bedrooms and four baths. Maids' room, trunk room and store rooms occupy the third floor.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnson will take possession of their new home at once. Mr. and Mrs. Davis, it is understood, will live at 17 Westmoreland place when they return to the city.

27 PER CENT BUILDING INCREASE IN OCTOBER

St. Louis Shows Slight Gain in Permits, but $298,600 in Value Over 1925.

October building permits in 207 representative cities reached a total of $353,266,100, according to reports of the 207 building departments to F. W. Dodge Corporation. This was a 27 per cent increase over September of this year, but a 2 per cent decrease from October, 1925. Compared with the previous October, 83 of the cities had building gains and 123 cities had losses in building volume.

Building permits granted in these cities during the first 10 months of this year amounted to $3,162,019,500, as compared with $3,338,545,900 in the corresponding 10 months of 1925, which was a decline of 5 per cen..

October "honor roll" cities (those reporting more than a million dollars in permits and 20 per cent or more increase over last October) numbered 16, compared with 15 on the September "honor roll." The October list follows: Allentown (Pa.), Atlanta, Battle Creek (Mich.), Birmingham, Chattanooga, Chicago, Evansville (Ind.), Milwaukee, New Haven, Omaha, Pittsburg, San Antonio, San Diego, San Francisco and Syracuse.

The 20 cities tabulated separately on this page (a list selected to represent as wide a geographical distribution as possible) had permit valuations to the amount of $248,432,103 during October, 1926. This figure exceeded September of this year by 43 per cent and October of last year by 11 per cent. Building permits granted in these 20 cities during the first 10 months of 1926 reached a total of $2,010,403,918, which was a decline of 4 per cent from the amount ($2,089,127,164) for the corresponding period of last year. Nine of the 20 cities showed increases, while 11 showed decreases in comparison with October, 1925, records.

ATLAS CEMENT CO. TO MOVE WESTERN OFFICE HERE

A lease covering one-half of the fourteenth floor in the new Ambassador Building at Seventh and Locust streets has just been signed by the Atlas Portland Cement Co., which will move its general Western office here as soon as alterations in the new space are completed, according to Isaac T. Cook & Co., Inc., agents for the building.

The office will comprise the traffic department, accounting department, credit department, bag department and the Atlas White department. The Atlas Lumnite Co. will have offices in the suite.

The reason given for the change is that St. Louis is the most important centers for the company's Western market, being the hub of their most active territory. The company's mills at Hannibal, Mo., Birmingham, Ala., and Independence, Kan., will be handled through the new St. Louis office. The district sales offices in Chicago and St. Louis will continue to function as before.

Harold M. Scott, vice president of the Atlas Portland Cement Co., will take charge of the new office. He will be assisted by D. R. Long of Kansas City, who is now assistant to the president of the Atlas Portland Cement Co. of Kansas. The company expects to move into their new quarters by Dec. 15.

Coggeshall, real estate officer of the firm. A. G. Taylor, who has been active in suburban real estate for a number of years, has joined the organization and will devote his entire time to suburban acreage.

CONFERENCE NOV. 30 ON REALTY SECURITIES

Strauss' Plan to Safeguard Investors to Be Considered in New York.

Important changes in connection with the issuance of first mortgage real estate bonds, now underwritten at the rate of nearly $1,000,000,000 annually, are considered likely as the result of recommendations recently made public by S. W. Straus, president of S. W. Straus & Co. A national conference has been called by Franklin D. Roosevelt, president of the American Construction Council, to be held in New York City Nov. 30 to discuss plans for giving effect to the recommendations. To this conference securities commissioners of the various states, as well as representatives of real estate bond houses, have been invited.

The recommendations to be considered are:

1. Segregation, under State supervision, of the funds derived from construction bond issues with sound and approved assets set apart to meet all liabilities for the construction of the buildings upon which the loans have been made.

2. The respective states should accord proper recognition to adequate segregation and supervision in other states to the end that the conduct of the business on a national scale may not be impeded.

3. Adoptoin by the states of standardized procedure in the matter of apraisals.

4. Additional State and Federal control over the issuance and sale of real estate bond issues and all other investment securities not now subject to such regulations in order properly to stabilize the rapidly developing investment field and safeguard the investments of the general public.

The building, owned by the George T. Burdeau Co., which will amply accommodate the fleet of busses controlled by the bus company, covers an area more than 70,000 square feet on the ground floor. The walls of the building are of hollow tile construction, and the heavy steel roof trusses are supported by steel columns.

A Warren Webster vacuum heating system has been installed. Charles N. Lund Co. is the contractor, and W. S. Frank of the Craven Engineering Co. is the architect.

JOHN F. REUTER, DRUGGIST, DIES OF HEART ATTACK

Brother of Postal Inspector Believed to Have Worried Over His and Wife's Illness.

John F. Reuter, 51 years old, a druggist, of 4100W Lee avenue, died at his home yesterday of heart disease believed to have been aggravated by worry over the illness of his wife, Edna, who recently underwent an operation for the removal of a tumor, and an appendicitis attack suffered by his brother, Fred, 43, Chief Postoffice Inspector here, while visiting at the John Reuter home Friday.

Inspector Reuter called on his brother, who has been under the care of a physician, and was suddenly taken ill. He was removed to Mullanphy Hospital, where an operation was performed.

Worry over this and the condition of Mrs. Reuter, who is at the home recovering from the effects of her recent operation, is believed to have hastened the death of John Reuter.

METHUDY TIRE CO. SUES FOR GRAND BOULEVARD PROPERTY

Demands Deed to Old Jefferson Club Site at Pine Boulevard, Citing Contract of Sale.

Suit was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by the Methudy Tire & Rubber Co., seeking to compel executors of the estate of the late Alexander R. Handlan to execute a deed conveying to the company title to realty at the southwest corner of Grand and West Pine boulevards.

The petition sets forth that on March 20, 1924, the executors, E. W. Handlan, A. H. Handlan and E. R. Handlan, contracted to sell the property to the Carondelet Buick Automobile Co., which later assigned its interest in the contract to the Methudy company, but that the executors have refused to make over the deed and close the bargain, although some installments have been paid by the plaintiff company.

The consideration was said to be on a valuation of $120,000, and the Methudy company now offers to pay the balance, $100,800, into court for the benefit of the estate, pending adjudication of the suit.

The property was formerly the residence of Alexander Handlan and later hearquarters of the old Jefferson Club when Senator-elect Harry B. Hawes was president of the organization. At present it is unoccupied, but for a time it was occupied by the Methudy company. According to an attorney, the executors, after making the contract, refused to transfer the title because of doubt as to their right to sell the property under a trust provision in the will of Alexander Handlan. He was the father of the executors.

BORN IN BOXCAR, WINS NEW ROAD FOR HIS CITY

Frank Clarity, Fort Worth and Denver, Successfully Fights $11,000,000 Opposition.

By the Associated Press.

FORT WORTH, Tex., Nov. 20.—Born in a boxcar, a youth at Superior, Wis., was employed 31 years ago as a car checker by the Great Northern railroad.

Today Frank Clarity, who used to tread cinders alongside freight car switches, is hailed as one of the victors in the greatest railroad fight in Texas history. He is vice president and general manager of the Fort Worth & Denver railroad, a Burlington system subsidiary which, opposed by an $11,000,000 Santa Fe project Friday, won a three-year contest for permission of the Interstate Commerce Commission to tap west Texas' vast agricultural frontier with 202 miles of connecting rail extensions.

Clarity's birth in a box car was while his father was superintendent of a Minnesota rail construction job and occupying makeshift living quarters.

Seven years young Clarity struggled with the maze of shifting cars in Great Northern yards, winning his way to the agent's office, where he worked 10 years before he was elevated to chief clerk in the St. Paul office of the general transportation superintendent.

After several years with the old Denver & Rio Grande at Salt Lake City, Clarity, during the world war pool of railroads, went to Chicago as assistant regional director for the Central West.

There he so gained the approval of Hale Holden, now president of the Burlington system, that Holden sent him to Texas to "boss" the Fort Worth & Denver.

$50,000 BAIL DEMANDED OF 2 HELD FOR SHOOTING OF TAILOR

Robbery Charge May Be Changed to Murder If George Schou Fails to Recover.

A warrant charging robbery in the first degree was issued yesterday against Leonard R. Yeager, 29 years old, of 902 St. Clair avenue, East St. Louis, and Maurice M. Birmingham, the same age, of 4524 Scott avenue, St. Louis, pending an injury suffered by George Schou, 62 years old, a tailor of 117 Bates street, who was shot in the head during a robbery in the saloon of Frank Doherty in the Swedish-American Hall, 1157 South Kingshighway Wednesday night. If Schou recovers an additional charge of assault to kill will be filed, but in the event of his death the grand jury will be asked to indict on a charge of murder in the first degree.

Birmingham and Yeager confessed the holdup and shooting to East Side detectives after their arrest, the police declared, and, with Cormac Le Duc, bartender for Doherty, who was robbed of $221, the police applied for the robbery warrant. After the filing of the information, the Circuit Attorney went before Judges of the Court of Criminal Correction and asked that the men be refused bail in any sum under $50,000.

STUDENT SLAYER DISINHERITED

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—Robert T. Meads, former Dartmouth College student, who shot and killed a fellow student in a quarrel in a fraternity house, was disinherited under the will of his father, Albert H. Meads, filed in Probate Court here. The entire estate, inventoried at $400,000, was left to the widow, Mrs. Ethel T. Meads, a daughter, Mrs. Sarah Meads Doig, who lives with her mother, also received nothing.

Young Meads shot Henry F. Maroney June 17, 1920, in a quarrel over a bottle of whisky, which Maroney, who was a senior living in Medford, Mass., sought to purchase from Meads. Meads pleaded guilty of manslaughter and was sentenced to 15 years in prison.

CORNERSTONE OF OLD GRAND AVENUE CHURCH IS OPENED

Documents and Articles of Date 1882 Found in Razing of Presbyterian Edifice.

Workmen opened the cornerstone of the old Grand Avenue Presbyterian Church Building, at Washington boulevard, yesterday, and removed a copper box containing archives placed there when the stone was laid, on Oct. 14, 1882.

Among articles it contained were a copy of the Post-Dispatch of that date, a history of the congregation, a copy of the Central Magazine, a local civic publication, dated 1875, and containing a sketch about Dr. Alexander Marshall, an elder of the church, and a silver dollar, a dime, a nickel and a penny, all dated 1882, and still shiny.

The Rev. Dr. William Crowe, pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian Church, the successor of the Grand Avenue Church, will tell about the box in his sermon today, and it will be kept in the archives. A committee, headed by Walter Shields watched the cornerstone opening. The congregation was founded in 1844 and moved to what is now Grand boulevard, from Eleventh and Pine streets in 1882, then moved in 1914 to the Westminster edifice at Union and Delmar boulevards. The Grand boulevard structure was taken over for a motion picture theater and now is being razed to make way for a larger movie house.

3 PIG LITTERS WEIGH TON EACH

Ohioan Is Believed to Have Set Record in Contest.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 20.—H. H. Wolfe of Shelby, O., hog feeder, in raising three litters of pigs which weighed over a ton each six months after birth, is believed to have established a record.

Announcement of Wolfe's achievement comes from the Department of Animal Husbandry, Ohio State University, which yearly sponsors ton-litter contests among Ohio farmers. A litter of 14 purebred Duroc Jerseys, weighing 3252 pounds at six months, brought William C. Taylor, Butler County, the honor of producing the heaviest litter in Ohio this year.

H. A. ROSSKOPF SPENT $2159

SUBURBAN PROP'Y FOR SALE

BUNGALOW—4 rooms, bath, gas, electric, furnace; large yard; Lake car to Tennyson av., one block north. Mr. Caldwell on car, or call WDown 0088W.

BUNGALOW—Four-room brick, with bath, gas, electric, furnace, hardwood floors, 50-foot lot, $5000; $3000 cash, balance monthly. You won't have to go any further if you see this. Take Lake Line to Woodson; walk Armbruster in the two-story brick on the northwest corner, or drive out the St. Charles road to Lackland to Charlack, then go north two blocks.

BUNGALOW—4 rooms, concrete foundation, furnace, electric, county water; on main highway, no mud; drive right to your door the year round; only $3500; $100 down, balance monthly. Move in right away. In grove of trees, making it pretty winter and summer. Brace up, come out of the smoke into the clear, crisp, winter air, where you can breathe without inhaling pounds of soot and dirt. Take Lake line to Charlack rd., see Mr. Armbruster in 2-story brick, northwest corner; or drive out St. Charles rd. to Lackland, west on Lackland to Charlack rd., then north two blocks.

COTTAGE—Attractive 4-room frame; gas, electric, sewer; lovely home; only $4500; price; only 1 fare downtown; $150 cash will handle. Box B-116, Post-Dispatch.(c)

COTTAGE—4 rooms, with lot 100x300; plenty of fruit, near schools, car line, $1000. Ground alone is worth more than the price asked. See owner, 7215 Charles road to Lackland, west on Lackland to Charlack, then go north two blocks.

COTTAGE—Four rooms, water, electric, full basement; one block from Lake line; stores, schools, very handy location. 50-ft. lot; $2000; $200 down, balance easy monthly payments; how can I know from seeing this. You know seeing is believing. Take Lake line to Charlack rd., see Mr. Armbruster in the two-story brick on the northwest corner, or drive out the St. Charles road to Lackland road, west on Lackland to Charlack, then north two blocks.

COTTAGE—3 rooms, plastered throughout, concrete foundation, garage; lot 40x200; also one with small garage; both face car line, have water, electric; gas can be had; lot, if traded; price $3200; $100 down, $15 per month and int.; cozy little places. Come out today, even if the weather is little bad; they're worth while coming to see. Take Lake line to Charlack rd., see Mr. Armbruster in 2-story brick, northwest corner, or drive out St. Charles rd. to Lackland, west on Lackland to Charlack rd., then north 2 blocks.

LACLEDE GAS CO. PROPERTY VALUED AT $52,260,000

City of St. Louis Apparently Satisfied but Officials of Utility Are Likely to Appeal.

PRESENT RATES FOR HOMES TO STAND

Company Had Contended for Valuation of $74,000,000 and the City for $40,000,000.

The City of St. Louis apparently is satisfied with the valuation of $52,260,000 placed upon the property of the Laclede Gas Light Co. by the Missouri Public Service Commission yesterday, but the company likely will appeal to Federal Court.

The company had contended for, but did not hope to get, a valuation of $74,000,000. It likely would have been satisfied with $55,000,000. The city contended for $40,000,000, but likewise understood that the commission would not go that low.

City Counselor Muench said the city had hoped to keep the figure down to $50,000,000, but indicated he was satisfied. He said, however, that he would consult the Mayor before definitely letting the valuation case stand as decided by the commission. The Mayor had $55,000,000 in mind as the probable figure and was inclined to believe that the city had scored a victory, however skimpy.

Appeal by Company Likely.

Charles A. Munroe, chairman of the board of the Laclede company, is out of town and no other officer would say what the company would do. However, it is known that Munroe had an appeal to Federal Court in mind, if the valuation should prove unsatisfactory. The $52,260,000 is unsatisfactory to many associated with him in presenting the company's case to the commission.

Gas rates in St. Louis, now $1 per 1000 cubic feet for residences, will be undisturbed by the valuation though the company likely could sustain an increase on the basis of the valuation. The Commission found that last year's operation showed a profit of 7.1 per cent on $52,260,000. The company has since added nearly $2,000,000 to capital account, so that the figure on which it is entitled to earn today is in excess of $54,000,000. However, throughout the valuation case, Chairman Munroe has declared that the high valuation was not sought to increase rates but to facilitate getting new capital as needed.

Munroe personally will profit to the extent of more than $2,000,000 by the valuation. He purchased control of Laclede in 1924 on the basis of a valuation of $40,000,000. He obtained control by purchase of a majority of the common stock, paying an average price of $104 a share. The same shares now have a book value of 180. Munroe and his half dozen non-resident associates hold 5900 of 10,700 of the common shares. Thus their profit approaches $4,500,000. Munroe personally owns 51 per cent of the stock of the holding company created to take over common stock control. The last selling price of Laclede common upon the market was $160 a share.

Nothing to Lose By Appeal.

The company would have everything to gain and nothing to lose in an appeal to the Federal Court. Jurisdiction there would lie under the confiscation clause of the Federal Constitution. Thus the Court could say only whether the valuation of $52,260,000 was confiscatory. If it found it to be confiscatory, it could increase it, but could not reduce it.

The valuation case extended over eight years. The commission in its finding was rather more definitely liberal in its rate of return than usual. It seldom has passed 7 per cent as a fair return. In the Laclede case it found the company was entitled to a minimum of 7 and that the maximum should not exceed 8 per cent.

The $52,260,000 total includes gas department, $45,600,000; electric department, $5,945,000; Pintsch gas, $345,000, and property not devoted to public service, $370,000.

Ruling on Depreciation.

To cover depreciation, the commission ruled the company was entitled to annually earn 1 per cent of the original cost of the depreciable gas property, and 3½ per cent of the original cost of the electric department depreciable property. Original cost of the depreciable gas property was fixed at $24,900,000 and the electric depreciable property at $3,630,000.

Contentions of the city that the market value of the securities of a public utility is an index of the fair valuation of the property and claims of the company that reproduction, new, at present prices, should be the governing consideration in valuation matters, were overthrown by the commission in its decision. It also disregarded claims of the company that the cost of attaching business, cost of its records and expense of training personnel should be included in going value allowances.

The Laclede company presented items totaling more than $12,000,000 as properly inclusive in allowances for intangibles or going value, but the commission fixed the going value at $5,818,000.

Figures Varied Widely.

Figures presented in the hearing on depreciation varied widely. Harrop placed the depreciation on the Gas Department at $8,400,000 on a straight line basis, giving each piece of property a fixed life, and at $3,053,000 as measured by adjusted credits for the balance in the depreciation reserve. C. E. Smith, consulting engineer for the city, placed the gas property depreciation at $8,981,860 on the straight line theory, and at $4,808,487 on physical inspection basis. The late James E. Allison, valuation engineer for the company, who died several months after the hearings, estimated the depreciation on gas property at $630,000. The commission finally fixed the accrued depreciation at $5,000,000.

TC-7 CREW, 500 FEET IN AIR, SEES TIGER GAME KICKOFF

Flies Over Fulton and Columbia and Goes Through Snow for "First Down" at Home.

The crew of the army airship TC-7 from Scott Field yesterday afternoon witnessed the kickoff in the Missouri-Kansas game at Columbia from seats in the gondola of the dirigible 500 feet above the field.

The ship, with Maj. H. A. Strauss in command of a crew of five officers and men, took off from Scott Field at 9 a. m., circled over Fulton at noon and then sailed slowly over Columbia while the football crowd was gathering. It was headed home at 3 p. m. and arrived at the field at 6 o'clock, after an uneventful flight which took it through falling snow during the entire homeward journey. About 400 miles were covered in the day's trip.

TEST OF COUNTY ELECTION LAW LIKELY

Head of County Court to Refuse to Give Up His Office on Dec. 31.

A court test of the legality of the St. Louis County registration and election law, enacted in 1923, may result from the announced stand of Presiding Judge Smiley, the Democratic "one-man opposition" of the County Court, or administrative body, who contends that the election of Al Wehmeyer, Republican, as his successor, three weeks ago, was illegal.

Smiley takes this position on the strength of an opinion rendered Thursday by County Counselor Nolan that the election law is unconstitutional and all elections held under it are invalid. Accordingly, Smiley argues that Wehmeyer and all other county officials elected Nov. 2 cannot qualify to take office, and that other officials, who were elected in 1924, likewise have been holding their places without warrant of law.

Defects in Law Alleged.

Under this construction of the situation, county officials who were placed in office or were holding office at the time of the Clean Election League victory of 1922 would retain the places until successors might be chosen after the alleged defective law is corrected. Nolan and Smiley insist that the election law amounts to special legislation, which is forbidden by the State Constitution, inasmuch as it can apply only to one county.

Smiley said he would refuse to give up his office when his term ordinarily would expire, Dec. 31, and would leave it to Wehmeyer to force the issue. He was elected in 1922 but his Republican colleagues in the court, Judges Preiss and Bobring, were elected in 1924. Preiss said yesterday he would not try to keep his office after his term expires, also on Dec. 31, but Bobring declined to comment.

Officials, under the law, retain their places until their successors are elected and qualified, and Smiley will argue that Wehmeyer cannot qualify, if the election law is unconstitutional.

Would Hold Up Bonds.

As a part of his fight, Smiley is opposing acceptance of surety bonds of newly elected officials who plan to take office, or issuance of their commissions. This will apply especially to Philip Deuser, treasurer-elect; recorder Schmid, re-elected, and Walter Miller, county clerk-elect. Yesterday, Charlie St. Onge, re-elected constable of Meramec Township, asked the court to approve his bond and issue his commission and George M. Peters, re-elected justice of the peace of Kirkwood, asked for his commission. Smiley voted against both requests, but his colleagues voted to meet them.

Marquette Club to Give Play.

The Marquette Club of Valley Park will present a three-act comedy at the Sacred Heart School auditorium next Wednesday evening, and again on the evening of Nov. 30. Miss Mary Young will take the leading role and John Howe is directing the production.

10 MUNICIPALITIES ON EAST SIDE FACE WATER RATE RISE

Lack Money to Fight Amended Application of Company for 25 Per Cent Increase.

Ten East Side municipalities and environs, with a population of 150,000, face a proposed 25 per cent advance in water rates by the East St. Louis & Interurban Water Co., based on an amended application now before the Illinois Commerce Commission but not affecting large consumers.

Three corporations have withdrawn opposition to the advance, leaving the burden on the moderate and minimum consumer. The territory uses 44,000,000 gallons daily.

In February, 1925, the water company applied for a higher rate. C. M. Horner, vice president, said the increase would amount to about 15 cents a month to the average consumer. City officials, corporations and Chamber of Commerce in the territory affected decided to oppose the application, contending the increase would amount to more than a justifiable return on the company's investment. A tentative valuation of $5,000,000 had been placed on the properties by the commission in 1920.

Horner said that the increase was necessary for a fair return on a general increased investment, including $2,000,000 for a new intake plant now being constructed north of Chouteau Island at the mouth of the Missouri River.

Large Firms Withdrawn.

At a hearing before the commission, which began Oct. 19, last, and at which the combined opposition was represented, the water company presented voluminous evidence to establish a new valuation of $11,936,000, including the new plant. Officers of the company stated that experts required more than a year to compile the records at a cost of $40,000.

Three days were required to present this evidence, and at the close the water company submitted the amended schedule. Paul Blanchard of Chicago, attorney for Armour & Co., announced that since the proposed increase no longer affected the company he represented, he was no longer interested. Since then, Swift & Co. and the National Stockyards, members of the Chamber of Commerce, have withdrawn from the fight.

There are 13 corporations in the district whose rates will not be increased under the amended schedule. Their position as stated to Leslie Forman, secretary of the East St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, is that they can furnish their own water cheaper than they could pay even a slight advance in rates. Some large consumers in the district already take all or part of their water from wells.

New Classifications.

The present monthly schedule classifies consumers beginning with those using 50,000 gallons or less at 30 cents per 1000 gallons and decreasing to 7 cents a 1000 gallons to users of more than 1,000,000 gallons. The amended schedule begins with 97,500 gallons at 40 cents decreasing to 5½ cents for users in excess of 10,000,000 gallons.

"It is evident, C. E. Pope, attorney representing the Chamber of Commerce, asserted to a Post-Dispatch reporter, "that the householder and moderate user is being burdened with the advance the amended schedule spares the maximum user."

"The increase will actually be more than 25 per cent, except to the maximum user," Pope stated, "because the divisions in the new schedule are widened. For example, under the present schedule one must use more than 50,000 gallons monthly to gain the first reduction in rate, but under the proposed schedule only the consumption of more than 97,500 gallons will earn the first reduction in rate.

Public Interest Needed.

Secretary Forman frankly stated that the Chamber of Commerce and the various interests opposing the advance were in a quandary. The hearing before the commission was suspended without date to permit examination of the evidence in support of the new valuation. C. E. Smith, consulting engineer of St. Louis, has been retained and began work on the compilation, but the estimated cost to construct an adequate case against the evidence presented by the water company is $15,000.

"We haven't got it," Forman said, "and our only hope is to arouse public interest. The public in general does not realize what the proposed increase will cost them if it is granted."

The municipalities affected are East St. Louis, Belleville, the Tri-cities, Brooklyn, National City, Fairmount City, Swansea and Washington Park.

OWNER OF CARMEL COTTAGE IN M'PHERSON CASE DIES

Third of Witnesses to Succumb; Appearance on Stand Hastened End, Doctors Say.

CARMEL, Cal., Nov. 20.—Howard W. Benedict, 52 years old, owner of the Carmel cottage in which the State claims Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson spent several days with Kenneth G. Ormiston, her radio operator, died today, due, doctors said, to a nervous condition aggravated by the publicity and worry attendant upon his appearance in the McPherson case as a witness for the State.

R. A. McKinley, a blind attorney, of Long Beach, was killed in an automobile accident, before Mrs. McPherson was indicted. He was engaged by the evangelist's mother to negotiate for the release of Mrs. McPherson when she was believed to be in the hands of kidnapers demanding ransom. Another witness who has died was Dr. R. Waters of Los Angeles, who was wanted by the State to testify as to the movements of Mrs. McPherson prior to her disappearance.

CHIEF OF ARMY STAFF RETIRES

Maj. Gen. John L. Hines to Be Succeeded by Gen. Summerall.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Maj. Gen. John L. Hines, retiring chief of staff after four busy years in Washington, today bade his commander in chief, President Coolidge, his official farewell. His successor as military head of the army, Major General Charles P. Summerall, also was among the President's callers, although he does not take over his new duties until tomorrow.

Hines will spend six weeks on leave before he goes to San Francisco to assume command of the 9th corps area. Summeral accompanied Secretary Davis and the members of the Pan-American flight to the White House. He will pay his official respects to the President next week.

PARDONS WIFE CONVICTED OF AIDING HUSBAND'S MURDER

Gov. Ferguson of Texas Acts Despite Contrary Plea of Slain Youth's Mother.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 20.—Gov. Miriam Ferguson today pardoned Mrs. Frances Robertson, sentenced to 10 years in prison for prompting her father, Frank Collier, to kill her husband. The Colliers did not look with favor on the marriage of Frances to Elzey Robertson, and shortly after Collier, former Mayor of Wichita Falls, Tex., killed Robertson on the street, with his daughter looking on. Collier got a three-year term and his daughter a 10-year sentence.

Mrs. Collier, wife of the murderer, pleaded for her daughter. Mrs. Mattie Robertson, mother of the slain boy, asked the Governor to disregard Mrs. Collier's plea.

"They did not give my boy a chance," she said. "He was unarmed. He was all I had and they took him away from me because he married their daughter."

MUSSOLINI'S DEATH PENALTY LAW ENACTED

Senate Passes Bill to Protect Lives of Premier and Royal Family.

Copyright, 1926, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos. (New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

ROME, Nov. 20. — The Italian Senate passed today the bill establishing the death penalty for attempts against the lives or liberty of the Premier or royal family and providing severe penalties for opposition to the Fascist regime. The vote, 183 to 49, followed brief debate on the separate articles. The chamber had passed the bill Nov. 9.

In introducing the bill, Premier Mussolini stressed that justice, not vengeance for the attempts to assasinate him, was its aim.

Indifferent to Attacks.

"These attempts against my life leave me perfectly indifferent," he said. "If people who make me the special object of their sympathies hope to make the slightest impression upon me they are grossly mistaken; such an idea is excluded because it is ridiculous and funny. Whatever happens I remain at my post because it is my firm intention so to do.

"However, if these episodes leave me indifferent, they do not have the same effect on the Italian people. There have been days of prolonged unrest in the nation's life, and it is the nation itself which has demanded the death penalty in many manifestations. I wish to add that the special tribunals (the military courts which will try cases under the law) will be composed of persons quite above all suspicion, and will not wreak vengeance but administer justice."

Status of Foreigners Unchanged.

Minister of Justice Rocco again denied that the law touches foreigners. Only Italians can be exiled, he said. He denied rumors that foreign pressure had caused him to withdraw article 6, which provided that foreigners living abroad and spreading false and mendacious reports concerning Italy's political and economic conditions would be tried by the special tribunal. The position of foreigners remains precisely as before, he stated; they will be free to make propaganda abroad and will enjoy fullest hospitality in Italy but will be subject to the actual penal laws.

Rocco denied that the special tribunal was against the statutes of the realm and that its functions would diminish the guarantees of justice. It will sit in Rome under the Government's eyes, he said, and this in itself guarantees its evenness of mind.

WOMAN FOUND DEAD IN AUTO

Mrs. Louis Ahrens, 50, Suffered Heart Attack, Doctor Says.

Mrs. Louis Ahrens, 50 years old, was found dead in her automobile, which was parked on a business street of Edwardsville, at 8 o'clock last night. A physician said she had died from a heart attack. With relatives she had driven into Edwardsville, from her home, 4 miles west of there a short time before.

Mrs. Ahrens' husband was found dead in bed eight weeks ago. He had been ill, but it was not believed his conditions was serious. He was the son of Christian Ahrens, who once owned most of the land which Granite City now stands.

Mrs. Ahrens is survived by a son and three daughters.

STADIUM PROGRAM DRAWS 25,000 TO STATE UNIVERSITY

Homecoming Crowd Attends Exercises at Football Field and Memorial Tower at Columbia.

TRIBUTE IS PAID TO 117 WAR DEAD

Govs. Baker and Paulen See Missouri Tigers Beat Kansas Jayhawkers on New Gridiron.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Nov. 20.—Missouri today paid tribute to the 117 University of Missouri students who lost their lives in the World War, when students, alumni and friends formally dedicated and officially presented to the university a beautiful Gothic memorial tower and a huge concrete stadium, at impressive ceremonies.

Dedication of the tower took place at the foot of the structure overlooking the snow-covered campus at the eastern end of Memorial Way. Approximately 25,000 persons braved the cold to take part, while a battalion of uniformed university cadets flanked the square with rifles.

The stadium was dedicated with brief exercises shortly before the football game between the University of Missouri and the University of Kansas. The thirty-fifth renewal of this annual Homecoming day classic resulted in a victory for Missouri, 15 to 0.

Memorial Cost $1,000,000.

Both memorials were built with funds, approximating $1,000,000, which were raised by students, alumni, faculty and friends and were erected without cost to the State.

The ceremonies at the tower began when the old university bell tolled 117 times, once for each of the men whose names appear on the honor roll. The audience, accompanied by the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, sang "The Star-Spangled Banner," and the Rev. Harold L. Reader, Chaplain in the Thirty-fifth Division, offered the invocation. Glee clubs of Missouri and Kansas then joined in singing a classical number.

Rice W. Means, United States Senator from Colorado and commander of the United Spanish War Veterans, the first speaker, praised the work of the Missouri men in the war.

Gov. Baker Pays Tribute.

Gov. Baker represented the State in the dedication with an address in which he also paid tribute to the honored dead. "I feel honored," he said, "to show my appreciation for the splendid work that has been done and to pay a slight tribute to the boys who have rendered such unselfish service, who made such personal sacrifices for the undying laws of their country; that love that counts sacrifice of life as nothing when compared to love of country.

"These men made a sacrifice and it is little enough of honor that we can show them. In constructing these monuments to their memory, we are attempting in one way to show to these men, their relatives and friends, and to the future generations that their friends back here in the university of the great State of Missouri, and those who have gone out from this great institution of learning, are not unmindful of the honor that is due to them who have paid the supreme sacrifice."

Donnell Speaks for Alumni.

Forrest C. Donnell, lawyer of St. Louis and a graduate of the university, made a short speech in behalf of the alumni.

Dr. John Pickard, faculty member and one of a committee of nine which had charge of the memorial campaign, pointing to the tower, declared that the memorial was a reminder to the students that come and go that "the greatest things in the world are not the material things; that the greatest things in the world are the spiritual things—love of country, love of fellowmen, love of God. We dedicate this tower to the glory of God and the inspiration of man."

Unveiling the honor roll, Dr. J. C. Jones, president emeritus of the university, read the names of the war dead. Dr. Jones is head of the committee which is raising the memorial funds.

"Taps" Sounded From Tower.

Scarcely had the last words of Dr. Jones been carried away on the breeze when the "taps" from the bugle of a cadet atop the memorial tower sounded. The audience bowed.

Frank B. Rollins of Columbia, president of the Missouri Alumni Association, then mounted the platform and formally presented the tower to the university.

"We are meet today on a solemn but glorious occasion to commemorate and perpetuate in bronze and stone the achievements of those students of our Alma Mater, who, on foreign soil, far from their native land, paid the last full measure of courage and devotion that universal democracy might not perish from the earth," Rollin said.

Mercer Arnold, Joplin, member of the board of curators, accepted the gift in behalf of the university.

"An Expression of Love."

"This exhibition of devotion and affection of the former university students and friends," Arnold said, "is an expression of the love which all who have trod this campus bear to her who, like the good mother that she is, watched over and trained us in the developing days of our youth."

The audience, accompanied by the cadet band, then sang "Old Missouri," which brought the dedication ceremonies at the tower to a close.

The ceremonies in the memorial stadium this afternoon, shortly before the football game, were simple.

Rollins, representing the students and alumni, officially presented the giant oval to Arnold, who received it on behalf of the university.

Just before the starting whistle of the game a huge bomb, filled with 117 tiny American flags, representing the 117 university war dead, were exploded high in the air and the flags floated out across the field as the two teams began their contest.

DEMOCRATS URGE NONPARTISAN BILL TO REDUCE TAXES

Think Progressive Republicans Would Support It —Consider Coolidge Tax Rebate Dead.

MELLON AND GARNER CONFER, BUT IN VAIN

Texas Congressman Estimates Surplus at Half Billion, While Official G. O. P. Guess Is $3,000,000,000.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20. — Believing the administration plan for lightening the tax burden to be dead beyond hope of resurrection Democratic leaders will propose a non-partisan revision downward of the present taxes. They believe their party and progressive Republicans will agree to a bill that all unbiased Congressmen can support. That is the attitude today after a survey of the situation that revealed that the rebate or credit program proposed by the White House has no chance for serious consideration at the coming session of Congress.

Representative John N. Garner, Democrat of Texas, ranking member of the Ways and Means Committee, conferred with Secretary Mellon today on the state of the Treasury, discussed the various plans proposed and agreed that they could not agree on a reduction plan. Garner contended for a straight revision and Mellon for the administration's credit scheme.

"It has been intimated that the Democrats and insurgent Republicans are forming a coalition to defeat the President's rebate proposal and Secretary Mellon's credit suggestion," said Senator Simmons, of North Carolina, ranking Democrat on the Finance Committee. "That is not true."

Non-Partisan Tax Cut.

"I believe that the Democrats are ready to meet with the Republicans and prepare a bill to reduce, not rebate or credit taxes, without partisan bias. We will give and take to get a proper reduction. It looks to me as if the administration is trying to interfere with a real reduction. I believe that the Democrats will join me in a proposal to have a non-partisan revision of the tax law.

"Mr. Coolidge and Mellon cannot muster enough strength in Congress to make a fair showing for their recommendation. Many prominent Republicans of the regular group are for a bill to reduce levies."

Garner and Simmons declared today the President is in error as to the tax on automobiles. They pointed out that this tax is passed on to the users of motor vehicles, a majority of whom are farmers, and laborers. The manufacturers are not especially concerned as they simply add the tax to the bill of the purchaser, and make him pay.

Simmons said it was President Coolidge who made the movement for a reduction partisan, not the Democrats.

"It is a plain matter of business with us," he added.

Surplus $500,000,000, Garner Says.

Garner, soon after his conference with Mellon, declared he believed the surplus in the Treasury would be approximately $500,000,000, and the Ways and Means Committee would frame a bill to meet the situation.

Garner asserted that the Democrats in 1924, and again in 1926, advocated reductions totaling from $150,000,000 to $200,000,000 more than the bills passed provided for.

"If our recommendations had been carried out," said he, "we would not have to pass a new bill now. We did not accept the Mellon plan. The Democrats fought for a $387,000,000 reduction last year, and the Treasury people said it could not be done. They fixed the very outside figure as $300,000,000, and tried to make it $280,000,000."

Official Guess $300,000,000.

An Internal Revenue Bureau statement issued tonight, showing gains in income tax collections for the first four months of this fiscal year as having been offset by the loss in other miscellaneous taxes, furnished new material for argument between the contending forces in the tax fight now well under way, but is not expected to turn the rival leaders from their line of action.

Democrats will continue to call for a straight out tax revision and the administration leaders for a credit on next year's returns to absorb the Treasury surplus.

Treasury officials familiar with the ways of tax collecting do not expect the miscellaneous tax receipts to fall so far behind in the remainder of the fiscal year, believing most of the loss has resulted from repeal of the capital stock tax usually paid during this period. At the same time, they expect income tax returns to increase.

The income collections for October continued to show an increase over last year's receipts equal to the margins of the earlier months of this fiscal year, which led the administration to propose a credit on next year's payments.

Total collections for the month were $44,017,562, about $10,000,000 above those for last October. The collections for the first four months of the fiscal year were $576,600,000, or $118,667,000 more than a year ago. Miscellaneous tax receipts were $224,050,369, a loss of $118,772,000.

For the first 10 months of the calendar year all internal revenue collections totaled $2,294,870,887, a gain of $141,648,000 over last year, leading to an estimate of a $300,000,000 surplus.

SEVENTIETH ANNIVERSARY OF TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION NO. 8

The seventieth anniversary of Typographical Union No. 8 will be celebrated at 1 p. m. today with a banquet at Hotel Chase. Charles P. Howard, the union's international president, is scheduled to deliver an address.

The St. Louis division was organized on July 26, 1856. The following November it became affiliated with the National Typographical Union, an organization which had been formed in Baltimore five years before.

When the union was more completely organized, St. Louis was given Charter No. 8, and T. G. Foster of St. Louis was elected second vice president. The Typographical Union of St. Louis remained in the national organization until 1869, when this national union became the International Typographical Union.

The St. Louis unit has its headquarters at 3745 West Pine boulevard. It now has the largest membership in its history.

MISSING MAN ACCUSED OF EMBEZZLING $9844

C. W. Harnett Makes Charges Against W. A. Knight, Realty Salesman.

Charles W. Harnett, East St. Louis real estate dealer, returning from Florida yesterday, declared that William A. Knight, of 624 North Ninth street, East St. Louis, had embezzled $9844 during a year that they were associated in the real estate business in the Arcade Building.

Although the city directory lists his firm as the Harnett-Knight Realty Co., Harnett declared that Knight had no interest in the firm and was employed as sales manager for Rosemont Manor, an East Side subdivision. Knight has been missing since last week when an embezzlement warrant was issued on the complaint of a woman who said he had appropriated $230 she paid on a lot.

Harnett related yesterday that Knight had been in his employ six years. In August, 1925, he went to Florida leaving Knight in charge of the office, and returning last June discovered that Knight was mismanaging the business. An audit of customers' payment books, Harnett said, showed that the $9844 had been paid to Knight by them but had not been entered in the company's books or deposited in the bank.

STATUE OF MRS. FERGUSON PLACED IN TEXAS CAPITOL

By the Associated Press.

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 20.—The marble bust of a woman had a place here today in the Texas Hall of Fame hitherto occupied only by men. A stone likeness of Mrs. Miriam Amanda Ferguson, first woman Governor of Texas, yesterday was mounted between the bronze figures of Woodrow Wilson and James Stephen Hogg, former Governor, in the rotunda of the capitol.

The bust is by Enrico Gerracchio of Houston and was presented by friends of Mrs. Ferguson.

Harry Fisher, of Alpine, making the presentation speech, said that Mrs. Ferguson had rendered the State's history unique, and expressed a wish that the bust "may forever rest under the dome of this magnificent edifice to perpetuate her fame and thus announce the inauguration of a new era."

"Big Ben," London Bell, Is Cracked

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Big Ben is cracked. Most radio fans who have heard on their sets the clock strike the hours from the Westminster Tower, thought there was a flaw in the bell and this is confirmed by W. Boughton of the Ancient College of Youths, England's oldest bell-ringing fraternity. He says professional bell-ringers agree that Big Ben is so cracked "that you can stick your arm through the fracture."

QUEEN'S SOCIAL PROGRAM FULL IN LAST DAYS IN U. S.

She and Princess Ileana at Tuxedo, N. Y., as Guests of President Mitchell of National City Bank.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Queen Marie of Rumania turned tonight to the restful quiet of Tuxedo, 60 miles north of New York, to end a 10,000-mile tour of the United States and Canada.

Wednesday she will sail for Paris, taking back to Rumania mixed memories of an experience which was both delightful and exhausting, marked by bickerings among her friends, and which came to a dull end when Marie, worried by the illness of King Ferdinand, abandoned the journey at Louisville.

Guests of New York Banker.

With Princess Ileana, the Queen arrived at Jersey City, N. J., and motored to the Tuxedo home of Charles E. Mitchell, president of the National City Bank, New York. There she will be joined on Monday afternoon by Prince Nicolas, who left the train near Cincinnati, O., to visit Detroit, Mich., and Cleveland, O., two of many cities dropped from Marie's schedule when she closed her tour.

Georges Cretziano, Rumanian Minister to Washington, and his daughter, Jeanne, welcomed the Queen and Princess Ileana at Jersey City and accompanied them to Tuxedo. It was their first meeting in America, Cretziano having arrived in the United States Nov. 3. Mlle. Cretziano immediately assumed her role as official hostess to the Queen, the functions of which she will fulfill until the departure of the party.

Princess Ileana rode to Tuxedo in a car with J. B. Ayres, representative of the Ford Motor Co., who was put off the train in Seattle. The Princess shook hands warmly with Ayres. It was learned from a member of the party that Ayres was present at Ileana's request.

Queen Regrets Missing Dixie.

The journey, which took the party to 23 states and much of Canada, gave Marie her last bit of sightseeing today when she left her train at Martinsburg, W. Va., for a motor view of the Shenandoah Valley around Charleston, Winchester and Harper's Ferry. At Winchester Marie asked a gathering of citizens to say to other Southerners that she deeply regretted being unable to see them and their Dixie homes. She expressed the wish also to make another visit to the United States.

The Queen will go to New York tomorrow to visit the Metropolitan Museum, and to take tea with Mr. and Mrs. Ira Nelson Morris, Rumanian Consul-General at Chicago, who has handled the social program of the tour.

The Queen will be a guest at dinner tomorrow night at the Mitchell home. Other guests expected are Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Harriman, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Rockefeller and Gen. John J. Pershing.

Mrs. William B. Leeds will be the Queen's hostess at luncheon Monday at her Oyster Bay home. On that day the Queen plans to call on Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt and may visit the Roosevelt tomb. Another tentative engagement is a visit to the Rockefeller Institute.

"Met a Lot of Lovely Mayors."

"This time America has seen me; next time I mean to see America," Queen Marie thus summarized her tour of the country.

"I have met a lot of lovely Mayors," she added with a grin.

Asked to recall the most interesting thing she saw on the journey, Marie thought for a moment, then replied:

"The Indians and cowboys were the most picturesque, I think.

A lawn mower is Marie's most prized acquisition in this country. She wants to take the machine to her castle in Bucharest to keep the garden lawn in trim. An ice-making machine also is to be added to the royal baggage before Marie's ship sails.

Henry Ford Shows Nicolas Through Detroit Plants.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 20.—Prince Nicolas of Rumania today visited the Fordson plant of the Ford Motor Co. Henry Ford was waiting for him at the power house with two grandsons, the children of Edsel B. Ford. Ford himself explained the operation of the generators and turbines. Arm in arm they strolled about the power house and through the yards. Prince Nicolas watched with great interest the dismantling of ships purchased from the United States Shipping Board.

Prince Nicolas drove his car to the Ford laboratories at Dearborn. Visits to other plants followed, with stops at a Rumanian Catholic and Rumanian Baptist church. The Prince motored this afternoon to Ann Arbor, Mich., to visit Dr. Clarence Cook Little, president of the University of Michigan.

IF RUMANIA CALLS, PRINCE CAROL WILL RESUME HIS TITLE

Expelled Heir to Throne in Paris Listens for Expression of Popular Voice at Home.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—Carol Caraiman, retired Bourgeois of Neuilly, fashionable Paris suburb, is prepared to resume the title Prince Carol of Hohenzollern and the prerogatives and duties of Crown Prince of Rumania, provided popular sentiment demands it.

Under no consideration, however, would he be willing to disturb the peace of his native land and risk civil war to regain his right of succession to the throne. He is reported to have said on several occasions, when advised to return to Rumania: "I cherish my country more than the throne."

Deposed by legislative act last January, following his departure from Rumania in company with Mme. Magda Lupescu, red-haired daughter of a Jewish merchant of Jassy, Carol is keeping closest contact with the situation in Rumania.

Rumanian circles in Paris express the opinion that, while King Ferdinand's physical condition is not all that might be desired, the sovereign is in no immediate danger of death.

Carol is most popular with the army and his presence on the Rumanian frontier would be certain to precipitate a crisis in the internal affairs of the country. He is aware of this and so keeps aloof from all intrigues. The demand for his return, he says, must be unequivocal and absolute before he heeds it.

Morganatic Wife's Suit.

He is unconcerned over the suit brought against him by his former morganatic wife, Zizi Lambrino, who seeks to establish the right of her son to bear the name Hohenzollern. Judgment in the case is scheduled for next Wednesday, on which day Carol's mother, Queen Marie, will sail from New York for Europe.

Members of his household say his only worry is the thought that press reports of the argument of Mme. Lambrino's suit annoyed his mother and prompted her to hasten her return.

No telegrams asking the Queen to cut short her trip and return posthaste because of the King's health were dispatched from Bucharest, it has been established.

Carl, Mme. Lupescu and Zizi Lambrino are all residing in Neuilly, a three-minute taxi ride apart. Carol's villa is luxurious, with massive gardens and a large garage.

Zizi, on the contrary, resides in a modest villa with uncarpeted stairs, served only by a Rumanian housekeeper whose son is about the of Zizi's boy, Mircea, of whom he is the sole playmate.

Queen May Confer with Son.

Bratiano, former Premier of Rumania, and regarded even now as the real power behind the throne responsible for Carol's departure from Rumania, is coming to Paris early next month. It is expected that Queen Marie, Carol and Bratiano will confer here, and momentous decisions concerning the Rumanian succession may be taken.

Carol is much chagrined over incidents attending his mother's tour of the United States. He is reported to have told friends that the trip originally was a splendid idea, but that it was mismanaged. There was no hint of criticism of his mother, but merely an expression of opinion that the various ambitions around the Queen had made the trip serve purposes other than that for which it was intended.

Zizi Lambrino Thinks Her Suit Hurried Queen Home.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—Zizi Lambrino, former morganatic wife of Prince Carol of Rumania, blames Queen Marie for the annulment of her marriage to Carol. She believes that evidence presented early this week by her lawyer in her suit to establish the legitimacy of her son, Mircea, is responsible for Queen Marie's precipitate departure from the United States. In this evidence is a letter from Prince Carol to the Queen insisting that he could never admit the child to be born of his marriage to Zizi should be considered illegitimate. It was said that the Queen never replied.

GEN. FRIES ABANDONS ATTACK ON TEACHER

Washington Legion Post Resents Commander's Action on Socialism Definition.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
20-23 Wyatt Building.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Major-General Amos A. Fries, chief of the Chemical Warfare Service and department commander of the American Legion for Washington, last night disavowed any intention of acting in behalf of the legion in his attack on Henry Flury, science teacher of the Eastern High School here, because of Flury's definition of Socialism, published in a monthly magazine. This was a reversal of his former position.

The disavowal was made at a meeting of the National Press Club, post of the legion of which Fries is a member. The General left the impression with fellow members of the post that he would make no further demands that Flury be discharged by the Board of Education.

According to those present, the departmental commander at first denied that he had written to the School Board in the name of the Legion, but members opposed to the General's action cited his first letter to Dr. Ballou, Superintendent of Schools, in which he said:

"It is for that reason as commander of the American Legion for the District of Columbia, I object most strenuously to the ideas put forth in the Forum by Mr. Flury and against anyone being kept in the schools who says in effect that workers are slaves."

Rebuke Is Lost by One Vote.

Fries then explained that he had written the letter hurriedly and had not considered whether other Legion members would agree with him.

A resolution rebuking Fries was lost by one vote. This resolution was as follows:

"Whereas, it has been reported in the press that Major-General Amos A. Fries, speaking as department commander of the American Legion of the District of Columbia, and thus for the several posts of the American Legion, members of that department, has requested the removal of Henry Flury as a teacher in the Washington schools because he expressed and had published in the Forum a definition of socialism:

"Be it hereby resolved, That the National Press Club, Post No. 29, Department of the District of Columbia, American Legion, affirms its variance with the action of the department commander so far as that action appears to represent the views of the National Press Club Post and to place that post on record as supporting the above stated request:

Compromise Statement.

"Be it further resolved, That the National Press Club Post affirms its stand in support of the inalienable right of free speech and of the press as guaranteed under the Constitution of the United States of America and express its resentment at being placed in any sense in the position of denying this inalienable right."

After this resolution had been tabled, the post issued the following compromise statement:

"The National Press Club Post of the American Legion at its regular meeting, Nov. 19, 1926, took action expressing an opinion as to the merits of the issue raised by recent correspondence between Major-General Amos A. Fries, department commander of the Legion, a member of the National Press Club Post, and officials of the school system of the District of Columbia.

"Gen. Fries stated at the meeting that he had no intention of making any demand on behalf of the legion that Henry Flury be removed from his present position in the schools of Washington."

GERMAN BAND IS BACK, ABER, AND AC- DU LIEBER AUGUSTINE

Calls All "Sitting On Top the World" and Such Tunes Now, Says New York Leader.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—The "Little German Band" is back.

Out of the East Side, where the Germans congregate around Avenue A near Sixth and Seventh streets, have wandered three stout, gray mustached minstrels.

Little black caps on their heads and clad in the old loose-flopping sleeves and baggy coats, they shuffled westward on New York streets, and crowds below Fourteenth Street going to work this morning heard, for the first time since the war, the old familiar strains of the Vienna night as only a tuba, a cornet and a teuton clarinet can produce them.

The repertoire, however, has changed greatly with the years. No longer, according to Valentin Gehm, the shrill clarinetist, do they play "O, Where, O, Where Is My Little Dog Gone?" "Ach Du Lieber Augustine," and "Hi Lee, Hi Lo."

"We got to be more up-to-date," said Gustaf Uhr and John Beck, tuba and tenor respectively. "Now it's all 'I'm Sitting On Top of the World,' 'I Love You, Baby' and 'Valencia.'"

"Be it hereby resolved, That the National Press Club, Post No. 20 Department of the District of Columbia, American Legion, affirms its variance with the action of the department commander so far as that action appears to represent the views of the National Press Club Post and to place that post on record as supporting the above stated request;

Compromise Statement.

"Be it further resolved, That the National Press Club Post affirms its stand in support of the inalienable right of free speech and of the press as guaranteed under the Constitution of the United States of America and express its resentment at being placed in any sense in the position of denying this inalienable right."

After this resolution had been tabled, the post issued the following compromise statement:

"The National Press Club Post of the American Legion at its regular meeting, Nov. 19, 1926, took action expressing an opinion as to the merits of the issue raised by the recent correspondence between Major-General Amos A. Fries, department commander of the Legion, a member of the National Press Club Post, and officials of the public school system of the District of Columbia.

"Gen. Fries stated at the meeting that he had no intention of making any demand on behalf of the legion that Henry Flury be removed from his present position in the schools of Washington."

HENRY FLURY (at left), science teacher at Eastern High School, Washington, D. C., who in a recent prize essay in "The Forum" defined Socialism, and whom Major-General Amos A. Fries, commander of the district American Legion, objected to being kept in the employ of the school, is not to be ousted, according to Superintendent Ballou (at right) of the Washington Board of Education.

LEAPS FROM TOP OF WASHINGTON SHAFT

Veteran of Spanish War Plunges More Than 500 Feet to Ground.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—A veteran of the Spanish-American War killed himself dramatically today by leaping from the top of the Washington Monument, which towers 555 feet. He was identified later as Henry C. Anderson, an inmate of the United States Soldiers' Home here.

With a shout of "bamosi" (Spanish for "away" or "let us go"), Anderson made the fatal leap from the north side of the shaft, facing the White House. His screams were heard by guards and a small party of tourists, but no one actually saw him dive into space.

Despite extra precautions to prevent suicides at the monument, Anderson, whose home was at St. Paul, Va., crawled through the iron grating at the top of the shaft and leaped to the pavement. The heavy iron bars were placed at the windows of the monument peak some months ago after a succession of suicides there.

Anderson apparently had planned his act carefully. Walter A. Knight, one of the elevator operators in the shaft, noticed him waiting and shivering when the doors were opened at the base of the monument at 9 o'clock this morning.

The guards at the base of the shaft heard the crash of the body.

Anderson hit the ground head foremost. A wrist watch worn by the veteran was found 50 feet away from the body.

ISADORA DUNCAN IS LEGAL WIDOW OF POET YESSENIN

Russian Court, Presided Over by Women, Rules Against Sophia Tolstoy.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News. Copyright, 1926.

MOSCOW, Nov. 20.—Isadora Duncan, the American dancer, instead of Sophia Tolstoy, reputed granddaugher of the famous Russian novelist, is the actual widow of Serge Yessenin, the peasant poet, who committed suicide at Leningrad last Christmas, according to a decision of a soviet court, presided over by a woman judge.

The court found that Yessenin had divorced his first wife, the artist, Seinada Reich, in October, 1921, and had married Isadora Duncan on May 2, 1922. Though he later separated from the dancer he was not divorced when he married Sophia Tolstoy in September, 1925. The decision gives Isadora Duncan the widow's share of Yessenin's estate, consisting of royalties from many books and hundreds of unpublished poems.

Yessenin's funeral was a national event in literary circles. Seinada Reich and Sophia Tolstoy wept on opposite sides of the coffin. A dozen more informal "wives" walked sorrowing behind the hearse, Duncan, the only legal widow, telegraphed her condolences to the newspapers.

Mothers of numerous children, alleged already to show Yessenin's physiognomy and to give promise of his poetic, as well as his roistering ability, are claiming a share of the estate.

The adulation of Yessenin, following his death, which evoked eulogies from such persons as Leon Trotzky, now has become denunciation of him, as a bitter enemy of the soviet power.

FRENCH FRANC TURNS DOUBLE SOMERSAULT

Rises to Highest in Four Months, Then Collapses on Rumors of Stabilization.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—French money turned a double somersault today. The franc reached its highest point since mid-July in the early hours of trading on the Bourse, then on rumors that the Government had decided to stabilize it at the rate of 147 to the pound or 30 to the dollar, it tumbled from 26.37 in the dollar to 29.30.

The decline is a natural reaction from weeks of feverish advance in French exchange.

Accompanying rumors that the Government had induced the big banks to help in bringing the franc down to its present real value, sound stocks which had lost from five to ten points in the last few days recovered partly this afternoon.

CITY SUES TO CONDEMN LAND FOR RIVER DES PERES PARKWAY

Plans Include Motor Drive and Recreational Fields in Southwest Part of City.

The city has filed in Circuit Court a condemnation suit, instituting the slow process of acquiring land for the River des Peres parkway in the southwestern part of the city, plans for which were made several months ago.

This will extend for about five miles close to the city limits and close to the line of the sewer which is to be made out of the River des Peres. The parkway, which will consist of a motor drive with parked spaces and recreational fields of varying width, will connect with the existing Christy Park, a section of similar nature, at Kingshighway and Gravois avenue. The new drive, connecting with the proposed extension of boundary of Forest Park, will make a 13-mile circuit for motorists.

The city also has filed a condemnation suit for the widening of Grand boulevard between Natural Bridge and West Florissant avenues from 80 to 100 feet. Between Natural Bridge and Lee avenues 20 feet is to be taken from the west side, and north of Lee 10 feet from each side.

BANKER CONVICTED OF FRAUD

W. D. Manley Given Nine to Ten Years' Sentence Will Appeal.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Nov. 20.—W. D. Manley, former president of the Bankers' Trust Co. of Atlanta, was found guilty of fraudulent insolvency in connection with the closing of the Farmers' and Traders' Bank of Atlanta by a Superior Court jury today and was sentenced to from nine to ten years' imprisonment. Defense counsel filed motion for a new trial and arguments were set for Jan 8. Bond of $25,000 was furnished. Manley previously had been adjudged sane by a jury and an appeal was taken from that verdict.

The Bankers' Trust Co. closed July 12 and within a few days 83 correspondent banks in Florida and Georgia, of which the Farmers' and Traders' Bank was the largest closed. A number of these banks, however, since have been reorganized.

Musicians to Hear Chubb.

Percival Chubb of the Ethical Society will address the Musicians' Club of St. Louis at a meeting at 4 p. m. today at the Gatesworth Hotel. A buffet luncheon will be served after the meeting.

HARVARD-PRINCETON STUDENT COUNCIL PRESIDENTS CONFER

Regarded By College Men As Sign of Possible Resumption of Athletic Relations.

By the Associated Press.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 20.—An Olive branch came out of an informal conference today of the presidents of student councils at Harvard and Princeton, which many college men regarded as a sign of a possible resumption of athletic relations between the universities. An agreement was reached to discuss athletic relations in the near future.

After the meeting, Lee Daley, president of the Harvard Student Council, and Joseph Prendergast, president of the Princeton Student Council, each agreed that there was nothing to add to the announcement that they would meet later and talk over matters.

Once a Queen's Companion, Now Forlorn in a Florida Shack

The Countess Larisch's Woes Began the Night Her Cousin, Crown Prince Rudolph of Austria, Ended His Life at Meyerling, an Act for Which She Was Held Partly Responsible.

By GUY FORSHEY
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

NEW YORK.

"I'M ALWAYS looking at the sky half expecting an airplane to fall on me. It's about the only thing that hasn't happened to me yet and I don't see how I can escape it much longer."

It was the Countess Marie Louise Larisch speaking, she who once had looked down instead of up from the pinnacle of the Hapsburgs as the favorite niece of Empress Elizabeth and Emperor Francis Joseph. She was sitting in the library of the Guild Theater here, where she had just witnessed a rehearsal of "Juarez and Maximilian." She was telling me of her fall from the seats of the mighty. A terrific descent it had been. She was now really no longer the Countess. She was simply Mrs. William M. Meyers from the country—the country being the Indian River flats, near Melbourne, Florida. She wore, not the purple plumage in which she once bloomed as a member of a powerful royal household, but the plain attire of an American woman of very modest circumstances. A face, once proud and handsome, was growing lined and tragic. Her hair, still retaining a glint of its one-time golden hue, was turning gray. She was 64 and rapidly growing old.

"In the last 38 years," she was saying, "I have lost everything—fortune, position in life, family and reputation. I have been maligned and sneered at by both Europe and America. Even though these misfortunes have been brought about by fate, or forces over which I had no control, I have been blamed and have had to suffer the blame as well as the loss. Once I was the companion and confidante of an Empress in one of the most brilliant courts of Europe. I had everything that, in the world's estimation, any woman had a right to wish for. Now I am reduced to the lot of a broken, penniless, unloved and unlovely old woman living her last years in an humble shack on the Florida flats. All this because of the offense of knowing too much.

"It has been a little less than 38 years now since a suicidal shot rang out one bleak January morning in the hunting lodge of Meyerling and my cousin, the Crown Prince Rudolph of Austria, was found with the top of his head blown off, while near him lay the body of his mistress, the young and beautiful Baroness Mary Vetsera. That marked the beginning of my woes. I had been the go-between. I was then young and romantic. Little suspecting what was to happen, I had arranged the meeting which culminated in that very tragedy. And it proved to be a triple tragedy. More than that. Not only did that shot put an end to the treacherous and philandering life of Rudolph, but it started the House of Hapsburg to its doom and also started me on my terrible career as a hunted and marked woman. Because I had been the go-between, because I knew the most intimate secrets of a house rotten with intrigue and because I had heard more confessions from the lips of Empress Elizabeth, my aunt, than were good for her or good for me, I was condemned to lead a life worse than death; to be reviled and branded and cast into outer darkness after dwelling in the warmth and the brightness, the ease and the luxury of imperial purple. It was a life for which I was wholly unprepared.

"I HAVE been in your America for two years now. Those two years have not been exactly happy ones, but they have been nearer happy years than any of the other 36 since January 30, 1889, and they have taught me many things. One is that aristocracy is a sham; that crowns are hollow and meaningless. That becomes apparent to the European only after he has lived for a time in America. Another is that the American people are inherently fair. An indomitable spirit of fairness and good sportsmanship seems to permeate your whole national and individual life.

"What you want to know now is how I happen to be living in a shack in Florida. Is that it?"

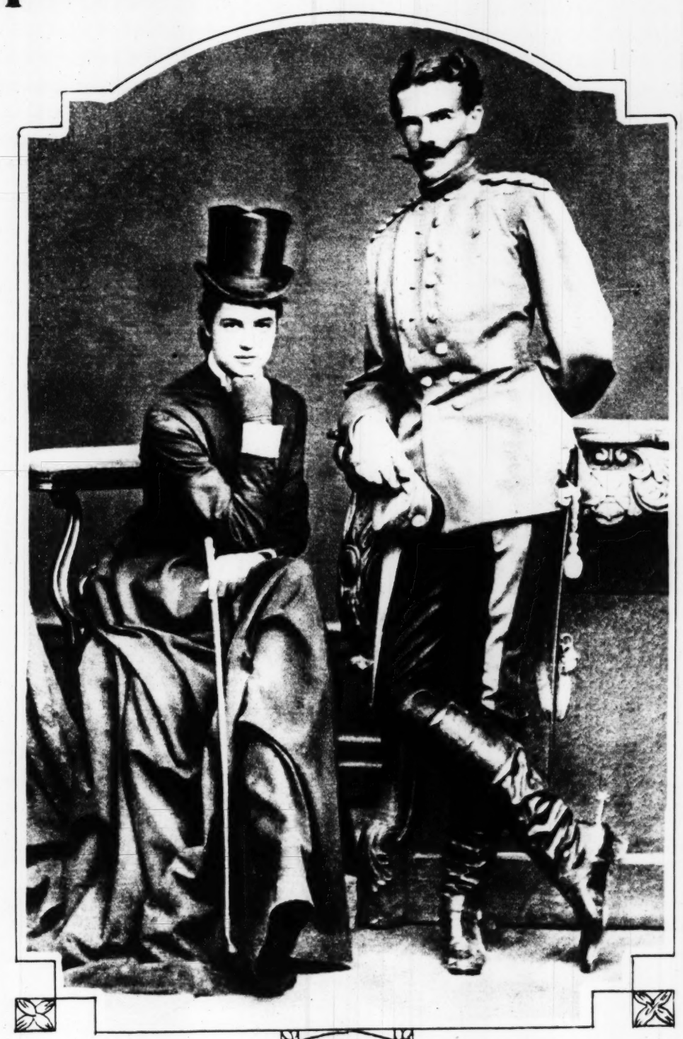
That was it, and in the next two hours the one-time countess—now the plain woman from the country—told the writer of her experiences. She told of her break with Empress Elizabeth after the Meyerling tragedy; of her banishment from Austria; of the scorn with which she was greeted even in foreign lands; of her divorce of Count Larisch over an entanglement with another woman; the scattering of her five children and the death of three of them; of the loss of her Bavarian estate during the war; of her eventful career as a Red Cross nurse; of the horrors of revolution in Munich and the times she narrowly escaped the firing squad; finally of her descent to the level of a kitchen servant and her journey to this country, where she was able to avert deportation only by entering into a second marriage.

It was to escape being sent back to a scullery in her home land that she chose to become Mrs. W. H. Meyers and settle in a tiny cottage near that of her husband in Florida. She had come to America on passage money sent her by Meyers to take charge of a sanitarium which Meyers had planned to build in Florida. She arrived penniless to find the plan had fallen through as a result of a quarrel among Meyers' financial backers. She found also she had run afoul of the immigration laws because the quota from Germany was already filled. Meyers, who is a real estate operator and a widower of 68 with five grown children, offered to marry her and provide her with a home until he should be able to build his hospital, so she accepted the offer and went to the Indian River flats to live among the alligators. She stepped on one last summer, thinking it was a log, and it whirled upon her with its teeth, tearing off her skirt. Even in comparatively peaceful America she had not ceased to find adventure.

SHE had come to New York to sound out publishers on the matter of a possible sequel to her book, "My Past," and was a guest of the Guild Theater management when I found her there appraising the costuming and acting of "Juarez and Maximilian," a new drama by Franz Werfel, depicting the rise and fall of the ill-fated monarch who met his death before a Mexican firing squad in 1867. Maximilian was her uncle. Many of the other characters in the play she had known personally and there was the authority of first-hand knowledge in her quiet criticism of this or that article of clothing or comment on personality and manner. Somehow the play itself seemed to be symbolic of her own downfall and the downfall of her line as well as of the tragedy of that unhappy golden - bearded Emperor from the sands of Miramar. As a kinswoman of Maximilian, she was also a kinswoman of the reigning houses of Europe and had witnessed their coups and disasters as a member of the royal circle.

The Countess Larisch was formerly Marie Louise von Wittelsbach and before her marriage to Count George Larisch at the age of 16 was known as Baroness von Wallersee. She was a daughter of Duke Ludwig of Bavaria and Henrietta Mendel, an actress. She was a niece of Empress Elizabeth of Austria, of Marie-Sophie, the last Queen of Naples, and of King Ludwig of Bavaria. She is a cousin of Queen Elizabeth of Belgium. She entered the Austrian court as a companion and lady-in-waiting to Empress Elizabeth—"Aunt Cissi"—at the age of 12. It proved to be an unfortunate step, as events turned out.

"Perhaps it is just as well that I say little about my early youth," said the Countess. "Happiness is not so interesting nor exciting as tragedy, and it has been tragedy that has followed me like a faithful dog up to this time, when I am living in Florida, calling myself the wife of a man who, in an hour of good humor, read of the misery of one Countess Larisch and invited her to come to Florida to keep her from starving in Europe. It was a heroic deed, though he had forgotten all about his generous offer until I answered and accepted. I was to encounter a great deal of trouble as a result of the new and strict immigration laws. People thought I was coming for some political purpose, which was entirely wrong, for I do not care a snap for politics, and never did. During the war I did my duty, as so many others did. I studied for six months and became a Red Cross nurse and for three and a half years worked hard in hospitals in France and Belgium. I was on the ground of battle and heard the cannons roar. I saw the poor soldiers suffering and dying. I helped the best I could, for life meant nothing to me then and even now I have regained but little interest in it. I left my poor country not knowing what my fate in America might be. You already know what it has been. It was not what I had ventured to hope for, but it might easily have been far worse. In spite of all my troubles, I still have good health. Probably that is because I have lived out of doors and have been accustomed since childhood to plenty of vigorous exercise.



The Countess as a young woman, and her father, Duke Ludwig of Bavaria.

Mrs. William H. Meyers, formerly Countess Marie Louise Larisch.

The Countess as a Red Cross nurse during the war.

"You see, my father brought me up like a boy. I swam, fenced, rode and performed gymnastics like a professional. I had a good voice and talent for music but was unable to mend a stocking, all to the great grief of my mother and grandmother. My grandmother used to shake her head about my education and say: 'Either let that girl go to the circus or marry her to some cowboy of the prairies or let her be a singer—she will never be a lady.' But I seemed good enough for my aunt, the Empress Elizabeth. She took me with her on hunting trips and riding into the depths of Hungary. She escaped in this way from having a lady-in-waiting always with her. She educated me never to ask questions, never to see things that were going on around me, but to be just like a faithful dog that follows his master. Being a niece of the Empress, I was apparently worshiped at court, but as a matter of fact was hated by all of them and some of them would gladly have poisoned me, I suspect. Some tried to be very kind to me in order to get things from me concerning the Empress—for it was known she had many love affairs—but I put on a stupefied face and answered that her horses were all well and that she had ordered a new riding habit or something equally absurd. They knew I was fooling them and they resented it. I used to tell my aunt about it and she was much amused. But she who had taught me to be blind concerning love affairs around me blamed me the most years later when Rudolph's affair with Mary Vetsera led to his death."

HERE the Countess digressed to tell of some of her experiences as confidante of the Empress, experiences she had already related in "My Past," among them the incident in which Elizabeth made the "fairy story" confession that Count Esterhazy was the father of her youngest child, Valerie, whose black eyes, appearing in a blond household, had been a source of mystery to many, including Francis Joseph himself.

It was long after her break with the Empress that the divorce and the scattering of her children occurred, and it was not until the war broke out that the Countess really felt the pinch of necessity. Following her banishment from the Austrian court at the time of the Meyerling tragedy, she traveled extensively, lived for a time in Bohemia and finally went to reside at her ancestral estate near Munich in the Bavarian mountains. Upon her divorce she received an alimony allowance of 12,000 marks a year from Count Larisch and two years later this was supplemented by an allowance from Emperor Francis Joseph. Following the assassination of Empress Elizabeth in 1898, she relates, the Emperor summoned her to Vienna, sought to obtain from her certain secrets Elizabeth had entrusted to her and then attempted to muzzle her permanently against airing to the world any of the royal family scandals, especially that of Meyerling. She says he urged her to return to Austria to live in a castle he would provide for her and offered her a lump sum of 100,000 marks besides a yearly allowance of 10,000 marks. She refused the castle because, she says, she had been warned she would "disappear" if she returned to Austria. However, she accepted the money and continued to receive it until 1910, when she felt she could no longer keep silence and determined upon publishing her memoirs to clear her name. She then renounced the allowance. Four years later came the war which eventually wiped out not only her Bavarian estate but also her allowance from Count Larisch.

Empress Elizabeth of Austria when Countess Larisch was a member of the Austrian court.

"IT WAS at Ostend that I had my first experience under fire," she continued. "One foggy night the British and French navies bombarded the city. Our field hospital was sheltered by one of the big hotels, yet the large shells burst all around us and one of them tore through the roof. We had to remove the wounded from the upper to the lower floor and then to the cellars. The moaning of the severely wounded, to whom every touch meant agony, was pitiful. Presently a call for volunteers to assist the ambulance corps was issued. Everyone responded, though it meant that we would have to go under fire of the enemy guns from the ships, and from our own answering guns, to the shore to collect the wounded and, in most urgent cases, administer to them where they fell. The enemy used searchlights to find our defenses and when, in the glare of the lights, they saw us picking up the wounded, they directed their shell fire to where we were working. One nurse was killed as she was helping me to place a badly wounded man on a stretcher. We worked, without food or rest, until 3 o'clock the following afternoon, amputating, operating, bandaging. Then I collapsed and had to ask for relief."

WITH her estate, her private fortune and her income from Count Larisch wiped out by the war, the Countess tried to make a living with her pen. She wrote a scenario and directed the filming of "The Life of Empress Elizabeth." Inflation killed it. Then she wrote a King Ludwig scenario, which met a similar fate. For six months she was employed in a literary agency as a hack writer, where she was paid 500 marks a month. Inflation killed this also and the concern went into bankruptcy. With no other course open she finally went into the home of a wealthy woman in Munich to serve as "companion." As it turned out, she was made a servant and there she was cooking and washing dishes when Meyers dreamed his dream of a Florida sanitarium and sent for her. There she lives now, keeping house for herself and for her husband who lives in a separate cottage nearby. Like a good many other Florida realtors, Meyers is not wealthy as he hoped he would be when he got hold of 1200 acres of land on the Indian River. Now he can't get rid of it. But it provides a home and that, declares the Countess, is what she wants more than anything else.

Even at 64 the Countess is still "one of those romantic Wittelsbachs." The Austrian court and its brightness of the old days are vivid in her memory. She will talk for hours on the subject and her dearest topic is the Meyerling tragedy. It still haunts her and she imagines that, even after 38 years, the world still points at her an accusing finger.

"Yes, I arranged the fateful meeting between my cousin Rudolph and his mistress," she says. "I have never denied it. And why did I do it?

"Well, my cousin was good looking and he was what one might call a 'regular devil with the ladies.' He had once filled a place in my own heart (though not to the extent of being the father of my oldest son, as gossip would have it) and I was a young woman. I was romantic. I could not help visualizing Rudolph as the future Emperor, and when he came to enlist my aid, a man driven frantic by personal and political complications, I assented. But I knew nothing of Rudolph's plans to take Mary to Meyerling. In fact, I had never heard of the hunting lodge. All Vienna knew of his love affair, and Mary's mother had locked her in her home. I knew Mary was an expectant mother, and when Rudolph asked me to employ a ruse to bring her to him at his rooms so he might talk with her I agreed. I took her from her home on the pretext of taking her for a ride in the park. Rudolph then refused to let her return with me and forced me to tell her mother she had run away. I knew nothing of the trip to Meyerling until after the tragedy.

"IT HAS been said that I 'sacrificed honor and affection' for money, and that the blood of Rudolph and Mary Vetsera is upon my head because I consented to become the go-between for a price. Yes, I was the go-between, but I surely did not do it for money. Then, money meant nothing to me. I had so much of it: Rudolph did give me money. Vast amounts, too. But only to hand them over to Mary Vetsera. When, after his death, his expense vouchers were gone through, time and again entries were found with my name and amounts from a thousand to five thousand guldens. These, no doubt, helped influence my Aunt Cissi, the Empress, to cast me out from the shelter of a purple emblazoned hothouse existence into the turmoil of a cold and disparaking world."

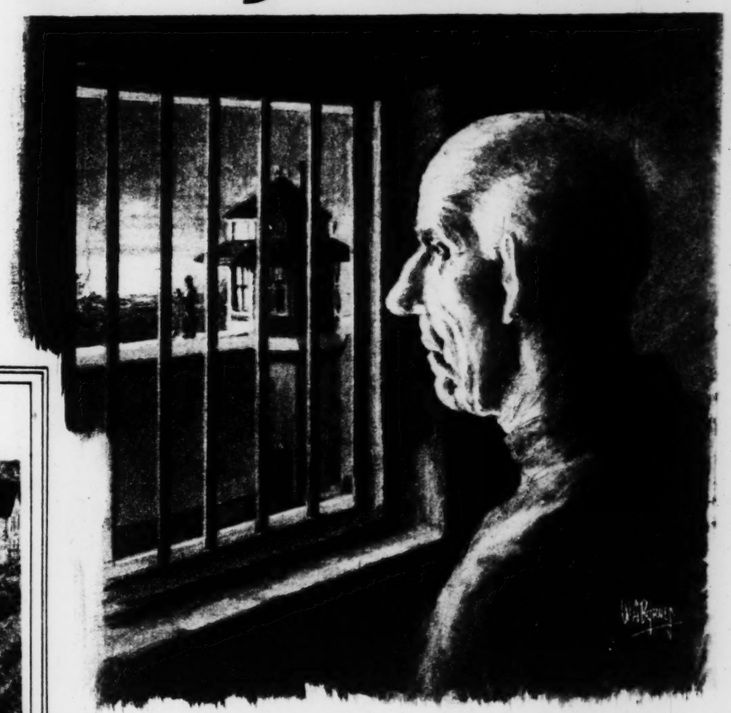
Fifty-Four Years of Living Death

"Old Bill" Maxwell.

In a Tavern Brawl in the North Woods, William Maxwell Killed a Man—His Courage, Sanity and Ribald Philosophy Outlast the Endless Years in Prison.



By F. A. BEHYMER
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

WAUPUN, Wisconsin.

SATURDAY night in the Big North Woods. A wild night in the lumber camps and the villages that fringed the north frontier. A wild night at Menekaunee, where Michigan and Wisconsin meet on the Green Bay coast. A wild night at Mrs. Hunter's tavern. For this was the Big North Woods of the early '70s.

If a stranger had chanced along the traveled track, inquiring the way to Menekaunee, he might not have found many who could point the way, for it was a hybrid settlement on a promontory of the bay, touching borders almost with the town of Marinette, on the Wisconsin side, and Menominee, on the Michigan side, scorning relationship with either, largely a law unto itself in a land of little law.

But the men of the north woods knew Menekaunee. The lumberjacks rolled it as a morsel on their tongues as they toiled through the week, coupling it with Saturday night, when there would be high revel at the Menekaunee drinking places. Especially at Mrs. Hunter's, for Mrs. Hunter knew the tastes of her guests from the woods and saw to it that there was nothing lacking on Saturday night.

It happens, for the purposes of this narrative, Mrs. Hunter cannot be more definitely identified than as Mrs. Hunter. It is only as Mrs. Hunter that old-timers remember her and it was only as Mrs. Hunter that she appeared in the court proceedings that grew out of this Saturday night revel at her house. It sufficed then to speak of her as Mrs. Hunter and her place as Mrs. Hunter's. It will have to suffice now.

A September Saturday night in 1872 at Mrs. Hunter's at Menekaunee. A wild night, growing wilder as it grew older. Liquor flowed freely. Rough men and hard women danced to Al Maher's fiddle. Men from the camps came and drank and danced and most of them went away.

Bill Maxwell was there and Walter Foster and Charley Wells and Mary Morrow and Mary Smith. Bill Maxwell was an Englishman, lately come to the north country. It was said that he was well-born. Many Englishmen, some of them well-born, drifted to the big woods. He had been a shipwright in England. On the north frontier he had turned his skill to house carpentry. Walter Foster was a painter. The others are unremembered except as their names show in the court records of Oconto County.

Bill Maxwell, he says now, dropped in at Mrs. Hunter's early that Saturday night to get a drink and tarried to take another and stayed on for an all-night spree.

AL MAHER fiddled until 2 o'clock, when the last of the lumberjacks departed, and then he went to bed, for lodging at Mrs. Hunter's was part of his compensation. Walter Foster and Mary Morrow had been up and down the coast in Walter's rickety buggy, which afforded joy riding of a sort. Bill Maxwell, soddenly dozing, aroused when they came in near dawn. He may have been drunkenly dreaming. His dreams may have been of his home in Kent, where his mother was and where it had not been his habit to revel on Saturday nights. Anyway, he came out of his slumber with a muddled conception of the proprieties of the time and place, a sense of chivalry that was misplaced.

He had a drunken idea that the woman he saw there had come for her carousing husband, to take him home, a decent woman who was entitled to an Englishman's protection. He saw Walter Foster embracing Mary Morrow with maudlin affection. He lurched to his feet.

"Keep your dirty paws off that woman," he commanded.

He gripped Foster by the collar and swung him to the middle of the floor. It was plain enough to Mary Morrow, who knew the ways of woodsmen, that there was going to be a fight, and probably somebody would be killed. She ran from the room.

The drink-inflamed men faced each other. Neither, it seems, was minded to leave the dispute to arbitrament of fist and skull. Each reached for his gun. Maxwell was quicker than Foster on the draw. He fired and Foster crumpled to the floor and died.

SATURDAY night brawls and broken heads could be overlooked in Menekaunee, but a killing was another matter. It came to the knowledge of Constable Gorman that Walter Foster was lying dead over at Mrs. Hunter's and there were witnesses who were willing to say that he had died by the hand of Bill Maxwell. So to Squire Lot Church went Constable Gorman and obtained a warrant against Bill Maxwell, and served it as he was duty bound to do and locked Maxwell up at Marinette. It was in a way fortunate for Maxwell that Gorman came when he did, for it is the tradition that Foster's friends were gathering with the purpose of taking the law into their own hands.

An inquest was held and testimony heard, which made it appear that Bill Maxwell had, without justification in law, taken the life of Walter Foster, and the judgment of Squire Church, as preserved in the record of the case, was that the accused be committed to "the common gaol" to await trial.

The trial was not long delayed. The October term of court was at hand. Crimes of violence had become all too common on the Green Bay coast. Menekaunee had contributed more than its share. There seems to have been a feeling that the time had come for the vindication of the law by the speedy and summary punishment of somebody to serve as an example.

To serve that purpose Maxwell was sent to prison for life and he has been there fifty-four years, which is probably longer than any other man has been behind the bars in this country or in the world.

The third week in October the case of the People against William A. Maxwell, charged with the murder of Walter Foster, came on for trial before Judge E. H. Ellis. The plea was not guilty, but after Mary Morrow and Mary Smith and Charley Wells and a couple of others had given their testimony it did not seem worth while for Maxwell to give his version. It was made quite plainly to appear from their testimony that the men had quarreled over Mary Morrow and over a certain $10 which Maxwell claimed was due from Foster and which Foster professed inability to pay, offering his note, which was not acceptable to Maxwell. Mary Morrow herself said Maxwell was mad at Foster because Foster had taken her riding along the coast.

No one of them had seen a woman who had come to Mrs. Hunter's looking for her husband. Mary Morrow was sure that she was the only woman about the place except Mrs. Hunter and Mary Smith. There was no use of Maxwell telling his version. Nobody would believe him. They were five and he was only one. So he kept his peace.

The instructions of Judge Ellis to the jury were that a verdict of first degree murder or third degree manslaughter could be returned. The instructions, preserved at the Oconto courthouse in the Judge's handwriting, were explicit in defining the premeditation and other elements of first degree murder, most of which would seem to have been lacking in the case of William A. Maxwell, but the jurors, good citizens of Oconto County, conceived it their duty to visit such punishment upon William A. Maxwell as would put a check upon the too frequent taking of human life in the big woods. So the verdict, as handed in by George W. Clark, the foreman, was that William A. Maxwell was guilty of murder in the first degree.

There is reason to believe that Judge Ellis viewed the punishment as excessive. There was more than a hint of it in his words and tones as Maxwell gratefully remembers them to this day. He repeats over and over, as he remembers them, the words of the Judge in sentencing him. It was the only note of friendliness that he, a friendless man, had known in the trial. It was the Wisconsin law then that first degree murder was punishable by life imprisonment. The Judge had no discretion. He could only carry out the verdict of the jury. He explained that, kindly, to Maxwell, concluding—

". . . and it is further adjudged and the sentence of the Court is that the said defendant, William Maxwell, be punished by confinement at hard labor for and during the life of said defendant and that for the first three days of his sentence he be kept in solitary confinement."

It was not the sentence that Maxwell heard as much as the note of sympathy in the Judge's voice. It called for some acknowledgment. "I thank you," he said, standing there very straight before the bench.

Sheriff Pete Deeke led him away and on October 25, 1872, William A. Maxwell, under sentence of life imprisonment, was brought to Waupun prison. The gates closed behind him and he was dressed in and given his number, 1727, and after his three days of solitude he took his place in the walled-in world where he was to abide until death. For he had no expectation and no hopes of release. He was a forthright fellow. It did not occur to him that a life sentence could be anything else. That was what it meant in England. Besides, even if he had known that in this country a life sentence seldom means what it says, he had no money and no friends. His people in England could not help him, even if they knew, and he intended that they never should know.

HIS mother, over there on the Kentish coast, never knew that her son had been sent to prison for life. She only knew that no more letters came and that hers were returned unclaimed. The Big North Woods had swallowed him and left no trace.

All his people, quite certainly, are dead now. There was proof of that when, a few years ago, a lawyer came from New York to Waupun prison seeking one William A. Maxwell, only surviving heir of the Maxwell estate in England. The prison officials do not doubt that their "Old Bill" is the man the lawyer was seeking, but the prisoner wasn't interested. He waved the lawyer away. William A. Maxwell was dead. Old Bill Maxwell lived in his place, and Old Bill wasn't going to be bothered by any estate that might be coming to William A. He wouldn't know what to do with it. He would sign no claim papers whatever. The lawyer went away.

NEVER did a man condemned to a living death conform more fully to the terms of the sentence. There are considerations shown in all prisons which are intended to ameliorate somewhat the lot of the man sent there for life—the consolations of religion, entertainments, games and sports and certain privileges that may be earned by exemplary behavior. None of these, although in fifty-four years he has never been reported for the violation of a prison rule, did Maxwell ever avail himself of.

He has never attended services in the chapel, or an entertainment, or a concert, or a motion picture show, or a baseball game or sports on the prison athletic field. He has heard the prison band, playing in the assembly hall and on the athletic field, because the strains of music have carried to his cell, and he has had to listen to the prison orchestra, playing at the prison meals, but his only voluntarily exercised relaxation has been in reading.

It is not remembered that he ever manifested any surliness in thus withdrawing himself. It seems rather to have been complete indifference or a determination to carry out to the letter the sentence of the court, with none of the alleviation which a merciful prison administration provides.

There is a rule of silence in Waupun prison, set aside only at times of recreation, when the prisoners may mingle and converse freely. It is a privilege highly valued by other prisoners. Maxwell has never shared in the mingling or conversing.

If he had mingled with the other prisoners in those earlier years, when there was such privilege, he would from their confidences have learned that there are ways in this country for a man sentenced for life to regain his freedom. Resigned though he felt himself compelled to be, it is not to be doubted that in the earlier years hopes were not dead, though his failing memory now fails to recall them. It may well be believed that in those early years if an effort had been made his parole might have been arranged.

When he entered prison he was assigned to carpenter work and later to cabinet work. He studied electrical and steam engineering and became so proficient that he was made chief engineer. There came a time when he disagreed with the Warden about the proper method of heating the prison and, because he was overruled, he asked to be relieved as chief engineer. He may, for once, have shown an ugly spirit, for his books were taken from him. From that time he took no interest in engineering.

There are industries in the prison and he worked at one thing and another. He was always a hard and willing worker. That is the reason, he thinks, that he has lived until, probably, he has served a longer continuous imprisonment than any other man.

His health, notwithstanding his activity, became impaired eight years ago. Still he was not willing to give up. He craved the boon of carrying messages about the prison when he could do nothing else, and he was permitted to do that until partial helplessness came upon him. Now, for several years, he has been a patient at the prison infirmary, growing more feeble day by day, but keeping cheerful through it all.

Up in Oconto County it is much as if Bill Maxwell had never lived. There was no one to cherish his memory when he was sent away. All who had a part in sending him away have died. Only the musty court record remains. R. L. Hall, Courthouse veteran, brings it from its high niche and spreads it out, and notes the date. "I was 6 years old then," he says.

"Poor Old Bill," says Deputy Warden Taft. "He won't last much longer, but he will be cheerful to the end. There never was a better prisoner. In the 22 years that I have been here I have never known him to be cranky. He might have been a trusty, but he never wanted to go outside the walls. I would have trusted him anywhere. I would not hesitate to give him $10,000 to take to New York. He would take it there and come back. He has good care here. He can sit in the corridor three times a day and smoke his pipe. And on his birthday we have a cake for him. That pleases him. He divides it with others. We have 902 prisoners in here today. Since Bill came 15,537 have passed in through the gates, but there has never been a prisoner like Old Bill."

Bill Maxwell was lying on his cot the day that I came to Waupun prison to see him. A bright autumn sun, streaming through the barred window above his head, threw checkered shadows upon everything inside. Outside the armed guard walked the wall, as guards have walked for 54 years the walls encompassing him. It was captivity complete but the man who lay on the cot was not a captive, for his spirit was free.

FIFTY-FOUR years of living death it seems to one who is free to come and go but it has never been that to Old Bill Maxwell. He has lived his life and it has been filled with satisfactions which many free men miss, and now, aged and afflicted and almost helpless, he still finds life has a certain sweetness and he does not ask the release which death will bring.

Lying there he was just a garrulous old man, with a surviving taste for jocular ribaldry, cherishing most the memories of his trial and conviction and the sympathy of a Judge long since dead, finding a satisfaction in repeating the Judge's words in sentencing him as he remembers them.

He was feeling pretty well, considering. As well as a man could expect to feel when he couldn't work any more. Yes, he was getting old. "How old? Let me see. Eighty-six, I guess. Born April 20, 1838. What's that? That would make me eighty-eight, you say. Holy Moses! How time does fly!

"Well, I guess I have lived so long because I always worked as long as I was able. Idleness means certain death to a man in a place like this. Hard work and only hard work can keep a man from thinking about himself. Prisoners who mope and worry soon die. There's no reason why a man shouldn't live long in a prison like this, if he works. It's healthy. The food is wholesome. He has regular hours and gets plenty of sleep. This is a good prison. They treat you square if you are square with them.

"NO, I never tried to get out. There were times when I was doing carpenter work that I might have dropped over the wall, but I wouldn't do that. I never had any friends or money to get me a pardon or parole. At first I didn't know that anybody could get out that way. I didn't think then and I don't think now that they should have sent me up for life for killing a man in defense of a woman. I've never been sorry that I did it. I would do it again. But they had five witnesses and I had none. Even the Judge thought that the jury was hard on me. 'You shouldn't have hard feelings against me,' he said. 'It's not me that's doing this. I am simply rendering the law as I find it in the books. You will go to the State prison for the term of your natural life and the first three days will be spent in solitary confinement.' That was what the Judge said and I stood there before him and said, 'I thank you.' His words were plain. They meant life in prison for me. I couldn't understand them any other way.

"I found out, of course, here in prison, that men under life sentence get out but they have to have friends on the outside to work for them and it takes a lot of money. I had no friends and no money, so I stayed.

"Now, of course, a pardon would be useless. I wouldn't have anywhere to go. I am better off here. I'll stay here until the end. I don't know how long it will be. I have no desire to die. Life is sweet. The sunlight comes in through my window. I can sit up and smoke my pipe. I am as happy as any old man can expect to be. I am not looking forward to anything. I have no hope of anything.

"I AM sorry for one thing, sorry that I missed having a part in the world's progress. It's a different world outside the walls than it was when I was free. Speed. Faster and faster is the order of the day. A lady in this town, they tell me, went by airplane to Madison. That's 52 miles away. I see in the newspapers that these airplanes go as fast as 100 miles an hour. What's that? More than 250 miles an hour. Holy Moses!

"But it doesn't mean anything to me. I'm going down the hill. I guess I won't last much longer. When the time comes I'll be ready. There's a song we used to sing—'Meet Me at Heaven's Gate, Sweet Belle Mahone.' But I'm not going there. I'm going to hell. When I get there I'm going to take off his majesty's horns and I'm going to say to him: 'Sit down there in your easy chair, old man, and smoke your pipe. You've been running things long enough. I'm taking charge now.'"

He laughed mirthlessly. It was his way of saying that he doesn't believe in a hereafter. "Death ends all," he said. "We are all animals. Just like horses and cows. And like them we die."

He drifted back to his trial. "They had five witnesses and I had none. The Judge said: 'You shouldn't have hard feelings against me. It's not me that's doing this. I am simply rendering the law as I find it in the books. You will go to the State prison for the term of your natural life—.'"

One Woman Against All Mexico

The Stormy Story of Mrs. Rosalie Evans, Long a Mystery, Revealed in Her Letters.

By HARRY R. BURKE
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

THROUGH six interminable years an American woman fought the Government of Mexico—the diplomats, the politicians, the soldiers and the rabble; fought on alone. Sensitive, spiritual, a mystic, a student, an artist, a dreamer—a Southern woman nurtured in the shelter of a cultured home—she went forth, as it were to war, defying a nation she hated, amid the scenes of ruin of her former happiness. With singleness of purpose, she fought on, sustained in her struggle by the thought of her dead husband, always near. She was strong in the faith that she was accomplishing his vision of a home for her. In that faith, she was fearless. She confronted national executives and told them what she thought. She faced bandit chiefs, the rabble. She learned to ride, to shoot and again and again she was under fire.

The end was death. On August 2, 1924, Rosalie C. Evans was shot down from ambush, by Indians who claimed her land.

The Rosalie C. Evans Letters From Mexico tell for the first time the story of her unbelievable fight, of her astounding courage. They have been edited by her sister, Mrs. Daisy Caden Pettus, and are just published in book form by the Bobbs-Merrill Company of Indianapolis.

It makes not one whit of difference whether Mrs. Evans' conviction was right or wrong. She believed the Mexican nation and the Mexican people were robbing her. When she believed all else had failed, she turned to force. Of the development of her fortitude, her courage, her resourcefulness, she has left a memorable record. The letters are an unforgetable portrait of a woman. The bitter, acid years etched deep their lines, as disclosed in those self-revealing letters, which, full of courage, hope and determination, she wrote back to her sister in the United States.

Modesta, one of the peon women who remained faithful to Mrs. Evans to the last.

As a background of her struggle, which became in the end an international incident, it is well to know that Mrs. Evans was born in Texas. She was of a different race, faith and language from the Mexican people, among whom her life was later thrown. "Monkey-minded," she calls them in one of her letters, and the phrase is significant of the gulf between their points of view. Yet she had a womanly sympathy for the peons who in turn called her "Nina," a phrase of endearment, and with whom she seemed to be able to come to an understanding except when politicians intervened.

WHEN she was a girl in her teens her parents moved to Mexico City, where she met, and at 19 married, Harry Evans, 11 years her senior, who was wealthy and of British blood and British tradition. He was manager of the Puebla Bank of London and Mexico, and his father, Henry Evans, was a well known railroad man of the old Diaz regime, and considered very wealthy. Later Harry Evans was to retire from the bank and devote himself to creating a great estate, which he purchased in 1906, the hacienda of San Pedro Coxtocan, which lay about 20 miles above Puebla. There, in a beautiful valley, hemmed in by great mountains, his wife, who had been failing in health and spirits, recovered both. The estancia was to have been her husband's dream home for her. It was a Spanish place dating back to the sixteenth century and in ruins. Evans revived and restored it.

Then came the revolution of 1910. Madero, raising his followers, struck south, and the State of Puebla war one of the first to feel the taste of war. In the path of revolution was the hacienda of San Pedro Coxtocan. It was sacked and pillaged. Mr. and Mrs. Evans retired to Mexico City, where they lived through the intervening disorders until Madero's murder in 1915, when they fled. They were not penniless, but most of their income was cut off. They traveled, but in economical fashion. They engaged in war work. He loved her deeply, and she returned that love with passionate fervor. Wherever they might be together they were happy.

THE Diaz regime, which Madero overturned, had given away great grants of land—often tribal or community lands—belonging to the Indians. It had come about that by 1910, when Madero led the revolt, 7000 families in Mexico held all the arable land in a country of 15,000,000 population. The peons had flocked to Madero because he promised to restore to them the lands which were their fathers'. Carranza had made the same promise. In 1917, some months before her husband's death, that promise had been enacted into the Constitution of Mexico. Rightly or wrongly, Evans and his wife held that their title to San Pedro Coxtocan was not affected.

Evans went to Mexico, in March, to try to conserve his interests. In November he was suddenly taken ill, and died. His wife at the time was on her way to join him. "On the train next day," writes her sister, "while she was re-reading Harry's last letter, she suddenly felt him beside her, though she could not see him. He kissed her on the lips. From that moment she knew a great change in her life was impending."

Word that he was dead and buried reached her on the train. She did not go on then. But early in January she went to Mexico. Even her story of the journey southward breathes hostility to the Government—disgust with the people. On January 13 she wrote in her diary, which was written as though a letter to her dead husband, whose grave she that day visited: "I suddenly remembered a day we stood together at San Pedro, and you were so interested in the tender wheat that seemed to stretch, a great plain of green, to the mountain. For the first time I saw the beauty of it. Like a flash I thought of your dear body as the little grain which you have so often held in your hand and shown me with pride to prove what splendid wheat San Pedro could produce."

The recurrence of that vision seems to have sustained her in her six years' fight. The wheat, growing from the soil, somehow seemed a part of him.

SHE was having trouble raising money to pay taxes on the hacienda. "And right on the heels of that," she writes in March, "came an order dividing my land among the Indians as a free gift." She protested, of course. She thought she could get one-fifth of the crop the Indians had cultivated while she was away. Later she decided to treat with them for half of it. She went up to Puebla, then to the hacienda. Then to Polaxtla, to treat with the Indians. General Laveaga was present—"a great, heavy-looking man, more Indian than Spanish, over six feet tall, not stout but massive, capable of being a perfect brute; capable, too, if the whim struck him, of chivalry." It was like being in the court of a primitive King. As a boy he had gone to school in California and spoke English. So that he treated with her in that language, to the Indians' disgust. But the whim of chivalry seemed to have seized him. He wrested from the 200 Indians there a concession of one-half the crop. Yet he went out into the fields while she was absent, and, in the presence of her major domo, told the Indians all of the grain was theirs. So at least her letters tell the story. The military had left. She appealed to the Governor at Puebla and delay after delay was interposed. She returned to her estate in June. Engineers were measuring off the land for division among the Indians. She went to Mexico City to see Carranza. There was more delay. Possibly Mrs. Evans did not understand why. Latin ways are different from ours. And she was suspicious of these "monkey-minded" folk to whom she again and again refers as wicked. None the less, her story pleads frankly her own cause. It records what happened—but only what happened as she sees it. The value is not so much in its record of facts as in its disclosure of a woman's intrepid soul.

The Indian slayers of Mrs. Evans sentenced to death.

She got her wheat—and sold it. The Indians came to her terms. She stayed on the stacks until her crops were hers. Dangers surrounded her, but she felt safe none the less. And hopeful. Carranza had promised to see justice done. Meantime, some mining stocks had suddenly become of value. It seemed that she would soon recoup her fortunes.

She returned to Mexico City, her troubles far from at rest, for the Indians were now demanding her corn. At length she reached Berlanga, Secretary of the Interior. And at length, also, by persistence, by insistence, she won from Carranza an order relinquishing the Government's claim on the hacienda. Yet things were far from settled, even so.

If we are to believe Mrs. Evans' version of the troubles following—and that is borne out in part by newspaper reports of those happenings—there were active among the Indians certain politicians of the Agrarian party who continually sought to stir them up against her. She believed—though proof does not appear—that those politicians were underhanded emissaries from the Government. No doubt of her moral conviction that this was so. But moral conviction is not evidence.

SO PASSED 1918. She had a new superintendent for her hacienda — Don Iago Menocal. Things were far from peaceful, though. The Yaqui troops surrounding them in those troublous times of revolution and counter-revolution one afternoon took her and Menocal for targets and for 10 minutes had them under fire of Mauser rifles. "I felt as if pelted with chocolates," she wrote, "so make no claims to valor." It was the first time she was really under fire. Now, in March, she planned to look after her railroad properties. The country was for the moment in the hands of Pancho Villa and his rebels. On the way she stopped with Colonel Villareal, commander of the Yaquis who had shot at her. She played chess with him while he boasted he had shot nine revolutionist prisoners, "with my own hand, senora." She beat him. It was impolitic, but it punished him, she thought. She gained rebel territory, made friends, satisfied her desire for knowledge about her properties and came back to the Carranza territory "remembering" my pleasant three days in the greenwood with Robin Hood and his band."

Harvest neared. "How beautiful it looked, acres of wheat; gold in the sunlight, gold in reality." Bandits swept down and carried off the major domo of San Pedro hacienda. She refused to treat with them until he was returned. That defiance, she believed, saved her from a like fate. She got in her crop. From June, 1919, until March, 1920, she was resting in the United States.

NOW came the days preceding the collapse of the Carranza government. Came May 23, 1920 — Carranza was assassinated. The harvest had come again in the midst of revolution. She heard that her hacienda had been entered and that an attack had been made on the life of Don Iago Menocal. From Mexico City she rushed to the hacienda to direct defense—and the harvest. She fed a party of Obregon's soldiers and became their friend. She got in her wheat and sold it. And then, in September, she learned that another plan was afoot to partition her estate.

She rushed again to the hacienda. Thirty men, under Francisco Rosas, were measuring the land. "They had driven off the good Indians." And as she approached they picked up stones to hurl at her. She was on horseback, and she had a revolver. Pointing the weapon at Rosas' breast, she made them desist and drove Rosas before her to the ranchhouse, her police dog, Brunhilda, bringing up the rear. The men had told her they had Government authority for their action. She waited, but they brought no order. "I washed my hair and made the mozo help with the dogs—if we are to meet death tonight we shall at least be clean—and we all ate dinner cheerfully."

Mrs. Evans and her dogs—a misty, indistinct character of great power.

THE villagers were growing more insistent that her land must be given over to them. "Three of my five villages had united against me and were marching on the hacienda with sticks and stones to destroy me if I did not at once give them the land." She met them as they came up, 50 or 60 men, in two groups headed by Rosas. They scowled, some yelled, as she put her case. The elders upheld her. "Nina, you are in the right. Unless General Obregon gives your land away we will never oppose you or your people. We will retire." So the year ended, but not before, in December, Obregon had been inaugurated President of Mexico—pledged to break up big land holdings and restore to the peons their rightful tillage.

May came—and wheat harvest of 1921, a harvest under the guard of soldiers. "On the skirts of the field hung the enemy, but did not draw near. I could not show the white feather now," she writes. "If they would only attack me, not my men"—one or two of whom had been hurt. "They have sent me word in their picturesque, snaky way, mishap is waiting for me in the ravine."

Manual Montes, an agrarian agitator, who is to figure further in the story, came to her on May 15, heading a rabble, in frock coat and a bullfighter's hat. He demanded her crop, having left the Mexican Congress, she explains, "to come down and speak to my people.

"I OUTSPOKE him. I called him a coward, an assassin, and my whole wicked vocabulary of insults. He trembled with rage, but I got my hand on my pistol and he ran." There were cries to take the crop by force. "There was much shouting and confusion, a man with a wooden leg making an awful stumping sound in front of my mule." But soldiers came and the crowd was awed. "I left the Captain on guard," she writes. "He is a perfect little devil, about 23, but he does my bidding." Time passed, and with Christmas and the end of the year of 1922 came an order from Obregon—the Government had formally confiscated the hacienda of San Pedro Coxtocan.

Mrs. Evans went to Mexico City like a flame. A fortnight of delay. But she had not cooled. Friends arranged an audience with the President. He saw her early in January, 1923. "He fixed his eyes unwinkingly on me—a stern bandit stare—in that you know I have had some practice. . . . . It was not so much his words as his manner and his stare that were so insulting." She lost her temper.

"Senor!" she cried, "do you realize I am asking you no favor, no concession? The land is my own, left me by my husband—and you are deliberately inciting your people against me, to rob a woman—a foreigner—a widow—in your own country." He refused to modify his decision.

Even as she received that word she learned that engineers with 50 men were again staking out the hacienda for distribution among the peons. She wrote: "I shall go down and mean to pull up the stakes they have set. They say they will shoot me or put me in prison. Neither do I seem to mind in the least. . . . I don't mean to fire on them if I can help it. . . . This, I know, will be the final fight. I saw it in Obregon's brute face."

She took command at the hacienda. The Indians—always in bitter need of water for their crops — were diverting her irrigation sources. There were clashes at dams and at springs. "It was quite exciting and in true Robin Hood style." She was arrested and freed. Immediate need was passed. She returned to Mexico City to push her demand for justice through the British representative, H. A. Cunard Cummins, charge d'affaires, for this American woman, by her marriage, had become a British subject. He was to fight valiantly, her diplomatic champion for more than a year—and then Mexico drove him from her borders as persona non grata. He had been too active for her.

By force of arms she was determined to hold the hacienda until aid came to her from the British Government. Irrespective of the justice or injustice of her claims, she had, in a certain sense, put herself outside the law. She was defying the Government and the Mexican Constitution. Spring came, and as harvest neared the peons became clamorous. In February came alarming news from the hacienda. The agrarios had put up a red flag on all her boundaries. "I went to see the outrage on horseback with Diego and Iago, both armed. When I saw the red flags I pulled them down. The last they had put on a mound too high for me and not room on the top for the horse to stand—only to dash up one side and down the other. Before they could stop me I forced the horse up, caught the flagstaff in passing and with the weight of my horse broke it off. It was really exhilarating—you enter into that? I have never stormed a citadel or captured a flag before—and it whistled in my ears as I dashed down. The agrarios fired on me, but that only added to the excitement and pleasure . . . nor would I run, but walked the horse slowly back to the hacienda. . . . We planned to charge them with volleys if they came near." Yet, womanlike, she hated bloodshed. She more than once withheld the fire of her friends.

Mexico City again. Obregon was determined. He has "again decided to confiscate," she writes.

SHE was back at the hacienda in May—for the harvest. None too soon. The peons invaded her fields—150 of them—and took prisoners nine of her men. They yelled as she approached, "but with my seven sweet dogs I broke into their midst." She got her men free and the others retired, but picketed her farm. She constantly believes the Government is urging her Indians to move against her. But harvest is completed. "A still better crop than last year," she rejoices.

"They have done their iniquitous deed," she writes on July 21, 1923. "They have confiscated San Pedro." Official orders had been published. It occurs to her now that some powerful politician must want the place. Who? She mentions names. Again, a moral conviction is not proof. Late in September, 80 agrarios take possession of her plowed fields and plant them hastily. Should the seed sprout, theirs would be the harvest under law. She hurries to plow up the ground and then replant it. There are Federal soldiers there. "They have orders," explains one of her loyal servants, "not to let you get killed, but to let the agraries take us and the field." Yet the Captain was her friend. "The army of some hundred miscreants—sticks, stones and old shotguns their weapons—were almost on me, but they seemed too few to me. I felt so sure of driving them back." She meant to shoot to kill. She did not have to do so. The Captain gave his men an order to drive the

THE THEFT of The GREAT ROSE DIAMOND

One of the World's Famous Gems, the "Grand Conde," Has Been Stolen by Burglars From the Treasure Tower of the Chateau of Chantilly.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

The Grand Conde.

PARIS.

THAT breed of men, to whom history and antiquity mean nothing but a source of unlawful income, again have committed high larceny. They have ravished the Treasure Tower of the ancient and beautiful Chateau of Chantilly. Their loot was a rich one, historically, artistically, materially. They bagged more than 50 articles, the most important being the famous Rose Diamond, sometimes known as the "Grand Conde," dating back to the Grand Conde, the great soldier and favorite of his King.

As is almost invariably the case in such robberies, the thieves had an excellent knowledge of the Conde Museum, as Chantilly is now known. It is believed, and with good reason, that the intruders were members of a gang which has pillaged European museums and treasure houses.

The French inspectors and gendarmes were called in immediately the colossal theft was discovered. They, in alliance with the police of other continental countries and the investigators of Scotland Yard, have devoted considerable time and pains to run down the transgressors. Some clues have been obtained. It has not yet been possible to run them to their ends, nor has anything definite been accomplished, but high hope is held for the recovery of the missing treasure.

THE Rose Diamond is by far the most important of the articles stolen, but the value of the other missing treasures is not to be underrated. The diamond is of such interest that its companions in the raid are liable to lose place in the list of treasures. But each one of them shines with a light of its own; their lights are merely dimmed by the importance of the Grand Conde.

In addition to this illustrious stone the thieves obtained:

An enamel attributed to Benvenuto Cellini.

A dagger with a ruby-studded sheath belonging to Abd el Kader, and obtained at the Duc d'Aumale's victory over the emir in the district of Medeah, Algeria.

Another dagger and the plaque of a centurion enriched with diamonds, presented by the Bey of Tunis in 1846.

The Cross of the Legion of Honor in diamonds, given by Napoleon I to General Aymard in 1809, after the battle of Talavera.

Several gold bracelets, with portraits of the Queen of the Belgians, the Duchesse de Montpensier, and the Duc d'Aumale as a child.

A gold bracelet with a cameo and a portrait of Francis I, Emperor of Austria.

A Louis XV bonbonniere in gold.

An enameled watch of the eighteenth century.

Seals of the Duc d'Aumale and the Princess of Conde, and other curiosities.

A bust in relief of King Louis XVIII.

A gold ring with a profile of Louis XVI.

A gold brooch with a portrait in relief of Princess Victoria of England.

A gold pencil which belonged to King Louis Philippe.

A lid in shell representing Neptune.

An oval medallion containing the hair of the Duc d'Enghien.

And many other objects of value.

THIS beautiful Chantilly is very, very old. It is of Roman origin. At the edge of a large forest 30 miles north of Paris, the Romans established a fortified post on an isolated rock standing in the middle of a marshy valley. This fortress was commanded by one Cantillius, from whom the place gets its name. Later the swamps were drained, and their waters, mingled with those of a small river, the Nonette, surround the present Chateau.

In the fourteenth century the chateau belonged to the Boutellier family. It was destroyed by fire during the peasants' revolt. At the end of the fourteenth century a Chancellor of the King, Pierre d'Orgemont, bought Chantilly and rebuilt the chateau. At that time it was an important fortress defended by three moats, three drawbridges and three walls. The Hundred Years' War was at its height, and English, French and Burgundians were fighting in the provinces around Paris. The fortress successfully defended itself.

At the close of the fifteenth century the only d'Orgemont heir was a daughter. She married the Baron de Montmorency, and in that way Chantilly passed into the possession of his house. Their grandson was High Constable of France. At Chantilly he built a large farm house, bred stock on extensive pastures, and in his idle hours played tennis. He entertained freely; among his guests were Francois I and Henry II.

On the High Constable's death, Chantilly became the property of his son, a Field Marshal. This son was captured in battle and was beheaded at Toulouse in 1632. He died childless and the estate fell to his sister, who had married the Prince de Conde.

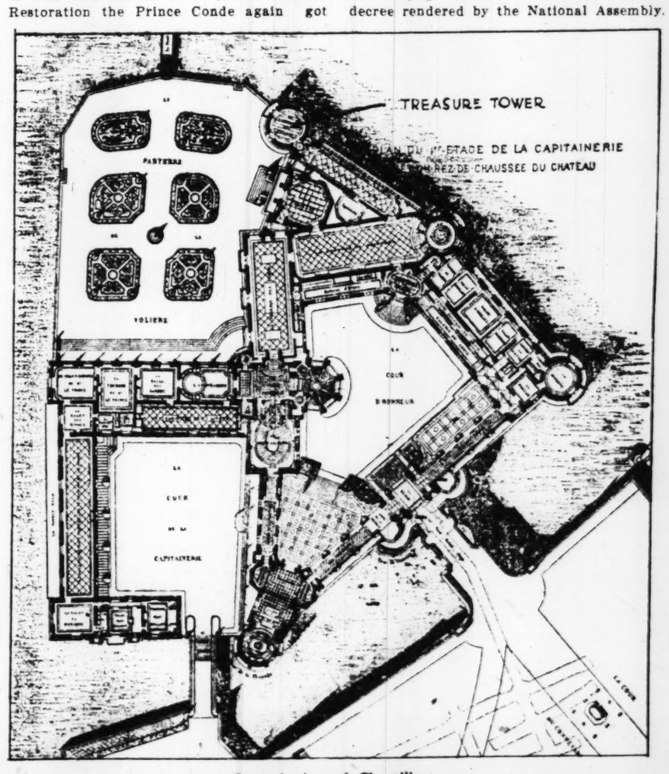
THEIR son was that famous warrior, the Grand Conde, the first of his line to come into possession of the Rose Diamond. He was but 22 years old when he won a famous victory from the Spaniards. This victory was followed by a great many others. But his high temper and ambition got him into trouble with the Prime Minister. Later they became reconciled, but Conde was kept pretty well in the background. He was living at Chantilly, and not being able to endure inaction, he began large building operations there. He beautified the park and made changes in the Chateau. In 1668 he entered the military again and won more victories. He afterwards returned to Chantilly, where he entertained Louis XIV. The King spent but two days there, but the gorgeous entertainment cost Conde more than 180,000 francs. It was during this visit that Vatel, the maitre d'hotel, killed himself because he was afraid the proper amount of fish had not arrived.

When the Grand Conde died, Chantilly came into possession of his son, who also had a great affection for the estate. He constantly walked about, followed by secretaries to whom he dictated the ideas that occurred to him for beautifying his possession. His son succeeded him, and this Conde kept up the work of improving Chantilly. The last Conde who lived at Chantilly was Louis Joseph de Bourbon, who died in 1818. It was while he was alive that Paul I of Russia visited the Chateau.

But Chantilly's glories were to be dimmed. The revolution came. In 1789 the National Guards of Paris went to Chantilly and carried off the cannons. There also was some small amount of pillaging. Then in 1792 and 1793 most of the furniture, pictures and works of art were removed to Paris by order of the Government. What was left was sold at auction. What had taken four centuries to gather together was scattered in three years. At the Restoration the Prince Conde again got possession of Chantilly. He brought back a few things which the State was willing to restore to him. He had work done on the gardens. This last Conde died in 1830. As he had no children, Chantilly passed to his nephew, Prince Henri d'Orleans, Duc d'Aumale.

Henri d'Orleans, Duc d'Aumale.

But the time had not arrived when Chantilly was to flourish again. After the Revolution of 1848 the Duc d'Aumale was banished and his estate of Chantilly confiscated. An English banking firm bought the property for 11,000,000 francs, and it was only given back to the Duke after a decree rendered by the National Assembly.



Ground plan of Chantilly.

The Duc d'Aumale now set about to build a Chateau on the site of the old one. The Castle erected was an admirable piece of work. Here the Duke gathered together great works of art and sculpture, fine books and rare bindings, jewels and lovely things of precious metals. When he died he left it to the Institut de France as a gift to the French people. The center of this collection was the Rose Diamond.

Just what the Rose Diamond is worth is not known. One estimate, made before the war, was 10,000,000 francs, or $2,000,000. But its actual value on the market is enhanced by its historic associations. To the commercial dealer in diamonds, however, its value is based purely on its weight and quality. The diamond is a large, pear-shaped stone of rose color. It is in the form of a drop, and is about a half-inch in width and an inch and one-quarter in length. It is set in the form of a tiepin and is surrounded by pearls.

THE Treasure Tower, where the Rose Diamond and the other stolen valuables were kept, juts out into the water. It is joined to a turning bridge, which is closed at night. One morning, a few weeks ago, at about seven o'clock, an attendant entered the gem room and discovered that several jewel cases had been broken open and that a pane of glass had been taken from one of the windows. He immediately gave the alarm, then began to check the valuables to see what had been stolen. To his consternation he found that among those things that were missing was the historic Rose Diamond.

In a short time arrived from Paris M. Chiappe, Director of the Surete General, who was accompanied by a detachment of inspectors. Among the conservators of the museum are Paul Bourget and Marshal Petain. They, along with other conservators, hastened to the scene.

An investigation was begun immediately.

The time of the burglary was set at between 3:30 o'clock and 5:00 in the morning. At half-past one in the morning guards patrol the outside of the Chateau. An hour later the interior is inspected. There are patrols again at 3:30 a. m. and at 5. Undoubtedly the burglars were well acquainted with the time the watch made its rounds.

Attention was then turned to the manner in which the thieves had gained entrance. It was necessary for them first to cross the water-filled moat. This they had accomplished with a ladder, which was found near the turning bridge, which had been closed for the night. It was believed the thieves crossed the moat at the bridge. Another ladder, 40 feet long, was found in the water. At the foot of the Treasure Tower a rope was found.

The burglars, then, perhaps four in number, had crossed the moat by means of one ladder, gained the balcony of the Tower by the other, and had then broken the window and the inside shutter, thereby admitting themselves to the gem room.

BUT this was not all that was found. In front of the winning post on the Chantily racecourse, nearby, a handsaw was discovered. With this the burglars had cut down a tree not far from the Chateau stables. This tree, trimmed of its branches, was found in the Chateau moat with the ladders. The burglars, thinking that perhaps the ladders would not be sufficient to aid them in gaining admittance to the Treasure Tower, had brought along the tree to help them in their work if it should be needed.

The search was on now to find from where the ladders had come. The inspectors scattered. Presently it was reported that the ladders had been stolen from the yard of a builder at the village of Lamorlage on the Chantilly road.

How, now, did the gang who stole the Rose Diamond get to Chantilly? Inquiry among employes at the railroad station yielded no information. But an abandoned automobile was found on the Jouy-en-Josas road. The back and spare tires had been removed, so had the magneto and the lamps. It was proved that this car, which belonged to a manufacturer, had been stolen in the Rue d'Enghien on the night of the robbery.

The distance separating Paris from Chantilly and Chantilly from Jouy-en-Josas corresponds very nearly to the normal consumption of gasoline which was in the tank at the time the car was stolen. The police, however, are not certain that it was in this car the gang who pillaged the Treasure Tower made their way to Chantilly.

THE possible use by the thieves of an automobile, the use of a tree with its branches trimmed, have given rise to the theory that perhaps the culprits were Americans. For the automobile employed as a means of aiding criminals in their work is a purely American innovation, while the aid of a tree, its branches so shorn that only the stubs of them are left, giving a foothold when the tree is used as a ladder, is likewise an American trick. In the Western United States, trees so cut are often used for ladders, in America they are called Indian ladders.

On the gem cases broken into by the thieves several finger prints were left. They were very good. The inspectors contend that if the right men are discovered these prints will make it easy for the culprits to be identified.

Theories as to who the robbers may be are, of course, flying thick and fast. One belief is that the valuables were taken by "gentlemen burglars." But the investigators doubt that; they think the burglary was committed by thieves who, however, are not without experience. Some say the culprits have escaped over one of the frontiers; others that they took the boat-train to Calais and are now in London.

But the Scotland Yard opinion is against the theory that the Rose Diamond will be brought to London. They believe the diamond will remain on the Continent. It would be easier, it is suggested, for the thieves to smuggle the diamond into one of the countries adjoining France than to bring it across the channel.

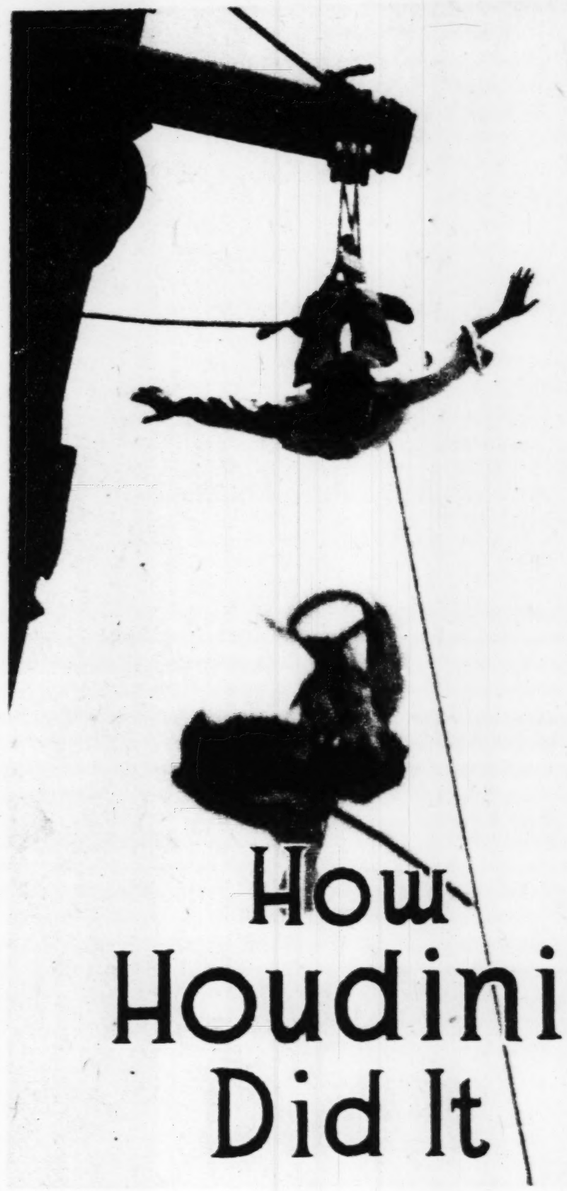
A WELL-KNOWN Paris jeweler has declared that he believes the criminals to be international thieves who are interested in jewels of the value of the Rose Diamond less for the sale of the precious stone than for its repurchase by the victims of the theft. These organized thieves, he says, have generally accomplices in England, and it is through the intermediary of these people that private persons or insurance companies take steps to get back the stolen jewels. As to the Rose Diamond, he considers it is too well-known to be sold. And that is the opinion of all the experts. Owing to its color it is probably unique, and even if cut into smaller stones the pieces would be recognizable by their tint. It is believed that the Chateau of Chantilly will again get possession of the Rose Diamond, unless it has been stolen for a collector.

For experienced thieves, as the culprits in this case appear to be, endeavor to get the highest value from their loot. To get the loot is difficult enough, they expect high compensation. They well know that to cut the Rose Diamond up into smaller stones would tremendously depreciate its worth. They likewise know that it could not be sold, as it is, without their being detected. So back to Chantilly the Rose Diamond will probably go, unless it has been stolen by the hired agents of a collector, one of those curious creatures who will give great sums to possess something he much desires, though he may never show it to anyone, though he himself may only examine it furtively at dead of night.

Houdini, the master magician.

How Houdini Did It

He Won Fame and Fortune With Magician's Tricks, His Fine Muscles and a Clear Head.



Houdini, ready to escape from handcuffs and chains.

SO HARRY HOUDINI came at last to the Great Entanglement. His strong enchantments failed him, his ductile hands were held with irons for which he could find no key, and they put him in a wooden box from which he could not escape, ever. His friends believe his elusive spirit may find a way back from the other side of the dark veil. He has twisted and writhed out of so many predicaments.

From prisons and dungeons, from graves and tombs, from rings of fire, from tanks of water, from sealed boxes and containers, from a hogshead of English ale, from the belly of a whale, from almost everything under the sun they saw this master magician fight his way to freedom.

For 50 centuries and more man has paid tribute to the magician. From the shrine of the Delphic sibyl to the vaudeville stage of America an unbroken stream of gold has given evidence of man's desire to be mystified. Realities pall; life becomes dull and boresome—then comes a Houdini.

Every age has had master magicians, just as there are superior workers in every craft. The Pharaohs singled out these master magicians and gave them honor and power. In the Middle Ages they were venerated. There was Merlin of King Arthur's court, about whose black and potent magic so many legends have been handed down. Later, Paracelsus, one of the greatest magicians of all time—great in other ways, too, now a half-legendary figure—won fame throughout Europe.

In the nineteenth century spiritualists won thousands of followers by their magic. The credulous, and the skeptical, too, came to see the manifestations of spirits from a world which cannot be perceived in the normal light of day.

PROBABLY the greatest magician of our age was Houdini, and though he made no claim to supernatural power, his magic was powerful. Its strength rested in the skill and dexterity of a body perfectly muscled, perfectly trained and co-ordinated, and in a mind that worked with the efficiency and lightning swiftness of a great machine.

"How does he do it?"

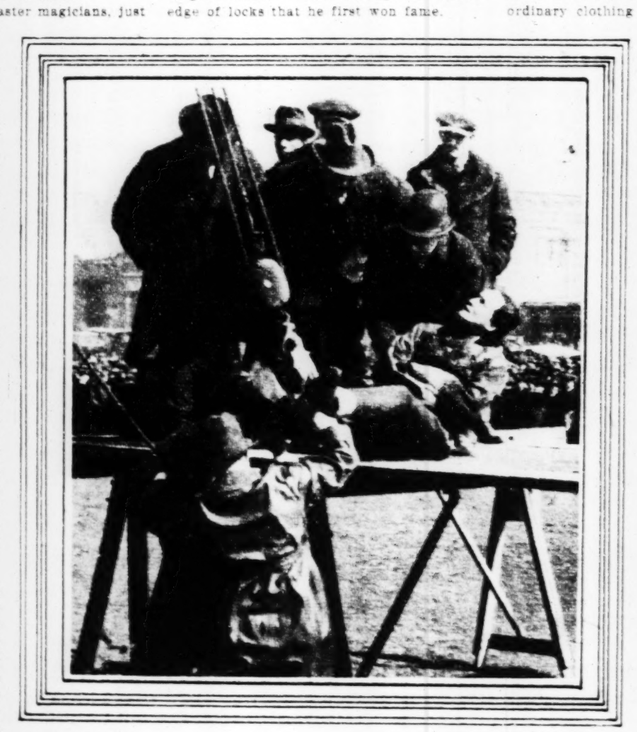
This was the question heard most frequently on the lips of audiences in cities in all parts of the globe after Houdini's performance.

Houdini often made the assertion that his tricks were original, that he owed little or nothing to his long line of predecessors in the magic business. This was not quite so. Infrequently he acknowledged, however, chance indebtedness to earlier magicians, and even to certain spiritualists, despite the fact that much of the energy of his later years was spent in "exposing" mediums and spirit manifestations.

From his own writings and those of other magicians, and from information furnished by Will L. Lindhorst, St. Louis, a magician in his own right, many of Houdini's most mystifying sorceries may now be disclosed.

It is probable that he owed much to his boyhood hero, the French magician, Robert-Houdin, whose methods Houdini later wrote a book to "unmask." To Robert-Houdin, at least, he owed his stage name. Someone told him at the outset of his career that the letter "i" added to the name of Houdin would signify, in French, "like Houdin," and as it was his greatest ambition to be "like Houdin" he promptly adopted the pseudonym. Houdini was the son of a Jewish rabbi, the Reverend M. S. Weiss.

To the locksmith to whom the boy was apprenticed in Appleton, Wis., the magician, Houdini, owed an even greater debt. He acquired from this locksmith an exhaustive and comprehensive knowledge of locks and their workings which always stood him in good stead. It was through his knowledge of locks that he first won fame.



The magician, laced in a straitjacket, about to be hoisted to the fourth floor of the City Hall, St. Louis, where, in three minutes, he made the "escape" shown above.

THE HANDCUFF ESCAPE—The magician's hands were securely manacled in standard handcuffs, often furnished by the police of the city in which he was appearing. In England he ordinarily used the Scotland Yard handcuff. Often, to make the trick more difficult, he was bound in a jackknife position or on his back. A screen was drawn, and in two minutes—less time than it had taken to manacle him—he was free.

This escape was effected in several ways. If the handcuffs were of the simplest variety, it was often possible to unlock them with a forcible blow directed in the right way. Another method was to swell the wrists out as large as possible when the wristlets were put on, and then squirm out of them once he was behind the screen. A third, and probably the commonest method, particularly if Scotland Yard handcuffs were used, was to secrete a small master key or piece of wire about his person. This was possible even though he wore only bathing trunks. The key or wire was put in his shock of bushy hair or in the nostrils. In ordinary clothing it was simple to have a secret pocket in a convenient place.

It was this same knowledge of locks that gave him his reputation for being able to break out of any and all jails. Only on one occasion did Houdini come close to defeat. The magician made his customary wager that he could free himself within a stipulated time, with the jailer of an English prison. For three hours, clad only in a loin cloth, Houdini sought to free himself from the solitary cell, the stones of which were penetratingly cold and damp. At the end of the three hours, almost exhausted, he fell weakly against the door. It gave way and he was free. The jailer later admitted that he had felt so sorry for the magician that he had not locked the door, concluding that it would be enough of a feat if he succeeded in freeing himself from the handcuffs which were put about his wrists before he was locked up.

THE ROPED-BOX ESCAPE—Houdini was placed in a wooden box. The lid was nailed securely on, frequently iron banding also being used about the edges. A rope was then bound about the box and it was placed behind a screen. Smiling and dapper, in from two to three minutes the magician appeared, to bow to a mystified audience.

This trick was accomplished by the aid of nails dipped in oil or powdered graphite. Boards which have been nailed together with nails which have been dipped in graphite may be pushed apart almost with the pressure of the thumb. The rope was not untied. It was the duty of Houdini's assistant, one of the committee from the audience, to see that the rope was left sufficiently slack so that he might squeeze his way out. The iron banding, of course, made no difference, for it was nailed on with nails that had also been treated with graphite. When Houdini appeared in St. Louis in 1914 a box was made on the stage by four employes of a large wholesale firm. The graphite-dipped nails were substituted for those the box makers had brought, by the magician's assistant, as Houdini diverted the attention of the four and the audience.

THE SEALED-BAG TRICK—Houdini was sealed in a large paper bag with glue and stout paper. It was often his practice to invite employes of a bag or paper factory to perform this office on the stage. The bag was placed behind a screen, and in a moment the magician appeared and the bag was still intact.

It was more or less obvious in this trick, of course, that he carried a duplicate bag in a concealed pocket. With surprising dexterity, he cut his way out of the bag, sealed and arranged the duplicate bag in a similar position and tossed the one he had stepped out of behind the wings. Despite its simplicity, this trick was very mystifying as done by Houdini, and always drew applause.

THE LOCKED-CHEST TRICK—The magician was locked in a stout chest, which was also sealed shut. Two minutes behind the screen and he appeared before the audience. The locks or seals had not been tampered with.

This stunt was accomplished with the aid of a magnet and a trick hasp, or hinge. With the magnet, which he had secreted on his person, Houdini removed the pin that held the hasp.

THE MILK-CAN ESCAPE—The magician was locked in a milk can, the type used for the wholesale delivery of milk. At least a dozen padlocks were placed around the top to make the escape effective. The can was then placed in a tank of water, and a screen was drawn before it. In three or four minutes, when the screen was withdrawn, Houdini was seen emerging from the water, and the milk can was still, apparently, securely locked.

The top part of the milk can, padlocks and all, pushed completely off, permitting an easy escape to one of Houdini's agility.

LIVING UNDER WATER—Houdini attempted this stunt to disprove the claims of an Egyptian fakir who maintained that self-hypnosis was necessary to exist under water in an air-tight casket. Houdini, locked in such a casket, was lowered into a swimming pool to a depth of six and one-half feet, where he remained for an hour and a half. "It's easy," the magician said. "Take short, even breaths of the air already in the casket."

THE STRAITJACKET ESCAPE—For this stunt Houdini used the regulation straitjacket employed in insane asylums and prisons to restrain violent persons who would otherwise injure themselves. Formed of canvas and leather, the straps are so arranged that the arms are pinioned behind the back, the ankles and legs firmly secured. It took Houdini from two to four minutes to extricate himself. This trick was always performed in full view of the audience, often while the magician dangled at the end of a rope from the window of a skyscraper. In 1922 Houdini released himself the small of his back, and then slowly but surely towards his head, eventually managing to get the binding straps over his head, where, with his teeth, he opened the first buckle. The rest was comparatively easy. The idea for this trick, which Houdini originated, came during a visit to an insane asylum. The doctor in charge loaned him a straitjacket. In the course of the first struggle to free himself he burst the jacket.

CERTAIN training rules for aspiring magicians may be evolved from Houdini's success. From time to time, he set them down as follows: 1. Acquire perfect co-ordination of the muscles of the body. 2. Avoid all stimulants or sedatives, such as alcohol, tobacco, coffee and tea. 3. Develop resourceful wits with which to crawl out of embarrassing circumstances. 4. Study human beings so that their every reaction may be instantly gauged. 5. Learn each step in a trick before it is attempted in public, and practice, practice, practice. 6. Never lose your head.

Forgetting this last rule nearly cost Houdini his life on several occasions. He wagered once that, bound, he could fight his way out from beneath six feet of earth. He worked up to the six-foot stage gradually, succeeding under two, three, four and at last five feet of comparatively light sandy soil. Then came the crucial test.

"Six feet under the sod—the legal depth for corpses—gave me the first chill of horror I ever had," Houdini once said of this experience. "I wasted a fraction of a breath. As I clawed and kneed the earth my strength began to fail. Then I made another mistake. I yelled.

"Then instinct stepped to the rescue. With my last reserve I fought through, more sand than air entering my nostrils. The sunlight came like a blinding blessing."

Another time Houdini lost his poise when bound to the stake and surrounded by a ring of fire, but he came out with only a little singeing.

Despite hazardous risks of life and the long apprenticeship which must be served, there are numerous magicians who aspire to take Houdini's place. In the American Society of Magicians, of which he was president, are more than 2000 members.

Many of them know the devices and tricks which Houdini employed, but there are few who have any very high hopes of attaining to his eminence. There was something about the personality of the stocky man with the shoulders that were so broad they made him seem almost topheavy, the very high forehead, the piercing eyes and the mop of hair. He was a master showman, and, like all master showmen, he was well paid. At the height of his career Houdini cleared from $75,000 to $100,000 a year.

EVEN the murder of Marguerite Moller was esthetic. Everything but her actual dying was esthetic." Doctor Seaman, from the Homicide Bureau of the office of the District Attorney in New York, was like a demon of discord in our own esthetic surroundings. PERHAPS it stirred a qualm of conscience within Kennedy. As for me, I was annoyed. I had come on this trip not only for a change, but for a story. Kennedy had perfected an improvement on an electro-magnetic gun, a flashless, smokeless, noiseless gun that would rain steel bullets out so fast that it was as if a knife were cutting through the air. He had set the thing up on a bluff on this opposite side of the island from the great New Colonial Hotel, and here we were operating now and then on some luxuriant semi-tropical foliage, testing the device out.

"Fortified with this, we might hear you out, Doctor," suggested Kennedy, shaking his glass enough to elicit music from the ice. "How did the little actress die?"

"Poisoned!"

"What?" I exclaimed.

Kennedy turned to me. "Did you know her, Walter?"

"I certainly did—a wonderful woman. She's the one gave me that famous interview, 'Marriage Clips the Wings.'"

"It was for her jewels," interrupted Doctor Seaman, quietly, "that she was murdered."

"Her collection of diamonds?" I inquired, quickly.

"Exactly. They have been stolen—all gone except those with flaws."

"I have seen them. There was a fortune in that collection. Most of them came from South Africa. In the old days, to know Moller one had to bestow a diamond, at least. There were many rivals—and many diamonds. Every admirer tried to excel the others. Hence the collection."

"How do you know so much, Walter? Did you contribute?" asked Kennedy.

"Do reporters buy diamonds?" I paused a moment. "She liked publicity. I could have been her press agent. Only I prefer traveling with you, Craig." I knew that would get him.

"What became of her husband?" asked Kennedy, with a smile.

I KNEW what prompted that question. He might be a suspect. "She divorced him. Wright was a steel millionaire. He has married since, a nice little woman who could never emote in the least."

"Was he jealous of his first wife? I mean, did he ever try to see her afterward?"

"Yes. Moller wasn't up to date; she was ahead of it," cut in Doctor Seaman. "What was a husband more or less, if she might add to her collection and indulge her whims?"

"But, Craig, Moller was a genius," I remonstrated. "Brains, beauty and beaux—she had them all. And she used them all to the limit. She could paint, she could sing, she could act."

Again Doctor Seaman interrupted. "I've been over her papers. She had a most unusual intellect for a woman. Also, she indulged in many fads. I couldn't begin to explain some of them logically, because I have never happened to get that way, myself. She went in for estheticism with a vengeance. She looked on life as rhythm, harmony, was always trying to get attuned with nature, and all that. It is for us ordinary folks to understand it in music and color. All her activities must co-ordinate with her acute sense of harmony. There was rhythm in her food, in the very taste of things."

"Was she beautiful?" inquired Craig.

"Here's her picture." Doctor Seaman took a photograph from his pocket. "A very recent photograph, I believe. Time could not dull that beauty."

Moller was truly wonderful in that tinted portrait. Great blue eyes looked out at one, searching, it seemed, after we had heard her attributes, for the beauty, the joys of this world, not seeing the dross, the crude, the ugly. Golden-brown locks that seemed wind-stirred even in the inanimate picture crowned a face of perfect contour, oval, but with a well-chiseled chin. Her lips appeared tremulous with emotion, as if, having found the beauty, her soul was ready to acclaim it with her sweet voice. A slender, swanlike throat that curved to her slim, fair shoulders with the lines to stir the heart of an artist, she was grace and beauty, harmony itself.

"You say the woman was poisoned?" asked Craig.

"All the evidences of it," returned Doctor Seaman.

"What poison was used?"

"Strychnine," said the doctor.

Kennedy leaned back, silent for a few moments. "You say it was strychnine—and she was an epicurean. That's strange. There's nothing denoting exquisite taste in strychnine. Why, Doctor, you know that drug is intensely bitter—one of the most bitter known to science. Are you sure it was strychnine?" Kennedy asked it incredulously.

"Positive, from its reactions on the body. The muscles of her limbs had taken on an extreme rigidity. Her eyes were open, staring, the pupils widely dilated. She had died alone—no hand even to wipe the foam from her lips. Her beautiful face was distorted in agony and her mouth was twisted into a ghastly, grinning expression."

Kennedy raised an admonishing hand. "Those are the symptoms, undoubtedly. But how distressing to introduce them here, Seaman, I'm resting. This case would appeal to me if I were in the States. But why chase me here? I don't believe I'll take it up." It was said with an alarming sound of finality of decision in his voice.

But I was curious and I asked: "Just how was the poison given?"

"That is the queer part of it. In spite of its bitterness, it was taken as a drink—in a highball. On a stand beside an easy chair were all the makings—two glasses, the decanter and the siphon of vichy. Both glasses were empty except the dregs. These we examined. One was all right. The other still contained a trace of the poison. The whisky in the decanter was pure, too. Someone slipped the poison into her glass."

Kennedy was lying out straight now, eyes closed, apparently unaware of our conversation.

"It's quite self-evident," I considered, "that the person who took the diamonds poisoned the drink. But it must have been someone with whom she was extremely friendly in order to inveigle her in such a manner in her own beautiful home."

"Something very unusual took place," replied Seaman, with an evident avidity to talk. "Many people laughed at Moller and her theories, but at least she had ideas. Her head was no vacuum. On a long table in the same room where we found her lying dead were several rows of tiny glasses. Each glass was about the size of a cordial glass. And all were numbered. In each was some liquid. On the table were countless notes concerning the exhibit. After repeated tests we found out that all the contents of the glasses were harmless.

"It had been an experiment she had been carrying on with some intimate concerning the harmony of tastes. The first glass was of an extremely sour liquid and all the other glasses were slightly less sour in rotation until they actually became sweet to the taste.

"To be able to appreciate those gradations one must have an acute sense of taste. Evidently Moller and her friend had. Their notes showed they were working together to find 'a nectar fit for the gods.'"

DOCTOR SEAMAN seemed to be regarding the warble of a bird in a tree. "They reasoned out the idea in the same way as the chromatic scale in music. The union of perfectly adjusted tones makes harmony in music. The union of perfectly adjusted liquids would produce a harmony in taste—a delightful drink. And on that idea Moller had been working."

"There is something in that, I think," Kennedy interrupted, unexpectedly. "The blending of colors makes a delightful, harmonious unity, just as the blending of notes makes a harmonious, sweet chord."

It was a new idea to me. But I had to admit that it sounded reasonable, to a certain extent. Then I wondered if in some way these liquids might have caused her death. But no. Doctor Seaman had already told us positively that they had all been tested and found innocuous. Somehow, I couldn't remove the idea from my head that a combination of them might have produced the unexpected results. I made the point. The categorical answer was that there had been a theft—and there was strychnine in the glass. That was the poisoning. My theory was out.

"Who found her?" I questioned next.

"Her maid. We have held her as a witness. She said that the night her mistress was poisoned was her night off. She left in the early afternoon and at that time Marguerite Moller was alone and well. When she came back the next morning to resume her duties she opened the door as usual and found the body.

"SHE called to her—and when she did not receive an answer she lost her head completely and ran screaming from the room for help. That inadvertently helped us. There was no mixing up of things and disturbing positive clews. The manager of the apartment, knowing of the valuable collection of diamonds that belonged to the actress, took charge, allowed admittance to no one but the police and the doctor."

"Were there any recent scandals in Moller's life that the police have unearthed, still unknown to the public?" I asked.

"No. Moller seemed to be behaving herself. She had friends, purely platonic, I believe. Anyone with the charm and beauty of that woman could have hosts of companions, if she so desired. In fact, the maid insists that except for her peculiar, passionate love for her diamonds, which she weighed and studied and gloated over for hours at a time, her heart seemed to have cooled to mere man. She spent her time with her music, her art, her treasures and her theories. She lived a peculiar life and died a peculiar death."

"Well, have you any idea about these purely platonic friends?" I added.

"We have looked up those who seemed most intimate. It was the maid who helped us out so splendidly there. She had met many of Moller's friends. One man in particular her mistress seemed to fancy. She appreciated his talents, unusual talents."

"Who was that?"

"Oh, he called himself Alfred Raver. But if the man contemplated doing such a thing as this crime, you can rest assured that Alfred Raver is a simple alias. You see, the reason why the maid told especially of him was that so many of his hobbies and theories coincided with those of the murdered woman. He, too, was esthetic in his likes and dislikes."

"How did she meet him?" I asked. "Did you find that out?"

"From what I can gather," Seaman answered, "Alfred Raver was a society bootlegger. He qualified in all aspects for such a job. He was suave, handsome, secretive, with abundant intelligence and resourcefulness. He never disappointed a customer. But he was clever. Information about him is almost as hazy as some character in ancient history.

"I have been able to deduce his qualities only from the mass of hearsay evidence; nothing about his friends and manner of living. He was more than a bootlegger. His taste was remarkable. No vintage fooled him. Good 'old' Scotch fabricated synthetically on the high seas was never found in any of his consignments to wealthy patrons. In fact, his taste sounds like a fable or a fairy tale."

Kennedy moved restlessly on his wicker chaise longue. I knew he was interested in spite of himself.

"And to clinch matters, so far as suspicion has fastened on this Alfred Raver, the maid informs us that he was to call on Marguerite Moller that night," Doctor Seaman added.

"Well, Doctor, if you had a suspicion as healthy as that, why didn't you send for me, instead of coming all the way to the Bahamas after me? Much can happen back there in New York while you are away," Kennedy suddenly sat up and questioned.

"FROM information — maybe you would call it rather hazy—gleaned from some of Raver's wealthy patrons along the bootlegging line who would talk, it is suspected he has come down here to winter under cover, perhaps on a boat in some of these coves and bays in the Bahamas. So, you see, Kennedy, the chased and the chaser have sought you out in your retreat. It looks very much as if you were predestined to help us in this emergency."

"Are there other suspects?" I asked.

"Several friends. But they don't qualify like Raver. You see, none but an eccentric genius could have committed this murder. The murderer must have had certain talents, and none of the other suspects possesses them. Moller would never have given them the chance.

"Raver had a peculiar bent toward art, drama, poetry and music. It was easy for such a man to ingratiate himself with such a woman."

"What sort of looking chap is he?"

"Handsome, they say. He possesses a magnetic personality, I believe, has an uncanny attraction for and toward the ladies. If we only had it, many ladies' names might be found on his list of wet patrons.

"Only for his superlative charms, Marguerite Moller would never have fallen for him to the extent of showing him her valuable diamonds, or at least giving him some inkling where she concealed them and providing him with an opportunity to do away with her."

"I suppose," I suggested, "while he is hiding down here, he will be trying to locate some more of his stock in trade for the people back in the States? You might be able to get him that way." I put this suggestion timidly to Doctor Seaman. For once Kennedy was quiet.

"If Alfred Raver is the man we really think he is, he has used many an alias in his lifetime. Some things we do know of his record. He has been a tea-taster, a famous one. In pre-prohibition times he was a wine salesman. He is known as a gambler."

The doctor turned toward Kennedy as if that picture at least ought to be a last appeal to his interest.

Puffing lazily at his pipe, Kennedy explained his seeming lack of interest in taking up such an extraordinary case. "You know, Doctor, I had this chance to come down here and be quiet for a month. But it was for something more than rest that I came."

"What are you doing down here, then, may I ask?" inquired Doctor Seaman, rather surprised. "I thought there was only one reason why people from the States visited Nassau."

KENNEDY shifted his pipe. "I have an electro-magnetic gun, not exactly an invention of my own; but I am perfecting it. It pours out steel bullets like a sheet of steel, as it revolves through an arc you set. It is mighty interesting, and entirely different. That is why I am enjoying it here. Walter and I are mighty happy, with the resting at night, golfing and sailing in the daytime, when we're not at work. I want to finish my work before I go back. And if I let any other work interfere, my reason for coming down here will be nullified."

As I listened, I refrained from saying that Kennedy really was not interested in anything particular except that gun. As to golfing and sailing, I might have added that I was the one who indulged alone in these diversions. Still, I decided that the time on my hands that Kennedy did not require my help I would turn over to Doctor Seaman. I really meant to take up the case seriously, as an experiment.

"Have you any other clews, Doctor, besides those you have told us about?" I asked, eager to get down to work on the case.

"I have several things—photographs of the room as the body was lying when it was found, the box of candy I found near the glasses, and the decanter." Doctor Seaman was opening a small package he had laid on a chair with his hat when he entered.

Once again Kennedy showed animation. "What kind of candies?"

Doctor Seaman displayed a temptingly arranged box of chocolates and bonbons, from the top layer of which only five or six had been taken. "We tested two pieces. They were all right. One a dog ate. The guinea pigs finished the other—and all are still living."

Kennedy picked out a chocolate and smelled it carefully. "Doesn't smell wrong." Gingerly he tasted a bit. Then he moved his tongue and lips as he tasted. "No strychnine in this. I would have detected it. The candies seem to be all right."

FOR a moment he thought, leaning over the stand by his side and sipping his drink contemplatively. It seemed to give him an idea. "Summon Chan, Walter."

The Chinaman glided in. "Bring me that bottle of extra fine Scotch that was sent to me this morning." Chan bowed his way out.

As we waited, Kennedy broke off small bits of the chocolate and insisted on the Doctor and myself tasting them.

"Craig, I could wait just as well, and buy a box for myself. I would feel more comfortable."

But he insisted, and when Craig, usually so polite and thoughtful of other people's feelings, insisted again, I partook. It was sweet, not as sweet, however, as some I have eaten.

Chan entered with a tray. "Walter," remarked Kennedy as Chan set it down before him, "this Scotch was given to me by the Governor today. It is special, old, has come out of private stock. No chance for tampering with labels, cutting, faking age."

I was anticipating it with pleasure and no anxiety. No beautiful lady had died just after drinking that. Glasses were brought, the charged water and ice. Kennedy measured and mixed and passed to us. When he had served himself we raised our glasses silently to one of those toasts that may mean anything under the sun, and took a drink.

I was heartily disappointed. Of all the tasteless, inane, spiritless highballs, that one took the prize. This was nothing but alcoholic; and alcohol is tasteless to me, has none of the refinement of its many popular potable forms. I looked at Doctor Seaman. Well-bred boredom and mild surprise shone in his face, but he was too polite to say anything. I was not.

Kennedy leaned back, the picture of a satisfied host, an inquiring smile playing about his lips.

"What are you trying to put over on us, Craig?" I demanded. "Get out your best. We're ready for it, after that."

"How? What?" he exclaimed, rising. "What's the matter with you, Walter? Something doesn't suit you, perhaps?"

"Well, if you don't know, you have been stung. A joke has been put across on you. There is no taste to that stuff."

"How is it with you, Doctor?" He turned.

"I am afraid I shall have to agree with Jameson's statement," he added, with a touch of droll humor.

I was completely floored when I saw Kennedy slap his knee with satisfaction, turn again to us with a beaming countenance. "I've got it—at least part of it. I know how it was done. Some clever personage, that poisoner of yours!"

NATURALLY enough, now we were excited, too. Gone was my disappointment over Kennedy's refreshments. I wanted to know what he had been up to.

"Give me another of those candies, Doctor. I'll analyze it, prove to you that it has gymnema in it." By this time Kennedy was helping himself to a fat one.

"Gymnema!" Doctor Seaman said it in an uncertain voice. "I never thought of that."

"Gymnema!" I repeated. "What's that?"

"Gymnema sylvestre, a drug derived from the leaves of a plant found in India. It is nonpoisonous, but destroys taste. The poisoner knew strychnine was quick and efficient, but bitter. Moller would detect it in her drink. Circumvent that by chocolates touched off with gymnema sylvestre. She would taste no bitterness, have no suspicion."

When Doctor Seaman rose to leave us that night a full moon was rivaling in beauty the glowing sunset of the earlier evening.

"Craig, I don't feel like going to sleep. I'm off for a stroll with the doctor. Come along?" It was asked dubiously. I felt sure of a negative answer, and I was not disappointed.

"Not tonight, Walter. I want to get up early in the morning. Just a little more to do on that gun."

"Well, I'm going with Doctor Seaman." Our visitor seemed delighted that I took a little interest, though I knew he was troubled over Kennedy's indifference. "Come, Doctor, let us stroll along the waterfront. Maybe, if we try hard enough, we can look something like a pair of thirsty pirates from Rum Row, make a deal to go into the business, or something. We might hear something of this Alfred Raver, whatever his new alias may be. Anyhow, that old moon seems to call me."

As we strolled on to that part of Nassau where gossip of visiting yachts could be heard from garrulous colored natives, I wondered at the many beautiful boats. It truly is a yachtman's paradise in the Bahamas, and Nassau is the favorite resort.

Since my stay there, I had made friends with an old colored man, Joel Doxsee, whose wife bore the euphonious name of Dixey Doxsee, having come herself from Virginia. Joel's business in life was doing odd jobs for all the visitors who happened ashore from the yachts. He knew where the fishing was, where the fishing supplies could be got, knew practically the entire activities of the waterside.

I had told Doctor Seaman of him, and, late as it was, decided to look him up. He had told me where his small thatched cabin was located, and we wandered in that direction.

As we neared it, the weak but sweet-toned voice of the old man was singing a queer, monotonous dirge—something that had been handed down from the past by his parents. It was a touch of Africa in the Bahamas.

"Ah!" murmured Doctor Seaman. "There is harmony!"

When the last note died away I called, softly, "Joel!"

"Yes, sir!"

"I just dropped over to have a talk with you."

"Very good, sir. Glad to see you, sir, any time, sir."

SEAMAN had expected Southern darky dialect. He was not prepared for an almost cockney accent. A smile greeted him as my friend and we took the proffered seats, some old stencilled cases that here, too, betrayed the ruling industry of the island now.

"Why the music? Do you sing like that every night?" I asked the old darky, kindly.

"I'd be scornful to—only when I am moody for it," he answered solemnly, sure of the sound of the words if not their precise meaning.

"You like harmony?" I pursued.

Suddenly his eyes opened wide with joy, as if the remark had recalled to him a vision he still saw, a delightful vision. His arms, brown and thin, waved with a sort of tremulous, pathetic rhythm. "My music is so little. But, ah! I heard music today!"

"You heard music? Over at the hotel?"

A pressure of the lips, a closing of the eyes, and he shook his head. "No, sir." He opened his eyes. "On a boat, Mr. Jameson. A fiddle it was."

I looked across at Doctor Seaman curiously. On our walk down just now he had told me another fact about the man on his mind. He had come across a portfolio of music in Moller's studio, music arranged for a violin, and it was marked with the name

Mrs. Dumbly

A Nice Evening.
At the Movie Show.
Pests in the Audience.
How They Do Talk and Hum.

IF there's any union I'd like to see dissolved and stamped out and utterly destroyed it's the Amalgamated Association of United Movie Seat Singers! I don't mean the ones who stand up in front and warble along with the violin between pictures. I mean the ones who sit behind you and gargle out accompaniments to whatever the orchestra plays right when Douglas Barethanks is climbing up a wall of paper roses!

I hate them worse than I do the Volunteer Subtitle Readers' Club. I despise them more deeply than I do the Independent Order of Plot Explainers! But when the A. A. U. M. S. S. and the V. S. R. C. and the I. O. P. E. all work together, then—! ! Please pass the selected epithets! They're harder to endure even than the people in front of you who put their heads together and form a wooden barricade between you and the picture!

Last time I went to a moving picture expecting to get an eyeful I got two earsful instead. The moment the orchestra struck up the people all around me began to clear their throats and then:

The girl behind me: "I know that song. Tee, tee tee dumdumdum dee doodlededoo. Tumtumtum."

The woman in front of me (reading in a Chautauqua platform voice): "'The beautiful Neara Beera who sits at the vortex of the mad whirlpool of the great city's underworld holding in her dangerously beautiful hands the reins of its vice, crime, lust, greed and hate.'"

Her companion: "Ain't she cute! Is she married?"

HER little boy: "Mamma, what does that thing you read mean, Mamma? I say, Mamma, what does it mean, Mamma?"

His mother: "I don't know."

The little boy: "Why don't you know? Then who does know?"

Me, to myself: "Nobody knows!"

Girl behind me: "Too doodle doo rood tumtum tee!"

Woman in front of me: "'Sylvester Marblehead, her henchman, sinister figure on the glittering surface of the tinseled, mysterious, jewelled, light-drenched night life of the great city.'"

Her companion: "Ain't she cute! Is she married?"

Little boy: "What does that mean, Mamma, what does it mean?"

The girl behind me: "Whatuli do——ooo when you—oo are far away-ay andi——"

Me, to myself: "If he's as far away as you are from the tune he'll never get back."

The woman in front of me, in a voice becoming rich with chocolate creams: "Now see, Sylvester's falling in love with the mission worker. See, she doesn't know it yet, see. And she's awful scared of the night life. She's getting too old to play those sweet parts now. She's 25 if she's a day."

Her companion: "I don't think she's so cute. She's been married several times though. Say, I think she's supposed to be Sylvester's wife."

The woman in front of me: "Oh no she ain't. Don't you notice how he never pays any attention when she says anything?"

Little boy: "Mamma, I wanna drink."

Mother: "Be still, mother wants to see the picture."

Little boy: "What for is that man trying to drag that lady into that room? I wanna drink."

THE girl behind me: "Too doodledo do. Dum, dum, dum. Kiss me, kissme again. Dum tee tum!"

Her girl friend: "Say kid, you'd oughta take vocal lessons."

Me, to myself: "You're right. I know it!"

The girl behind me: "I'd like to take lessons but I don't because I'm so timid about singing before strangers. Too doodle-Kissme, kissme again—tumtumtum!"

The woman in front of me: "'Alli Wrong, Chinese owner of the death trap den from which no one who has been killed ever escapes. His daughter, Curb Bum, beloved idol of the vice district.' See, she isn't really his daughter and she ain't Chinese but she don't know it yet."

Her companion: "Is she married?"

Little boy: "I wanna drink."

Mother: "Go to the back of the theater and get one."

Little boy: "I dowanna. I want you to go with me."

Girl in back of me: "I know that song, too. Tum tee tum!"

Me, to myself: "I wish you didn't."

Little boy: "I wanna drink, I wanna drink. I want one! Mamma, stop hitting me! Wooh wowl wow. Baugh boo hoo, waw baugh. Wowo bu baugh! Ooh ough wow!"

Girl behind me: "Todododo. Tum, tum!"

Me: ?

Oh well, I won't record what I said then. It wouldn't pass the board of censors.

Wedding Bells.
A Fair Laplander.
Central Park Crowded.
Details of His Marriage.

WE now come to my first marriage. The girl was a born Laplander and landed in my lap during the course of a quiet week-end party at the Curley estate on Long Island. I suppose I was fascinated by the music of her broken English as much as by the blonde perfection of her 212 pounds of bubbling youth.

"Listen, hon'," were her first words. "Ise mahty thusty. Is you-all goin' to fetch me some mo' dat dere gin?"

As she Lapped the fresh made spirits, I made her tell me of herself. Her name was Hugga—Hugga Much—and she was the daughter of an Eskimo society woman who had fallen in love with her family's Lap dog trainer.

"Mah mammy was sho 'nough 'folks,'" she said proudly.

When the party was over and I had gone back to New York, she obtained my address and began showering me with mash notes, written in the same stertorous drawl. She was the most persistent of all the women who have ever marked me as their goat, and it soon became evident that fighting her off was a waste of time. I finally said yes, and the scene that followed defies description. Dignified men marched the streets ringing cowbells and fairly reeking with confetti; women tore each other's clothes, and even little children asked, "Where is nurse?" and "What is all the hullabaloo?"

NOW followed preparations for the wedding. I was for having some of my friends as ushers and got as far as selecting Robert Benchley and Robert Sherwood, two beggers of 'Life,' but Hugga, always strong for system and efficiency, insisted on my engaging the ushers from Madison Square Garden. I wanted the ceremony held at Old Trinity; Hugga said it was below her station—she usually got off at Columbus Circle. So we decided to put it on in Central Park, which was convenient for both of us and big enough to accommodate most of our buddies.

(Editor's note: "Buddies" is not in any dictionary and may be a colloquialism meaning, perhaps, clowns or funny men.)

My best man was Paul Whelton of the Boston Wheltons. He was then employed at Sing Sing prison as an electric chair tester, his duties being to sit in the chair just before an execution and inform the electrician regarding the current, whether it was just right or too strong or not strong enough. "Volts" Whelton, his buddies called him.

(Editor's note: There is that word again.)

Hugga's bridesmaid was Texas Guinan and her maid of honor was Elizabeth Barrett (Peaches) Browning.

(Author's note: At this point I wish to correct an error that was made by the New York newspapers in their account of the wedding. I was repeatedly referred to as the groom, though I have had nothing to do with the care of a horse since I was 12 years old, and then only as a favor. The mistake probably was due to a misunderstanding by an Associated Press reporter, who, when my engagement was announced, called up Hugga's mother. Sitting Much, and asked if she was satisfied with me as a son-in-law. Mrs. Much replied: "I certainly am. He is a hustler." The reporter, no doubt, thought she said "hostler." The two words "hostler" and "hustler" sound a great deal alike, especially in Eskimo.)

(Editor's note: Another amusing incident is told concerning that same telephone conversation. When the reporter first got the bride's mother on the wire, he said: "Mrs. Much?" and she replied: "Yes, a great deal.")

IT rained the night before the wedding, but the park had been covered with tarpaulin and when this had been removed, Judge Landis examined the turf and ruled that the ceremony must go on. Hugga was greeted with commingled boos and cheers. She seemed perfectly calm. I learned afterward that this was the sixth time she had tempted Hymen. Mayor Walker of New York and Dudley Field Malone presented her with the keys to Key West and McKeesport and everybody stood up and bared their chests while the band played the Lapland national anthem.

(Editor's note: A custom. The anthem referred to begins, "Lap and the world laps with you.")

Nick Altrock and Al Schacht next put on their comical burlesque channel swim and then I entered leaning on the arm of a taxi driver. It was all he could do to hold me up.

(Driver's note: I never held nobody up.)

The one ring service was read by an official of the Lotus Club and we adjourned to the wedding breakfast, consisting of half a grapefruit, cereal, choice of bacon or ham and eggs, or country sausage and wheat cakes, toast, rolls or muffins, coffee, tea, milk, cocoa, Kaffee Hag, open 7 to 9:30 Sundays 7:30 to 10.

A Single Grain of Wheat and Its Romantic Story

TORONTO, Canada.

FIFTY years ago the first shipment of wheat came out of Western Canada.

There had been a crop failure in the East and a famine in seed wheat. It was known that a few hardy pioneers were growing wheat in the Western wilderness, so L. G. Steele, who afterwards became a prominent seed merchant, set out on a scouting expedition. He traveled from Toronto to Duluth by boat, thence by rail and steamer, and did the last 150 miles to old Fort Garry, now Winnipeg, by lumber wagon in 30 hours.

He managed to scrape together 857 bushels of wheat, which was sent out on Red River boats to rail head in the United States, and thence east.

Last month the anniversary of the event was celebrated in Winnipeg by a banquet attended by public men and by some of the pioneers who grew the first exportable surplus of wheat—which was also the last for many years following.

Western Canada's wheat is one of the great resources of modern world economics. Instead of 857 bushels it now contributes each year to the world's larder some 300,000,000 or 400,000,000 bushels. Comparatively a handful of people produce it, so that its exportable surplus dominates all the grain exchanges.

Its ramifications include a thousand grain elevators, two transcontinental railroad systems, the tonnage of the great monolithic storage bins at Port Arthur, Buffalo, Montreal, Vancouver, Liverpool, Hongkong, Hamburg and a score of other ocean ports.

But the real romance of Canada's wheat is the story of a single grain—a stray grain of Galician spring wheat which nearly a hundred years ago found its way into a Danzig cargo boat on the Baltic Sea.

In 1842 David Fife, an Ontario farmer, received a pocketful of seed wheat from a friend in Glasgow who had obtained it from the Danzig wheat boat. Fife got it in the spring, but not knowing whether it was winter or spring wheat, he planted only half of it in the spring. It was really winter wheat, so did not mature. But one stalk, different from the rest, bore three grains which ripened.

Fife saved the three grains and planted them the next spring, and the following year he had enough grains to plant a small patch.

This wheat was something new to Fife. The grains were big and hard, and the yield prolific. It was superior to anything that had been seen in Canada, so every grain was carefully preserved, and, as the stock grew, small supplies were distributed among neighbors.

This was the beginning of "Red Fife" wheat. An issue of the Country Gentleman in 1860 contains a letter from a Wisconsin farmer extolling the merits of wheat he had obtained from a farmer named Fife in Canada West—the name of Ontario at that time. "Red Fife" eventually became the standard wheat all over North America.

Researches many years later demonstrated that David Fife's single grain must have been a variety of Galician spring wheat, which in some manner had found its way into the hold of the Danzig cargo boat, hundreds of miles away.

But there is a second romance in the eugenics of Canadian wheat production.

Red Fife, for all its admirable qualities, was slow in maturing. Heavy losses were suffered from early frosts in Canada, though in the softer-climed United States Red Fife had few critics. In 1886 Doctor William Saunders, the first Dominion cerealist, began experiments to find a breed of wheat which would embrace all the good qualities of Red Fife but would mature in shorter time. Associated with him were his two sons. Grain was imported from all the world. From Russia, the Ukraine, the Crimea, from India, the slopes of the Himalayas, from Australia and from the United States. Countless experiments in cross-fertilization were made and a great variety of new plants were developed in that way.

Finally, a cross between Red Fife and Hard Red Calcutta, an Indian wheat, seemed to promise results. By 1904 Doctor Charles B. Saunders, who had succeeded his father as cerealist, had 12 plants of a new variety which he called Marquis wheat. Such was the modest beginning.

In the fall of 1904 all the Marquis wheat there was in the world was stored in a paper envelope. In 1914 its production taxed the elevator capacity of the country. In 1926 the production of Marquis wheat throughout Canada and the Northern United States runs into hundreds of millions of bushels.

Marquis has been an amazing success. Damage by frost, at one time a nightmare, is rarely heard of nowadays. Moreover, the northerly limit of wheat-growing area has been pushed back hundreds of miles.

Canadian cerealists are not yet finished. In the last few years they have developed a new variety of wheat, known as Garnet, which matures even earlier than Marquis and is said to be proof against rust, the great remaining bugbear of wheat farmers. But Garnet is said to be not quite so superior in quality as Marquis, which yields, as No. 1 Northern, the finest wheat in the world, and remains undisturbed queen of the wheat fields.

One Woman Against All Mexico

peons off. And while she did her plowing under such a guard "the chiefs of the agrarios have gone to Mexico to ask protection against me from Obregon," she notes. She went back to Mexico City to again seek Great Britain's aid.

Christmas neared. No season now of "peace on earth, good will to men." Shortly before the holiday came word from the hacienda. The agrarians had attacked her home—looted and burned it. Don Iago had killed two men and disappeared. She returned to the hacienda. "My room was burned and fallen in—also the next room, the others charred and smoldering. No furniture left and the barns open. The grain gone. No word of Don Iago." Later she learned that since the Federals would not defend him from the agrarians he had joined a revolt against Obregon.

FROM now on the estate of San Pedro Coxtocan is virtually in a state of siege. Obregon sent a guard of soldiers with the dawning of the year 1924. She laughs—"the noted bandit Isabel el Chacarra's men. Zapata y Zapatista's tales pale before the outrages these men have committed, and this is the guard Obregon has allotted me—really, they must want me killed very badly." She returns to Mexico City and receives—with thankfulness—a check for the wheat she had shipped before the hacienda was attacked and pillaged. And now, following the fortunes of Iago from afar, she writes in February, "You will see I am too far launched in the rebellion to stop."

March comes. The president of the agrarios at Puebla orders her to "lift my ripe crop immediately or they would take energetic measures." Also to give over 400 acres more of her land. She hurries to the scene. She finds they have cut off her water and driven away her irrigators. By night she sent her servants to break the dyke that withheld water from her crop. And the wheat was saved—just two weeks from the ripening.

Another of the avenues leading to San Pedro.

And now, before the harvest, came a letter—came by mistake to her, but she didn't hesitate to open it. It was signed by Brigadier-General Serrato of Puebla, she says, and gave these instructions: "As Senora Evans refused to give up her land and continued harvesting his soldiers were to give assistance to the agrarios against her." It had been intended for the commandante on her hacienda. She sent it to the British charge in Mexico. She never told the commandante. And she harvested with a guard of soldiers who did not help the agrarios.

If she was determined so were the peons. Reinforcing Mrs. Evans, now, comes one upon the scene called in the book "Dalshiel," but in the dispatches of the time, and later, known as George Camp. He is an engineer. A Texan. He has abandoned his practice in Mexico City to come to her aid. He is to stay on, after her death, until in January of this year, when he leaves San Pedro Coxtocan, announcing that his life is no longer safe.

Diplomats negotiate. Cunard Cummins makes himself "objectionable" to Obregon and is sent away. And amid the ruins of her hacienda Mrs. Evans is living under the lurking threat of death. Except for stealthy trips to Mexico City, she doesn't leave.

In May the agrarians again direct their fire upon her, and she escapes uninjured without returning it. By the end of the month she has posted notices that armed men come upon her ground at their own risk. On May 31 the hacienda is really besieged. She, Dalshiel and a German painter defend it from the roof. "About 100 shots were exchanged. We fired 10. We are saving our ammunition. We watch all the corners and are still on the roof. Sunday morning early my good Indian friends came in from the fields and said we were surrounded by over a thousand men. It was true. We pointed our guns at them and called, 'Halt!' which they did. Like ants they swarmed the hill." She and Dalshiel quarrel—"for I wouldn't let him kill a man who crossed our line carrying a gun. Dalshiel thought him a spy," she adds.

"I THINK two orders are out—one to kill me, if they can get an opportunity unseen—the other to capture," she writes on June 6. "Manuel Montes still urges on the agrarios." She continued to harvest some grain, but threshing is halted. They have driven off the helpers. The fields are deserted. She hears on June 20 that Obregon will send a regiment to dispossess her.

She makes a last appeal in Mexico City, and July 27 is back at the hacienda again. Again they were threshing. She gets the first cars of her wheat away. When the pay comes in she will visit the United States, she writes. She escorts the grain to the cars and sees them safely off. That afternoon of August 2, 1924, she draws 400 pesos in silver to pay her "good Indians," and starts back with the money to her estate.

Her driver and companion is a Teuton. She knows his mother tongue. She recites to him a tragic verse in German as they near the village of Tianguismenalso. And before she has finished it men rise up from behind the dykes that line the road and fire. Her voice is silenced.

Rosalie Caden Evans no longer is an international problem.

Banish Colds with this amazing Spine Protector

When you feel that chill—the menace of cold, influenza, or pneumonia has touched the weak point, the danger zone of your body — your spine! You can protect your spine—make it absolutely proof against drafts and all atmospheric changes. Modern medical science has just perfected the Spine Protector—an amazing device that keeps you warm, comfortable, and safe through the worst conditions, even in light underwear. Physicians prescribe the Spine Protector to prevent colds and congestion. They wear it, too, to guard their own health. The Spine Protector, with its special textured cloth and patent design, is light in weight, fits over the entire spine, fastens to the top of the undergarment—unnoticed. Get a Spine Protector and stop worrying about colds and all the serious—sometimes fatal—illnesses that develop from them. Send this coupon, with $3 for a man's, woman's or child's size. Hens That Lay 1000 Eggs

New System of Poultry Keeping Gets High Price Winter Eggs—If You Keep Hens and Want More Eggs

CUT THIS OUT

That every pullet hatched has 1000 more egg germs in her system and may be made to lay them on a highly profitable basis over a four to six year period has now been scientifically proved by practical poultrymen. This new system of poultry keeping is being successfully used by hundreds of poultry keepers—from big chicken farms to small backyard flocks—all over America. Old hens—two, three, four years old—lie like pullets all through coldest winter weather when egg prices are high. Make slacker hens hustle, shorten moult, make pullets lay in top notch form, often triple egg production. This simple, new, practical poultry system is inexpensive and easy to follow and shows remarkable results in a maximum short time with almost any standard breed or even with mixed or mongrel flocks. It is fully described and explained in a circular, THE 1000-EGG PEN, one copy of which will be sent free to any reader of this paper who keeps six hens or more. Cut this out and mail with name and address to Standard Poultry Service, 1208 B Herald Bldg., Binghamton, N. Y., and your copy will be sent by return mail. Make no mistake. This system is a wonder. As one poultryman says: "If your hens have ever made them—and I know they have—this method will get them out. They simply have to lay." If you want more eggs, healthier hens and bigger profits, be sure to make this test.

of Alfred Raver. The doctor knew of what I was thinking. He was thinking of the music scroll, too. "Jameson," he remarked, aside, "that music was never played by an amateur. Only someone proficient could play it. It required technique, skill, months, years of practice."

"This man has all of that," put in Joel. Whatever those words meant, they meant melody to him, and this man had it, he knew.

"What kind of a boat is he on, Joel?" I asked. "I love music, the violin, too."

"A yawl, down in the cove, not far from your place."

"So?" I wanted to question the old man, yet I did not wish to give him an inkling. "How did you meet him?"

A secretive smile was my answer—and that smile could mean only one thing—something to do with booze for the States.

"I see, Joel. You can get something else than music on board that yawl. Is that it?"

Again that smile of white ivory against black skin, no confirmation and no denial.

"What's the name of the boat, Joel?"

"The Vagrant, Mr. Jameson." Joel was a bit confidential. My name sounded like a familiar brand to him. "Now don't you get Mr. Greason into any trouble, sir. My tongue would stick to the roof of my mouth, sir, if you did."

"Don't worry," I reassured. "Is he alone on the boat, Joel?"

"No; another man, Mr. Norcross, his friend. I think it's he knows more about sailing, sir, than the violin. It sounds so."

I had expected when I asked the question that the answer would be about a girl on the boat. However, I could see that a sailing master, under the circumstances, was more essential.

THE next morning the doctor and I were out early, sailing about the cove. There was just enough breeze to make sailing a dream instead of a drudgery.

It was just as Joel had informed us. There was a yawl, a beautiful boat, about 80 feet over all, white, against whose sides the morning sun glistened as the brass gleamed.

We tacked across her bow, came about. We could hear the notes of a violin, sweet, plaintive. As the player in the cabin finished we applauded. A man appeared in the cabin doorway, saw us, waved a hand good-naturedly in our direction as we edged closer, then disappeared again down the companionway.

"So that is where they are, Doctor!" I remarked, with suppressed excitement, as we bore away. "Did you see that little motor tender, almost a cedar speed boat, off the davits, out on the end of a boat boom? It looked to me as if they were about to go ashore for supplies or something. Let's get back to the docks."

My surmise was right, but they must have taken their time, as we were not only in our slower cat back at the public docks, but had been hanging around an hour, it seemed, when we saw the tender of the Vagrant coming up to the landing stage.

Greason looked at us and smiled as he caught sight of us at the top of the runway. I casually returned the greeting. I knew that on boats it is easy to make acquaintances.

Greason was a blond, rather handsome, with a certain charming ruthlessness, often mistaken for manhood. I liked his chuckle. It was boyish. A flapper would have called him adorable, simply for his shoulders, his narrow hips, those laughing blue eyes and that chuckle.

"Where are you chaps staying?" he asked, in his hearty, breezy way, when I had engineered ourselves alone together. "Over at the New Colonial?"

"No; we have a bungalow for a month. Are you living on your boat?"

"This time. I don't always. We're very comfortable. I have a friend with me who likes it. He doesn't care for hotels and excitement much." He smiled his fascinating smile. "I like a little life."

"Well, I have a friend up at the bungalow, the same way." We had been talking long enough to become confidential. "It's pretty quiet. I wish you could manage to come up and take dinner with us. I'm spoiling for a regular party."

"Glad to. Thanks." There was no visible evidence of suspicion yet. I was watching carefully for that.

"Can't you bring your violin?"

"We'll see. Where are you?"

"It's up there." I pointed out the place along the shore. "Let's make it for tonight."

"All right. I'll be up."

He was off, claimed by others. His popularity was a certainty about here. I wondered why. Then I began taking myself to task. I had nothing on this man. He might be just a handsome, debonair man of the world, an accomplished violinist. Probably there were many more also who could play a violin in Nassau. Just because some violin music was found in Moller's studio and Alfred Raver could play did not make Greason a poisoner, even though Raver was known to be hiding here under another alias.

"It might be well for us to get back, prepare Kennedy, give Chan a chance," suggested Doctor Seaman.

I realized the good sense in his suggestion, and we turned toward the bungalow, pausing only at the shops, loading ourselves with treasures for the kitchen. I think we had more delicacies in our arms than Craig and I had indulged in during the entire visit.

"What's the idea?" demanded Kennedy, in mild surprise.

"Just this, Craig. I'm not sure, but I think I'm on the way to catching that exotic genius!"

Kennedy looked toward Doctor Seaman for confirmation.

"I BELIEVE Greason is the man. You should hear the gossip about him. People have heard wonderful music coming from the yawl. We heard it. He is handsome, attractive. His dinners and parties are famous and he is spoken of as an art patron, too."

"What are you going to do about it?" Kennedy asked it with a certain gleam of interest.

"I've invited him up to dinner."

"Some fast worker, Walter! Hear of the crime one night—and catch the criminal the next. I have a rival. How are you going to crash him?"

"I thought that would come to me during the dinner tonight. I want you to look him over, Craig, see if you don't agree with me—and help me take him in."

Kennedy's face lighted with the joy of battle, the war of wits. "Good!" he exclaimed. "We'll trap him!"

I was wondering whether there was subtle sarcasm in that, when Doctor Seaman interrupted. "How did the gun come along today? Make any headway?"

"I think I overcame the trouble this morning. A little more work on it this afternoon and I'll leave it for the finishing touches tomorrow. I'll feel more like taking an interest in this case when that gun is off my mind."

During the rest of the afternoon I was as busy over my dinner as a bride at the first dinner party for the in-law family after the honeymoon. I wanted the choicest food, the best wine. I wanted the table just right. If there was to be a proper denouement for my esthetic poisoner, I wanted it at an esthetic meal in an esthetic environment.

Suddenly Chan announced the arrival of Greason.

It was no effort at all to entertain Greason. His travels about the casinos and sporting resorts of the Continent had given him a fund of anecdotes that would interest any group, and he told them in an inimitable manner.

As we entered the dining room, almost al fresco, glassed over, with vines trailing over the overhead glass, I expected to hear Greason make some remark about the artistic effects we had achieved on the room and on the table. I watched him eagerly, anticipating from his artistic reputation an expression of pleasure, some exclamation of delight.

My spirits fell very low indeed when he took his place calmly, apparently oblivious to all the effects I had worked so hard to create for the benefit of his esthetic personality. I was plainly discouraged, if not disconcerted.

Greason's only remark relating even remotely to the appointments was: "No ladies here tonight?" I think he was amazed at our fussing over a stag.

My most tempting viands disappeared with no more approval than any hungry man living on the water would show a well-cooked, well-balanced meal. I had hoped to make him betray his exquisite love for the beautiful—and I had failed.

Craig suppressed a smile in my direction, as if he would have delighted to say: "It's your case, Walter. Handle it!" He was gaining much pleasure watching me with my recalcitrant suspect.

I breathed an inward sigh of relief at last. Craig was coming to my rescue. It was toward the end of the dinner. He had taken his glass of Rhine wine and looked at it closely, sipped it. "Do you know, Greason, no one can fool me on this. I've bought a lot of it. But I don't know how to take it back, unless I take it back inside of me."

Greason looked at him thoughtfully, said nothing, smiled.

"I have tasted wines all over the world," continued Kennedy, slowly, fishing, "and can almost recognize any vintage. It is a great gift in these days of poor wines and high prices."

"I am something of a connoisseur myself." At last Greason was biting. "Not much that has been faked gets by me. When we get back home, look me up. I was fortunate to lay in a stock before prohibition."

Greason suddenly tried to change the subject to the violin. "I hope you fellows don't think I'm sour for not bringing the fiddle over, but I didn't want to bore you."

Again we were at an impasse. I yielded to Kennedy. Kennedy was quite ready. He sought to draw him out along musical lines. He mentioned the names of the most popular composers of the day, he talked of their most recent work, criticising and comparing. Only the most fragmentary remarks now were made by Greason.

DISAPPOINTMENT and defeat met us at every turn. Here was not my erotic lover of the beautiful. Art failed to stimulate his imagination. We could not get a reaction out of him on anything. He was perfectly well-bred, but dull on everything else but what he wished to discuss. I glanced in hopeless surrender at Craig.

Craig called Chan. "Get me some tea, Chan."

Kennedy was now busy making tea. I had qualified on so many perfectly ladylike jobs that afternoon that I expected next to be asked to pour. It was my party. I had to see it through.

But Kennedy completed the job, with the efficient help of Chan. All the while Kennedy was telling us interesting facts he had learned about the many varieties of teas, the Oolong from Formosa, the Orange Pekoe, Pekoe Souchong from China, the green teas from India and Ceylon, and the brick tea for the use of Tibetans.

As the cups were passed, Greason himself seemed bored. At last he looked about him and observed all had been served.

"There are so many grades," he murmured.

He took up the sugar tongs and dropped a lump of sugar into his cup.

As Greason held the cup to his lips and sipped, now delightedly, we heard the put! put! put! put! of a motor boat.

From his seat Craig could look out over the cove. So could I. The tender of the Vagrant was slipping away from the yawl, headed across, perhaps out of the cove. Suddenly Kennedy looked from the boat to the man sipping sweetened tea so comfortably. He was taking it with evident relish.

Craig rose quickly. "Walter, I must stop that tender. It is getting away, to the other side."

Greason started to rise, but sank back in his chair. Kennedy had absently, methodically taken a small automatic from his side pocket.

"Come with us—go ahead!"

Kennedy hurried us up to the bluff where the gun had been set. Quickly he manipulated it. A moment and the long-armed steel knife of shot rained out over the water. The man in the tender put on more speed. The rain of shot just followed him, circled, fell directly ahead. He stopped, shut off his engine. The hint was plain.

"Doctor, take charge of this gun. Let the man see you. That is all that is necessary. He won't start that engine till we get to him. Now for your boat, Walter."

Kennedy, with his gat in his pocket, made Greason walk down the bluff ahead to my cat, get in, seat himself forward.

A sullen, handsome, dark-haired man glared and swore at us from the tender, but he, too, was covered by Kennedy. I saw in the tender, hastily thrown, a violin in its case, music, magazines, some books, too, to while away quiet hours when the get-away was accomplished and the hiding was good. I wondered what Greason was thinking. He looked so sour and quiet. Were both of them waiting for a chance to tumble out and escape? We were watching them too closely as we turned back toward the yawl.

"I'm going to look through the Vagrant, Walter. Keep them covered."

IN the main cabin he started in. Set in the woodwork was a chronometer. It was not long before Kennedy had paused before it. Then I noticed what had caught his eye. The "XII" was not precisely at the top. He reached up, turned it to its proper vertical position. The chronometer screwed into the woodwork. Counterclockwise, Kennedy continued turning it thoughtfully. It came out.

Back of the chronometer was an empty space, a veritable hidden wall safe, built in the mahogany.

Craig wheeled. He looked again from the empty wall safe toward Norcross. Then he stepped over quickly, felt Norcross, patting him over swiftly as one who sought something on the hip.

About his waist he found a lump. He reached in, pulled out a small chamois bag. By now my eyes were bulging, what with watching Craig and covering these two. Would Craig never open it? He was so deliberate. I could not wait.

Slowly Craig opened the bag on the table in the cabin. There were the diamonds of the dead actress, the amazing Moller!

"Norcross, I want you," repeated Kennedy. "I want you. You're the erratic genius we're looking for, the connoisseur of diamonds and, no doubt, of tea. I don't care for your friend, Greason, here. He's no taster—just a gambler, your stall, your foil. He puts sugar in his tea!"

The rain of bullets just followed the boat, circled, fell directly ahead. The man in the boat shut off his engine.

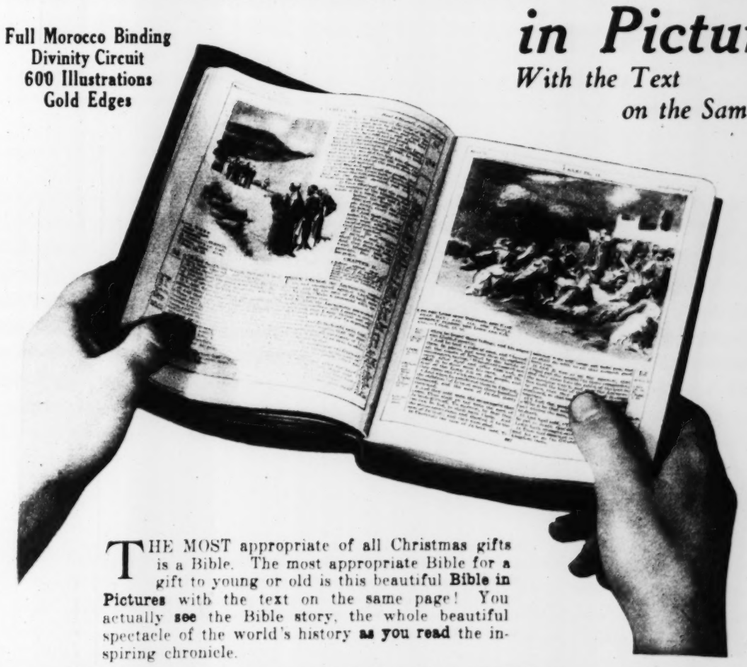
This Christmas Give the Bible in Pictures
With the Text on the Same Page

Full Morocco Binding
Divinity Circuit
600 Illustrations
Gold Edges



THE MOST appropriate of all Christmas gifts is a Bible. The most appropriate Bible for a gift to young or old is this beautiful Bible in Pictures with the text on the same page! You actually see the Bible story, the whole beautiful spectacle of the world's history as you read the inspiring chronicle.

The Illuminated Holy Bible—The Bible that All but Speaks

FROM clergymen all over the country have come letters of unstinted praise of this Bible which all but speaks. Never before have Bible Lands and people been so accurately and clearly portrayed. Never before has the true and original spirit of Christmas been so well illustrated on the same page with the story of the first Christmas.

But the Nativity of the Saviour is only one incident in the glorious Book of Books!

In this most fascinating of Bibles, King James Version, the whole inspiring story is told in the universal language of pictures. Never before has a Bible been published with such a profusion of faithful and artistic illustrations.

Under the guidance of noted theologians and archeologists, scores of the most prominent and capable artists of America and Europe have painted nearly six hundred illustrations which show you how the people dressed and how they lived. You actually see the streets and gardens they trod. Many of the illustrations are those magnificent, full color paintings of the famous Tissot Picture Society.

The strong, durable binding is genuine grained Morocco leather. The gold stamping, gold-edged paper and overlapping edges add richness to your tabletop. The clear, bold-faced type was chosen for its legibility. The paper is fine Bible stock particularly strong and opaque.

The Seafaring Card Family Goes to Its Death in a Storm

Cap'n and Mrs. James H. Card.

The schooner, Nelson Y. MacFarland, last home of the Card family.

Old Cap'n Card and His Wife Sailed the Ocean for 40 Years. In a Storm They Were Lost With Their Son and the Boy They Had Adopted.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

PORTLAND, Maine.

WHEN the two-masted schooner Nelson Y. MacFarland went down on the ledges of North Head in the Bay of Fundy, the graveyard of many a mariner, in the hurricane which swept the New England and Nova Scotia shores in late October, it carried with it into oblivion one of the most picturesque little families on the North Atlantic coast.

Together on the fatal voyage sailed Cap'n James H. Card, who had been on ships ever since he could remember, "Mrs. Cap'n" Card, who had shipped with her husband in some 40 years of coasting trade; Captain Lee Card, their son, navigator and actual captain of the Nelson Y. MacFarland, and Charles Smith, adopted into the bosom of the family 30 years ago.

"Mrs. Cap'n" Card at the wheel.

The real story of their futile battle in the storm probably never will be told. Wreckage bearing the name of the Nelson Y. MacFarland first brought news of the tragedy to mariners along the Grand Manan coast. Later a body or two was washed up, more evidence to the fate of a seafaring family.

From the time "Mrs. Cap'n" Card married her husband, she never left the decks of the eight different wind-jammers which he owned and sailed. The Captain himself followed the sea all his life, and for 17 years "Mrs. Cap'n" served as his mate. She was serving in the same capacity under her son's captaincy on the little family's last trip to sea.

Cap'n Card bought the Nelson Y. MacFarland five years ago. She was built in Sussex, Mass., for a fisher-man and as such she saw 30 years of service. Cap'n Card rebuilt her for the lumber business and put her in service along the Maine and Nova Scotia coasts, his home waters.

Cap'n and "Mrs. Cap'n" Card owned the schooner Hattie McKay before they bought the Nelson Y. MacFarland. It was on the Hattie McKay that "Mrs. Cap'n" served 17 years under her husband as mate. With the purchase of the Nelson Y. MacFarland the Cap'n turned the actual commanding of the craft over to his son, Lee, who by that time was an accomplished mariner. Before the Hattie McKay, the Cards owned the Price Brothers, the Lord Mayo, the Gypsy Lass, the Mary Grace and one or two other craft well known in their day the length of the North Atlantic coast.

The Cap'n knew the waters of Maine and Nova Scotia, the coast and the rivers, like a book. A pilot he never hired. He had learned to know where and when to sail by 73 years battling with the sea. Despite his age, he was as hale and hearty as a boy of 18, and delighted to take the wheel and hold the schooner true.

"Mrs. Cap'n" was as worthy a seaman as her husband. She, too, knew the inlets, harbors, river channels and ledges along the Maine and Nova Scotia coasts and she was a natural born helmsman. She stood her watches at the wheel and boasted the reputation of being able to smell an onshore wind a day ahead with the best of salts.

She was about as good a sailor as any of them, and as brave a one. Calm and storm were alike to her. She took her post regardless of rain and wind; a swollen sea or a cold, black night did not scare her or confuse her. The "Mrs. Cap'n" Card was not merely a title derived from that of her husband's. It was also a title of seamanship and first class sailorman ability.

A good business woman, it was largely due to her efforts that Nelson Y. MacFarland was put on a paying basis. "Mrs. Cap'n" kept the books, bought the supplies, cooked the food. She never would take canned foods on her vessel and was noted for the pies she made at sea and cooled off for dinner on the rail of the old schooner. And all the mate, steward, cook, bookkeeper, at the age of 67 years. A hardy those who follow the sea.

And together "Cap'n and "Cap'n" had battled the long years side by side on the decks of windjammers, until at the end long life crammed with work and venture they encountered death on ledges of North Head, still side by side, fighting for the common when the icy water claimed them its own.

ZI-O-DINE DENTAL CREAM

From FRESH FRUIT alone comes this fragrance .. this flavor!

"That wonderful fragrance of fresh fruit as I opened the package"

"The delicious, cooling and refreshing flavor of the fresh fruit."

"I never liked prepared gelatin, the flavor was so artificial, but after trying Royal Fruit Flavored Gelatin I am convinced that here is a gelatin with the exact fruit flavor." "My family cry 'Royal or none!'"

SO they write, these enthusiastic women all over the country, who have found what they have long been waiting for—"a gelatin with the real fruit taste."

No synthetics or artificial flavorings are used. You can trust its purity and merit as you have always trusted Royal Baking Powder. There is no trace of "gluey" smell or flavor. (Pure gelatin has neither!) No flavor of anything but the fresh fruit!

Ask for it by name at your grocer's. Royal Fruit Flavored Gelatin. The red package, the same color as the Baking Powder can. You'll delight in its fresh fruit flavor.

FIVE FLAVORS

Strawberry, Raspberry, Cherry—with delicious flavor from the fruit juices. Orange and Lemon with delicious flavor from Oil of Orange and Oil of Lemon

ROYAL COCOANUT CREAM. Make a soft custard by adding ¼ cup sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt to one egg yolk and mixing in 2 cups milk. Cook in top of double boiler, stirring until mixture thickens. Then set aside to cool. Dissolve one package Royal Lemon Gelatin in 1 cup boiling water. Cool and set in pan of ice or very cold water. When it begins to thicken, beat in the custard mixture, 1 cup grated cocoanut and beaten white of egg. Pour into small moulds and chill. Serve plain or with whipped cream. Serves 8.

DANDRUFF?

Now you can control it!

YOU need worry no more about dandruff, that unsightly nuisance, so embarrassing to both women and men.

As you probably know, dandruff is a germ disease that no intelligent, fastidious person can afford to neglect. Because so often it is a warning of more serious scalp trouble—possibly baldness.

There is one ideal treatment to control dandruff conditions—the systematic use of Listerine, the safe antiseptic. It really works wonders this way.

The use of Listerine for dandruff is not complicated. You simply douse it on your scalp, full strength, and massage thoroughly. You'll enjoy the cleansing refreshing effect. And you will be amazed to see how this treatment, followed systematically, does the trick.

Moreover, Listerine will not discolor the hair nor will it stain fabrics. And it is not greasy.

Try Listerine for dandruff. You'll be delighted with the results.—Lambert Pharmacal Co., St. Louis, U. S. A.

Romping children like the looks and comfort of these shoes—mothers welcome the long wear they give and the money they save

BUYING shoes for modern boys and girls is a many-sided task: Juvenile whims to be satisfied. Growing feet to be thought about. Sensible dress-up to be considered. And the family shoe budget to be kept within reasonable limits.

Haven't you often hoped that some day you might be able to buy children's shoes really made with all these things in mind? . . . Shoes in which good looks, correct design, long wear and money-saving price are combined. Try Endicott-Johnson shoes. Then watch your shoe bills come down.

Endicott-Johnson specialize in children's shoes. We make more than fifteen million pairs a year—one pair out of every seven worn by American boys and girls.

They're tested shoes—based on intimate study of what happens to shoes on the feet of active youngsters. They're made from specially tanned leather; and put together with particular thought of what they're going to be up against.

And with good wear you also get fine style, comfortable lasts (designed for growing feet), beautiful finishes—shoes you'll be proud to have your children wear.

See the splendid new styles—for men and women as well as for boys and girls. Leading stores everywhere sell Endicott-Johnson shoes. If you don't know of one nearby, ask us.

Boys' and girls' shoes, $3, $4, $5. Smaller sizes proportionately less. The Endicott-Johnson trade-mark is on the sole. Write for free booklet, "The World at Play," for boys, girls and grown-ups. Singing REM's praises with banjo accompaniment

There was a "chorus" of coughing not long ago in the Zimmerman household at 5407 Willows Ave., Philadelphia. Edith and several of the other children had caught colds, and coughs were following in the usual manner.

But not for long. Mrs. Zimmerman had seen an ad like this in the paper and soon a bottle of REM was on its way from the drug store. What happened then is no secret:

"REM's certainly a wonderful cough medicine" says Mrs. Zimmerman. "We've all used it and I've recommended it no end of times.

"I first saw about it in the paper and I got a bottle when the children had coughs. I got it at the drug store at the corner. It proved so effective that one evening I got my husband to try it too when he had a cough that was keeping him coughing and coughing. Just one teaspoonful relieved him a lot and quieted his cough so that it didn't bother him any more."

Few of us here escape the usual bad-weather coughs. But though we can't avoid them, we can often relieve them. A bottle of REM has quieted many a cough.

A special ingredient in REM---effective, harmless---is not found in ordinary cough syrups. Clinging to your throat as it is swallowed, REM spreads a soothing, healing film over the inflamed and irritated membranes. No Opiates in REM. And it is pleasant to take.

Ask your druggist for REM--the dark blue package with the large orange circle. And you can have your money back if you want it --- but you won't!

Present Day Conquerors

By a surprisingly simple method thousands today conquer their ills — win Health and Happiness

NOT a "cure-all," not a medicine — Fleischmann's Yeast is simply a remarkable fresh food.

The millions of tiny active yeast plants in every cake invigorate the whole system. They aid digestion—clear the skin—banish the poisons of constipation. Where cathartics give only temporary relief, yeast strengthens the intestinal muscles and makes them healthy and active, daily releasing new stores of energy.

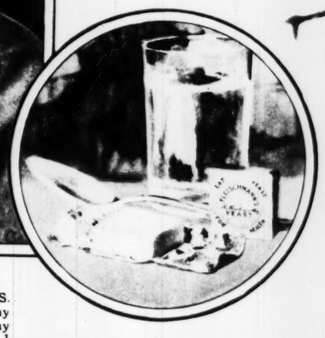
Eat two or three cakes regularly every day, one before each meal: on crackers, in fruit juices, water or milk—or just plain, in small pieces. For constipation dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) before meals and at bedtime. Dangerous habit-forming cathartics will gradually become unnecessary. All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Buy several cakes at a time—they will keep fresh in a cool dry place for two or three days.

And let us send you a free copy of our latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Health Research Dept. N-922, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington St., New York.

"CONSTIPATION FORCED ME TO TAKE PURGATIVES OFTEN. The intervals gradually lessened until I was taking a purgative daily. I was in a very serious condition. Gas formed in my stomach in such quantities that it became both distressing and dangerous. I was impressed on reading an article about Yeast and began to eat Yeast freely. I quickly obtained relief from gas. After about three months I cut down my dose and in less than one year I quit medicine entirely. I now eat two cakes of Yeast a day and keep well."
J. E. Wright, Dallas, Texas

"BECAUSE MY LIFE IS A BUSY ONE including club organization and welfare work, I have found it extremely difficult always to feel my best—to answer effectively all the calls made upon me. For a year and a half now, I have taken daily Fleischmann's Yeast dissolved in milk. As a result my system functions normally, a state rare for busy American women. I have added energy and zest in living and am definitely more useful to society."
Mrs. Edward Castle, Denver, Colo.

"MY FACE BROKE OUT WITH PIMPLES. They got so bad I was ashamed to go out the way the other fellows did. One day one of my friends told me to take Fleischmann's Yeast. I started in eating from two to three cakes a day. In a short time my skin began to improve and soon my face was clear."
James W. Kelly, San Pedro, Calif.



THIS FAMOUS FOOD tones up the entire system—aids digestion, clears the skin, banishes constipation.

"FROM CHILDHOOD I HAVE SUFFERED FROM STOMACH TROUBLE. I began to think my case was hopeless. At last I decided to give Fleischmann's Yeast a trial. My appetite began to improve and now I can eat any kind of food. I can say positively that Fleischmann's Yeast has banished my stomach trouble."
Bertha Gordon, Staten Island, N. Y.

Glistening White Teeth

Are Teeth Kept Free of Film—Every Day in this Way

—Free of the dangerous film on teeth to which science ascribes many tooth and gum disorders. What numbers of authorities suggest doing for it

ANOTHER WOMAN CHAMPION is Miss Dorothy Dawes. You'll note this picture also shows a winning smile—the kind that accompanies the use of Pepsodent.

Send Coupon for 10-Day Tube

THAT many of the commoner tooth and gum troubles, and most cases of so-called "off-color" teeth, are due to a film that forms on teeth which ordinary brushing does not successfully combat, is the consensus of today's dental opinion.

Run your tongue across your teeth and you will feel this film—a slippery sort of coating. Film absorbs discolorations and thus makes teeth look dull and dingy. It breeds germs and bacteria and invites tartar, decay and pyorrhea. It is a menace to tooth and gum health that must be combated.

Thus dental authorities now seriously urge that film be removed at least twice every day—in the morning and at bedtime. To do so, obtain Pepsodent—a special, film-removing dentifrice most dentists favor. It curdles the film, then removes it and polishes the teeth to high lustre in gentle safety to enamel. It combats the acids of decay. It acts, too, to firm and harden the gums; thus meeting, in many ways, the requirements of modern findings.

Old-time dentifrices did not adequately fight film. That is why this modern protective way, as a twice a day habit, and at least twice a year calls on your dentist, are being so widely advised today.

Accept this test

Send the coupon for a 10-day tube. Brush teeth this way for 10 days. Note how thoroughly film is removed. The teeth gradually lighten as film coats go. Then for 10 nights massage Pepsodent into the gums to firm and harden them.

SMILES ARE DAZZLING WHITE when film is gone. Teeth sparkle like polished jewels. Gums firm to healthy coral tint. Thus this new scientific way of dental care becomes one of the greatest beauty treatments of the day, and, with its unique therapeutic and prophylactic qualities, a great aid in oral hygiene.

IN SMILES LIES POPULARITY, so Miss Billy Bostick and Mr. T. E. Weber have discovered. Millions who know the power of smiles are turning to this new dental way of keeping teeth radiantly bright.

"A PERFECT BALANCE," showing strength of concrete lamp standard. A perfect solid granite rock reproduction in concrete, made by the "hollow-spun process" in the St. Louis plant of the Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co.

EARTH DRILL operated by a gasoline engine to dig holes for setting concrete lamp standards. Digs hole in three minutes.

CABLE PLOW in action as adapted by A. M. Ryckoff for installing electric street lighting cables in sidewalks and parkways. Vertical plow blade slices through the earth closing its opening behind it. Electric light cable attached at bottom of plow is "threaded" through the earth. Open trenches eliminated wherever conditions permit the equipment to be used. Actual test speed of 240 feet of cable installed in six minutes.

ELECTRIC STREET LIGHTS FOR OUR CITY

"LET THERE BE LIGHT" was the big thought when the Board of Public Service last December awarded the first contract of its electric street lighting program to A. M. Ryckoff to install approximately 9367 electric lights on concrete standards from Arsenal street, on the south, to Angelica street and West Florissant avenue, on the north, Grand avenue, on the west, and the river, on the east, omitting the downtown area bounded by Chouteau avenue, Jefferson avenue, Cass avenue and the river.

Acting upon orders from Mayor Victor J. Miller to expedite the work, and under the direct supervision of J. C. Pritchard, Director of Public Utilities, and George B. Heath, Superintendent of Electrical Construction and Maintenance, Ryckoff, with lightning rapidity, began to make things "hum." A corps of engineers and construction men under the direction of J. C. Hail, General Manager for A. M. Ryckoff, were immediately "on the job" to construct in record time one of the greatest outstanding installations of electric street lighting in this country on a magnitude not attempted heretofore.

As early as February, car loads of material, machinery and equipment "rolled in" to the construction yards at 2nd and Trudeau sts. for "the big job," requiring in part:

9367 concrete lamp standards,
40 carloads of electric light cable,
10 carloads of electrical apparatus,
9 carloads of glassware,
4 carloads of conduit,
127 manhole frames and castings,
36,000 bags of cement,
7200 tons of crushed stone,
10,800 tons of sand,
2,900,000 sidewalk paving brick.

Machinery comprising trench diggers, cable plows, concrete mixers, caterpillar tractors, Fordson tractors, derricks, hoists, air compressors and a fleet of 30 trucks were put through the "limbering up" process and on the clear day of Tuesday, March 23rd, the work was begun at Broadway and Ann av., on the main conduit line construction. By July 1st conduit lines and manholes for primary cables had been installed on 8 miles of city streets and 150,000 duct feet of conduit provided for primary cables.

In April the work of installing steel taped parkway cable for the branch lighting circuits in sidewalks and parkways was begun. A fleet of a dozen air compressors operating 30 paving breakers, "blazed the trail" for the "big cat" (5-ton caterpillar tractor) pulling the cable plow. Without relaxation and with ever increasing speed, cable was installed at a terrific rate, reaching the figure of 25,000 feet per day. By October 1st all cable was installed reaching the figure of 515 miles. Under street pavements the earth was bored without disturbing the street surface.

A perfect concrete lamp standard has been manufactured for St. Louis, using the "hollowspun process" to produce a monolithic perfect granite rock lamp post. 100 posts were installed per day. Ryckoff induced the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. to invest in a new model post plant at Olivia and Bingham sts. This first unit, costing $500,000, is now running full blast and in all probability more Westinghouse plants will locate in St. Louis.

Other details, each one a huge undertaking, such as the repairing of concrete sidewalks, brick sidewalks, requiring almost 3,000,000 brick, paving of streets, installation of glassware, and the installation of electrical apparatus in three substations will all be completed before the year is over and the electric lights will be burning to proclaim St. Louis as a "MIRACLE CITY," for a modern miracle has been performed to produce an electric street lighting system of such magnitude in about eight months of actual construction work.

A. M. RYCKOFF, Contractor

J. C. HAIL, General Manager for A. M. Ryckoff

NEW "AUTOMATIC" ELECTRIC SUBSTATION at 1309 Ann av., for controlling 3923 new electric lights in the section bounded by Arsenal st., Compton av., Chouteau av and the river. No attendant is required. INVITES YOU TO THE WORLD'S MOST POPULAR SMOKE

In popularity with smokers, no other cigarette is within a thousand miles of Camel. Camels have been rewarded with the greatest favor any cigarette ever enjoyed. In all the history of smoking, there was never such a growing preference as for this cigarette.

There is but one reason for the increasing fame of Camels—tobacco goodness.

From the beginning, Camel has made its way by quality. The choicest Turkish and Domestic tobaccos and endless care for perfection are the meaning of Camels, and Camel quality. As new millions try them all, as they become experienced smokers, they come home to Camels.

Camel mildness and mellowness are made for your taste. . . . They will bring you the utmost smoking pleasure. Try them now. For a smoke that never tires the taste, literally never leaves a cigaretty after-taste—"Have a Camel!"

STORY OF BLUEFISH BASIS OF ALIBI OF HENRY STEVENS IN HALL-MILLS TRIAL

Defendant Weighed Six-Pounder for Neighbor at Lavellette Night of Murder, Witnesses Say.

PROSECUTION CASTS DOUBT ON THE DATE

Mrs. Evanson, Stevens' Cook, Denies Evading State's Detectives—Went Away as She Was Ill.

By the Associated Press.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Nov. 22.—A six-pound bluefish caught by Arthur Applegate of Lavalette, N. J., the night of Thursday, Sept. 14, 1922, the night of the Hall-Mills murder, is important in establishing the alibi offered Saturday by Henry Stevens.

Henry and Willie Stevens and their sister, Mrs. Francis Stevens Hall, are on trial charged with killing Mrs. Eleanor Mills, who was slain four years ago with the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall at New Brunswick, N. J.

Henry Stevens testified in his own defense that he weighed a six-pound bluefish caught by Arthur Applegate on Sept. 14, 1922. Neighbors from Lavalette today testified that Stevens was on the beach that night, three placing him there at 10 p. m. or after. The killing is alleged to have taken place at about 10:20 o'clock, 50 miles from Lavalette.

Mrs. Anna Evanson, cook for the Henry Stevens family at the time of the murder, was the first witness today.

Cook Confirms Alibi.

"Do you remember whether Mrs. Stevens was at home Sept. 14, 1922?" asked Clarence E. Case of defense counsel. "No, she was not."

"Do you remember whether you got supper for Henry Stevens that night?" "Yes."

"Do you remember whether he was there?" "Yes, he was there."

Supper was served about 6 p. m., she said, and she went home about 8. This corroborates Henry Stevens' account.

Mrs. Evanson could not remember whether she was at the Stevens home the night before the murder.

"Have you been home all the time since early August of this year?" Senator Simpson asked on cross-examination.

"I was away for two weeks in the first part of October," she said, "with some friends of mine at Beach Haven."

"What is their name?" "The Johnsons."

A few days ago Simpson announced in court that Mrs. Evanson was missing, and his line of cross-examination was apparently in the direction of attempting to prove that the defense had hidden witnesses from his investigators.

Denies She Was Hiding.

"Isn't it a fact that you have been in hiding ever since this last inquiry began?" demanded Simpson. "No."

"Isn't it a fact that detectives and police have been searching for you and were unable to find you." "No."

"Was Mr. Stevens at home on Friday of the week after the killings?" "Yes."

"Was he home on Thursday?" "Yes."

"And on Wednesday?" continued Simpson in an easy fashion, apparently laying a trap for the witness. "No," she replied. "He came from New York on Thursday."

"What time did you go to the house on the day after the killing?" "About 9 o'clock."

Checking Cook's Day.

"What were you doing there so early if you prepared only lunch and dinner?" "I washed the dishes."

"Did it take you three hours to wash three dishes and a tea cup and spoon?" "I washed his clothes," the witness replied, endeavoring to tell that Stevens had been drenched by the surf that morning.

"Didn't he take clothes to the laundry that day?" asked Simpson. "Yes," she replied, and again was interrupted as she was saying "not that kind of laundry."

The cook related that Henry Stevens had taken the Wilson family to Point Pleasant shortly after noon and said she saw them starting out.

Reverting to the question of whether Mrs. Evanson had talked to anyone about the date, Sept. 14, Simpson obtained from the witness
